Wheat: U. S. Exports to Europe and Production in Europe

WHEN Europe produces more wheat for herself she buys less from the United States. That is the feature of the world wheat problem that this chart shows. For instance, in 1921, when many wheat ships were busy carrying the bread grain to Europe, that continent produced only 1,200,000,000 bushels. Since 1927, European countries have been producing more and more of their own wheat and the wheat traffic across the Atlantic has slowed up. In fact, efforts of European countries to supply their needs, and to buy wheat from other countries has just about cut off our wheat exports, as the lone boat for 1933 represented in the chart indicates. The United States doesn't want to withdraw from the export trade, but rather than have grain pile up in the United States or be sold at less than cost, the Agricultural Adjustment Administration has begun a wheat plan which will reduce acreage in the United States and bring production down to the point where it can all be marketed at a profit to the farmer.

Engemann, Jr., of Smyrna. Baskets of fall flowers were used in the chancel and at the side altars. On the main altar, tall cathedral candles burned, Fr. J. W. McNeil performed the ceremony. The double ring service was used. The bride was lovely in a gown of Royal blue chiffon velvet, made with the fitted silhouette and fullness at the hem. She wore accessories of eel grey and carried a bouquet of white roses and asters. Miss Lena Vandebroek, a sister of the bride, was maid of honor and wore a gown of chiffon velvet in a rich wine shade made along simple fitted lines and with puffed sleeves and the high neckline. Her accessories were of eel grey and she carried a bouquet of baby mums and asters in the fall shades. John P. Engemann, a brother of the groom, acted as best man, and the ushers were Dennis Kelly, of Grand Rapids and Royal Vandebroek, a brother of the bride. Following the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served to the immediate families at the Vandebroek home by the Misses Maxine Weeks, Louise Blaser, Mary McCarthy and Dorothy Kropf, of Lowell. ### Dehorning Dairy Cattle Is Urged

Specialist Cites Method of Operation on Animals When Young.
By H. A. Harman, Department of Dairy Husbandry, University of Missouri, WNU Service.
For the ordinary dairy herd the animals should be dehorned. The horns serve no useful purpose and are responsible for frequent injuries—often serious, and especially to the udder. Dehorned cattle may be housed in a much smaller space, and when they are fed and watered together in the ordinary manner there is a material saving in labor. Horns on a bull are extremely dangerous. The only case where it is advisable not to remove the horns early is that of animals which are likely to be used for show purposes. The best method of dehorning is to use caustic potash on the extremely young calf. This may be obtained in stick form at any drug store. To use this method successfully, the calf's horns should be treated with caustic potash as soon as the buttons appear, which will be from seven to fourteen days of age. The small buttons are the future horns and may be easily located by the fingers. The long hair is clipped away from the buttons with an ordinary pair of scissors or shears. A circle of grease should then be placed around the horn, making a considerable ridge above the eye so that none of the liquid containing caustic potash will get into the eye. The stick of caustic potash is then moistened a trifle and rubbed vigorously on the small horn until the flesh is considerably reddened and at the point of bleeding. It is not advisable to continue the application after bleeding starts. If sufficient caustic potash has been applied, a dent will be felt in the skull after a few days and no horns will ever develop. Care must be used to avoid getting too much water on the caustic potash, or it may run down the sides of the animal's head, taking off hair and even getting into the eyes, with serious results.

Worms Stunt Growth of Both Pigs and Lambs

The idea of raising pigs on clean ground—the so-called McLean system—is a good one. By following this system, one can practically be sure that his pigs will be free from worms at weaning time. The same is true of lambs. If one can grow lambs on ground that has not been grazed by sheep for several years worm infestation can be largely avoided. While we have advocated this system for hog, lamb and poultry raising for many years, comparatively few farmers follow it. Using clean ground in raising live stock not only prevents worm infestation, but it also avoids disease infection of many kinds. Keeping live stock quarters free from parasites and disease is ideal but difficult, and as a matter of fact, never is carried out except to a very minor degree. Worms are not difficult to get rid of if proper attention is given to the matter. Worms stunt growth and reduce the vitality of pigs and lambs, and thus render them more susceptible to disease. Young stock should be kept as free from worms as possible, and a good time to drive out the worms is at weaning time or as soon thereafter as possible.—Wallace Farmer.

Feed for Work Horses

Efficient work horses can be developed by feeding less grain than many farmers are inclined to use. At the Missouri experiment station it was found that one lot of colts which had a total of 4,238 pounds of grain and 5,723 pounds of hay each, up to the time they were three years old, made just as good work horses as those which had 7,638 pounds of grain and 4,664 pounds of hay. They did not grow quite as fast, and were slower in developing, but there was less difficulty in keeping the colts sound in feet and legs and as work horses they were just as satisfactory as the ones that had more grain.—Successful Farming.

Agricultural Siftings

There are 1,500,000 stationary gasoline engines on American farms. Vaccination against hog cholera is a cheap method of insuring the herd against loss. Properly distributed, Ohio would have enough rainfall to raise four corn crops a year. Proof of the longevity of asparagus beds is indicated in North Dakota where beds have been producing annually for 20 years. To utilize surplus sugar, Czechoslovakia is converting it mixed with bran and other ingredients into fodder for horses, cattle and pigs. Widespread interest is being shown by northern Colorado farmers in the production of cane as a supplementary crop for alfalfa. Many Larimer county farmers have grown cane and feed it to lambs to replace part of the alfalfa hay.

UNANSWERED CALL SAVES LIVES OF WHOLE FAMILY

A silent telephone saved the life of the mother of the Rev. John A. Harter, prominent Brooklyn, N. Y., clergyman, the other day. It is the custom of this clergyman to call his mother on the telephone daily, but on Mother's Day the call was not answered. Alarmed, he motored to her home, and receiving no reply to the bell, climbed in a window. Smelling gas, he rushed to the bedrooms, where he found his mother, his sister, and her husband, all unconscious. The family had had breakfast, and finding the house cold, had lit an oil stove and the gas ran, and then gone back to bed. With all windows closed, the fumes overcame them while they slept. The daughter and son-in-law were revived by an emergency squad, but the mother's condition necessitated her removal to a hospital. Job printing—Ledger office.
