OBITUARY—JOHN M. LASBY.
John M. Lasby was born February 11, 1851, at Acton, Ontario, Canada. The early years of his life were spent in or near the place of his birth. In 1874 he was married to Mary Elizabeth Giddis, and for twenty years they resided at Bomanville and Ridgetown, Ontario. In 1894 the family moved to Lowell, where he has since resided. His wife preceded him in death two years ago.

He is survived by two daughters, Mrs. W. E. Marsh and Mrs. H. L. Shuter, one son, Allen G. Lasby, of McCords, Mich., and three sisters, Mrs. Charlotte Nicklin, of Grand Rapids, Mrs. Louise Hansen, of Toronto, and Mrs. Susan Flanagan, of Gore Bay, Ontario.

Mr. Lasby's death occurred at Blodgett hospital, Grand Rapids, Wednesday morning, Jan. 23, 1929, terminating a sickness of six weeks. In his death this community loses a strong and upright citizen, whose long life of seventy-eight years has been spent in useful labors in shop and store and church, and whose numerous friends cannot but regret the passing from their sight of this friendly and lovable man. The funeral service was held at the Shuter home on East Main street last Sunday afternoon, and was largely attended. His burial place is beside his wife in Oakwood cemetery.

Rev. A. T. Cartland, pastor of the Methodist church, and a neighbor of Mr. Lasby, conducted the services.

B. OF T. ANNUAL BANQUET A BRILLIANT SUCCESS

HON. DENNIS E. ALWARD OF THE MICHIGAN SENATE SPOKE ON PUBLIC SERVICE

Dr. Clarence Cook Little of the University of Michigan in Address on Education and the State Royally Received

The twenty-third annual banquet at the City hall Tuesday evening will be remembered as one of the most profitable and pleasurable in the history of the Lowell Board of Trade.

DR. CLARENCE COOK LITTLE.

About 7:30 all sat down to a splendid banquet served by the ladies of the Lowell Methodist church. Menu and program as published in The Ledger last week.

After community singing led by Mr. Gumsier, Retiring President Harry Day gave a brief address of welcome to the guests and introduced the President-elect, C. H. Runciman, who spoke briefly and said he would have introduced the toastmaster but had not been informed who was to act in that capacity. However, Mr. Gumsier and Vern Ashley both claimed the honor, each saying that he had been requested to act as toastmaster. For a time it looked as if the occasion would have two toastmasters or none at all, as each assumed a threatening attitude and approached each other belligerently, it looked for a while as if a free fight were in prospect, as each told the other to sit down and shut up. Finally the dispute was settled by the flip of a coin and the superintendent of the school kept the chair.

It was a masterly bit of acting and some could hardly believe that the row was a plot between the two conspirators. Ashley being asked by Gumsier what kind of a bird would build a nest in President Runciman's hair replied that it would have to be a woodpecker.

Dennis E. Alward, of the Michigan State Senate gave an address on "Public Service," in which he pleaded for confidence in the good intentions of men and women in public life, stating that the great majority of them are good and capable of doing the tasks for which they are chosen to the best of their ability and asked that criticism be constructive rather than destructive. He complimented Representative Look, of Lowell, and Senator Skinner, of Cedar Springs and said that our legislators were picked men and that the result of their deliberations would be the will of the people. He closed with a touching story of President McKinley. Trouble with Spain over the Cuban conflict was imminent and the public was clamoring for war. McKinley knew what war was, and was trying to save the country from it. He called Senator McMillan, of Michigan and asked him to secure delay of action in the Senate until preparations for war could be made, which was done. Then came the blowing-up of the Maine and the people would not be denied and in three months the war was fought and won. Then the speaker told of a reception given by the President, attended by a group of Michigan people, among many others, with whom were Mr. Alward and his little daughter, Hazel. The President talked with the Michigan group for some time and started to leave the apartment, when he returned and presented the little girl with a carnation he had worn. Six months later came the news that the great-hearted president had been shot. Little Hazel, informed of the calamity, brought out the President's flower, which she had pressed and preserved and her father found the child crying over it as if her heart would break.

The toastmaster introduced President Little, of the University of Michigan, as the next speaker, said he was interested in living things, not in dead ones and referred to the Pioneers as a sturdy race who prepared the country for those who were to come after them. Dr. Little is a pioneer of new thought in education.

The entire assembly arose and applauded Dr. Little as he was about to begin his address. The latter followed the lead of Mr. Alward in defense of the Michigan Legislature and denied the existence there of antagonism to the University and referred feelingly to the human element in President McKinley who could stop in war time amid the cares of state to cultivate the friendship of a little child. The speaker praised the University of Michigan as a great institution with a world-wide reputation, to fully appreciate which, inside as well as outside contact is needed.

Speaking of the crush of High school students applying for admission, the state cannot afford to accept them all regardless of preparation, capability or character. It is not fair, he said, to set a high standard in athletics and not in higher things as well. High school superintendents and principals are more frank than formerly in telling whether students are capable and worthy the expenditure of state monies.

He cited the case of a Polish girl applying for admittance to the University, who would have been rejected on the face of her High school record, which showed her deficient in English and to have been three years out of school, before applying to the U. of M. Investigation showed her to have been doing brilliant work as a reporter on a great Mid-Western daily and supporting a family. She was admitted and made good.

The average freshman, he said, does not know when he enters college, what he wants to do when he finishes. If he elects an engineering course and finds later that he has made a mistake, the average professor—if he is profane—will tell him where he can go. Such a boy needs a chance to make another choice without being inhumanly treated.

Likening the differences between the Fundamentalists and Liberalists in religion to similar elements in education, Dr. Little spoke of the Fundamentalists as a group of leaders who assumed to have all and the final truth and the right to authoritative decision in such matters, while Liberalism sees revelation as continuous and that no one has all the truth. All are partners in the game of life, a game that is bigger than any one of us.

The college students of today are better than those of former times. Liberalism is claiming many and denominationalism is losing some of its former hold. It is no cause for discouragement. Great changes have taken place in fifty years. America, itself is changing, and the tendency is toward greater liberalism. The people are helping to solve these problems.

The University of Michigan will not sign over its rights; bow the knee to outside influences. Compromises can be made in minor matters but not in matters of principle.

Year 1928 Sees 380 Go 'Over the Hill'

Indigent old age and sickness as the chief contributing factors made demand on the Kent county infirmary in 1928, the home having had a total of 380 residents. Of this number old age accounted for 208 and sickness, physical infirmity and serious accident for 132. Liquor sent "over the hill," 12 had insufficient mental equipment to cope with life. Inability to find a job added 16 to the roster. The average number of residents was 177.

One child was born in the county home during the year and 43 persons, 31 men and 12 women, died. Of these 11 filled pauper's graves, the others being buried by relatives.

Male inmates outnumbered women inmates 297 to 83, indicating, perhaps, it is easier to care for a grandmother around the house than a grandfather.

City Sends Most.

Of the 297 men, the city accounted for 213 and the townships for 47, and 37 were charged against the county at large. Of the women inmates 16 were charged against the county, 55 against the city and 12 against the townships. Seventeen of the indigents were passed along to state institutions.

The cost for the fiscal year of maintaining the institution was $26,347.77, of which the city was chargeable for $17,676.19, the county, $4,065.78 and the townships, $4,605.80. Reimbursements accounted to $1,497.47.

Total valuation and inventory of the institution reaches $169,508 of which $141,700 is in farm lands and buildings.

Keeper and matron of the home are Mr. and Mrs. Charles Godfrey. The county superintendent of the poor are Ashley Ward, Isaac Appel and William J. Thomas.—(Grand Rapids Press.)

Runciman, Wachterhouser and Arehart enjoyed their annual banquet at the home of Mrs. Arehart while their husbands were banqueting at the City hall at the Board of Trade meeting. Failure to pay his subscription to the home town newspaper was one of the several acts of cruelty charged against a resident of Mason by his wife, seeking a divorce. Failure to provide the local newspaper for the home should constitute an act of cruelty. Just imagine any woman keeping a place in the social world ignorant of what her neighbors are doing? Every woman is entitled during these suffrage days, to life, liberty, and the free and untrammelled pursuit of the doings of those to the manor born. It is only a few years old thing who would deny for this means of satisfying her natural curiosity.—(Ionia County News.
