men have called at The Ledger office and asked for old newspapers. They are hoboes and what they want of the old newspapers is explained along with some other things in the following paragraph from the Cassopolis Vigilante:

"A tramp called on the editor Saturday afternoon and asked us for a few old newspapers. Upon being asked if he wanted them to read or to sleep on, he said 'both,' and that was probably true, for a lot of these wanderers call at the newspaper offices for copies of exchanges and keep well posted on current events. We engaged this one in conversation because we judged him to be a professional, and he frankly admitted that he had been 'on the road' for a great many years and in a number of countries. We like to draw these fellows out and get their slant on life, and finally we asked him a question which we have asked of a great many professional tramps. The question was: 'What about your old age? What are you looking forward to?' A few years ago they were looking forward to spending their last years in some county inirmary, and they could tell you where the good ones were located, but this man had a new and brighter outlook. He told us about the pending legislation in various states looking toward old age pensions, and when some state adopts an old age pension law that suits him that state is going to become his permanent residence."

Unselved Riddles That Still Puzzle Authorities Here and Abroad The $360,000 Necklace DID Marie Antoinette, queen of France, cajole Cardinal de Rohan to such an extent that she Rohan to such an extent that she was able to rob him of the famous diamond necklace which formed one of the causes leading up to the French revolution? If not, who was responsible for the scandal which broke with terrific violence over the French court and, finally, what became of the money received for the necklace itself?

These are questions which have excited the curiosity and speculation of hundreds of historians and novelists but which, despite the most rigid investigations, remain most rigid investigations, remain still unanswered, inextricably en-twined with the sordid but spectac-ular story of Louis XV, Madame Du Barry, De Rohan, Madame Lamotte, and Marie Antoinette her-self.

In 1774 Louis XV was infatuated with Madame Du Barry and, as an evidence of his affection, commissioned the court jewelers to collect the finest diamonds they could lay their hands on and fashion a necklace that would be absolutely unique. The jewelers exercised so much care in the selection of these stones that, before the necklace was completed, the king died. The work was so far advanced, however, that the gorgeous place was ever, that the gorgeous piece was finished at a cost of some $360,000—equivalent at the present time to practically $1,000,000—in the hope hat it could be sold to Louis XVI that it could be sold to Louis XVI for his queen.

Then suddenly Jeanne de Valoise (Madame Lamotte) came upon the scene and hoodwinked Cardinal de Rohan—arch-enemy to the queen—into believing that she was Marie Antoinette's most intimate friend. Lamotte even signed spurious notes with the queen's name and worked upon the ambition of the cardinal until De Rohan believed that she had succeeded in overcoming Marie Antoinette's hostility toward him.

Finally Lamotte risked a note to the cardinal—a communication the cardinal—a communication which was supposed to have come directly from the queen of France—commissioning him to borrow 60,000 france for a certain charity and the communication which was a communication which was supposed to have come directly a communication which was supposed to have come directly from the queen of France. table purpose, the money to be transmitted to the queen through Madame Lamotte. The cardinal borrowed the money and turned it over to the intermediary. A second loan of an equal amount was also obtained and with the money the obtained and with the money the Lamottes furnished one of the most magnificent houses in the capital and financed themselves for a round of censeless galeties. The success which had attended this scheme evidently led Jeanne Lamotte to believe that she could and white accessories for the early Asiatic dioceses held with the Jewput through one of the most daring frauds in history—the theft of

De Rohan hastened to fulfill the mission and, on February 1, 1785, the necklace passed into his hands and his note was accepted by the jewelers for the entire purchase price
—it being understood (thanks to Lamotte's intrigues) that the transfer was being made with the full opproval of the queen. The necklace was to be delivered to Marie Antoinette by the cardi-nal on the eve of a grand fete at which the queen was expected to wear it, and the casket containing the jewels was taken to the home of the Lamottes, by whom it was to be handed to the queen's messen-ger. Still further to dupe the carger. Still further to dupe the car-dinal, Jeanne Lamotte employed an actress to impersonate Marie An-toinette and, because of the heavy vell which the substitute wore, D tohan believed that he had actualy had an interview with the queen Lamotte then dispatched her hus band to London with the necklace, where it was broken up and the stones sold separately. Unfortunately for the plans of the adventuress, however, the trick was discovered when the jewelers wrote to the queen, thanking her for pur-chasing the diamonds. Marie An-toinette at once demanded an explanation of their statement and then asked for the original copy of the agreement. De Rohan was immediately arrested and sent to the Bastile, to be followed shortly afterward by Madame Lamotte and a ploited trimming.

But this by no means ended the case, because the actions of Marie Ancascable the actions of Marie Antoinette were so strange and her explanations so strained that many historians have expressed the belief that she herself was more or less interested in the matter and that she head profited directly by the sale of the stones. Regardless of this phase of the matter, however, the affair of the queen's necklace remains one of the most absorbing intrigues as well as one of the most mysterious romances of a court noted for its plots and counterplots.

GLAD SEASON Humorous Pictures OF RENEWAL DOG WAS OUT OF DATE

A season of rejoicing is here-Print or Lace Gowns Easter, with its spirit of renewal. Life that has been dormant through the winter months renews itself the snow and ice that have covered the earth disappear; brooks and rivers swell; the sap runs from the trees; the migratory birds return from the southland as the advancing sun warms the chilly surface of the earth. Time of Crucifixion.

The very first Christians set their Easter feast by the Jewish lunar calendar of 354 days and celebrated it upon week days or upon the Sabbath, as an annual observance. But about the year 190, in the time of Pope Victor, and when Septimus Severus was emperor of Rome, a controversy arose over the proper date for celebrating the feast, because the Gentile Christians in parts of the lowing apostolic tradition and the Roman calendar, were for an East-
