THE HOLE IN YOUR POCKET

PRESS dispatches from Washington state that in the last twelve months $7,375,000,000 has been spent, which, with the $7,100,000,000 that was spent in the preceding year, makes a total peace time record spending of $14,475,000,000 for the past two years. Money has been spent twice as fast as it has been collected from the taxpayers. But all the spendings and all the borrowings must eventually be extracted from the taxpayers' pockets.

At the end of the new fiscal year, it is estimated the national debt will be approximately $35,000,000,000, or a per capita debt of $720 on every man, woman and child in the country.

These figures are so staggering in size that one cannot grasp them. But the individual tax bills of various kinds that will soon be coming due, can be readily understood by every taxpayer whose pockets will be emptied in order to pay them.

Someday the people will wake up to the fact that they pay the bill for all the "political presents" that are given to them.

GETTING RICH QUICK

THE FEDERAL Securities Exchange commission is obtaining information on the activities of "get-rich-quick" promoters. Some planning salesmen who attempt to work off securities that have no real value, may find themselves in trouble with the government.

The hope of acquiring sudden wealth dazzles the eyes and confuses the thought of innumerable people. They dream of becoming rich, instead of attending to their work. While they are cherishing these visions, thinking what they would do if fortune suddenly smiled on them, they are likely to neglect some chance of advancement that lies close at hand.

While they are thinking these dreamy thoughts, their employer may notice that their minds are far away from their work, and he will not like this lack of attention. He is likely to pass such ones by, and give the chances for promotion to those whose minds are on their work.

Wealth rarely comes suddenly, and does not often come by lucky strokes. It usually arrives, when it comes, as the result of long and patient effort. It is the result of thorough knowledge of some line of work or business, understanding of the markets and of human nature.

When someone is asked to buy something that is promised to give him a large amount of money in a short time, it is well to ask questions. How comes it that people have to make an effort to sell such a fine proposition? When these sudden chances for wealth appear, they are usually snapped up so quickly that it is not necessary to offer them to the public.

The promise of big returns usually means that serious risks have to be taken. "Slow and sure" was the motto by which this country was built up.

THE COUNTRY CORRESPONDENT

WHO IS the best country newspaper correspondent in the United States? The award just announced, goes to Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Mahoney of Oark, Missouri. She is the only newspaper correspondent in a village of 27 inhabitants, and she writes her news for the Weekly Republican of Forsythe, Missouri, which has a circulation of 875 among the farmers of the Ozark hills.

Mrs. Mahoney was selected out of 1581 rural correspondents nominated for a prize given by Wheeler McMillen, editor of The Country Home, a national farm magazine published in New York. As winner, she receives a silver trophy, $50 in cash, and a trip to New York city.

In speaking of the country correspondent, Mr. McMillen said: "The faithful work done by the so-called cross-roads correspondents has been a most important phase of American Journalism. Regarding the newsclipping which won the prize for Mrs. Mahoney, we count it the best of all submitted because it is simply and beautifully written, without straining for effect; it is friendly and objective; it doesn't slobber over as do so many reporters who attempt interpretative reporting. Mrs. Mahoney introduces her own comments here and there, but always sparingly and with balance."

"What we called for in the terms of the contest was: The work of born writers and understanding reporters who know news without having to be told from a desk, and who are possessed of a sense of values which detects the great in the small."

"Country correspondents are grand people, by and large. They have something to tell this frantic, hastening day and age. The country correspondent is the forgotten man of American letters. Novelists, poets, playwrights, historians, reporters for metropolitan newspapers—all these have prizes to which they may aspire. But the country correspondent has heretofore had no such opportunity for recognition. These prizes were offered in the belief that such recognition is more than merited. We do not expect to unearth any great author, although many great authors have come from the ranks of the country correspondent. But we do expect to call greater attention than ever before to the excellent writing that comes from the farms and small towns, and is published in the local columns of the country newspapers."

"It is a simple, honest sort of writing, reflecting the wholesome flavor of life in the country. Elsewhere in this issue The Ledger publishes a picture of Mrs. Mahoney, the prize-winner, and we re-publish one of Mrs. Mahoney's news letters as a model of the very highest type of country news paragraphs."

FORTY-THIRD YEAR

LOWELL, MICHIGAN, THURSDAY, JULY 25, 1935

NO. 10

New Company Given Official Approval

Lowell Metal Products Company Off To Good Start

Permission has been received from the Michigan Securities Commission by the Lowell Metal Products Co. to offer for sale the balance of their capital stock.

One-half of the amount to be sold has already been subscribed for by the officers and directors of the company. This leaves a limited amount yet to be sold and the company invites the people of Lowell to share in this new enterprise.

The entire issue is common capital stock with a par value of $10.00 per share. Each share carries with it complete voting power. The officers and directors invite you to call upon them for any information you may desire regarding the purchase of any part of the remaining shares.

Stock subscription blanks may be had and signed at the State Savings Bank.

Mr. John Arehart, general manager, is now devoting all his time to getting matters in shape. Tube-making machinery and other necessary equipment is being ordered from Eastern manufacturers and every step necessary is being taken in order to have the new plant in operation at a comparatively early date.

Mr. Frank Newell, the general sales manager, is working on his sales plan, getting out necessary catalogues, mailing lists, etc., so that the business will be a going concern from the day the plant opens.

The new concern is starting out well-organized. It has a background of full knowledge of the business and with connections which are bound to result in the establishment of a profitable and permanent concern. It is strictly a home-owned institution, managed and operated by men whose direct concern is in the welfare of the community. That the people here are behind the Lowell Metal Products Co. goes without saying.

Celebrates Her 90th Birthday

Delia M. Colby was born at Wheatland, New York, July 16, 1845. Her parents, Jared and Janet Miller, came to Michigan the following year. The journey from Wheatland, N. Y., as far as Battle Creek, Mich., was made partly by train and partly by stage coach; thence to a point about one mile west of the center of Bowne township. The part of the journey was made by ox-team. Although one of the first pioneers, a few others were here at that time, and Mr. Miller was able to secure temporary quarters at MacNaughton's, to whose place he had then far been able to reach in the manner described. His wife and two children, George and Delia, remained at MacNaughton's until he had been able to blaze a trail to the site of a tract of woods previously purchased. There he constructed a log house and reared his family, under considerable difficulties. Drinking water was hauled from a spring near the lake now known as Timpon lake, by means of the ox-team and a self made vehicle, the wheels of which were cut from the end of a log. There were deer, return to Bowne, as well as Indians, here in those days.

DELIA M. COLBY

Delia, his second eldest child, married in 1866, and with her husband, Isaac C. Colby, moved to Courtland Township about three miles from Rockford, and after an interval of about two years returned to Bowne, and settled on the spot which has ever since been her home.

A large number of her relatives, friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Ernest Colby, one of her nine children, seven of whom are living, in honor of her 90th birthday on July 16. After a program of songs and recitations rendered by different ones, a daily lunch was served. Finally upon wishing many more birthdays to Mrs. Colby, who, notwithstanding her advanced years, is still in excellent health, the guests departed feeling that Mrs. Colby was a very genial hostess.

The following are the names of the children living in the order of their age: Theo. Colby, Lane, Grand Rapids; George I. Colby, Ernest E. Colby, Alto; Ray M. Colby, Chicago; Earl V. Colby, Alto; Roland E. Colby, McCorde; Pearl Colby Yeiter, Alto. There are also fifteen grandchildren and fourteen great grandchildren.

More Picnic Tables For Use of Public

The Village Improvement Committee of the Lowell Board of Trade has been doing some worthwhile work this season that will be appreciated by both town people and tourists. The committee has had seven picnic tables made for the use of the public, which have been placed at the following points: three in Richards' Park, two at the tourist camp in Recreation Park, one at the "old swimming hole" opposite Chauncey Hardy's home, and one in the grove at the corner of South Washington and Main streets. A stove has also been placed in the tourist camp. Bruce McQueen, chairman of the committee, says that plans are underway to improve the swimming hole by constructing steps down the bank.

E. C. Foreman, proprietor of the Foreman Poultry Farm, is co-operating with the committee in the wild-life promotion effort. Mr. McQueen and Mr. Foreman secured 500 pheasant eggs from the state game farm at Mason and these are now being incubated. When the birds have reached the proper age after hatching, they will be released in this vicinity.

Mr. Foreman has met with unusual success in hatching pheasants by artificial means. The good results of this method are being demonstrated by the fact that the farm last year attracted the attention of outdoor writers and sportsmen throughout the country.

In the Realm Of Local Sport

Smyrna defeated Portland last Sunday 6-5 at Lowell. Battery for Smyrna was Leo Ward and Eddy Niles. Next Sunday Smyrna will play Clarksville at Morrison Lake at 2:30.

The Fallburg Cubs will play in a double header Sunday afternoon. The first game will be held at Fallburg Park when the Cubs meet the Grandville Independents at 1:30 o'clock. The second game will be at Lowell Recreation Park between the Cubs and Grand Rapids P. M.'s. Both of these visiting teams are first-class teams and should furnish good opposition.

The Lowell American Legion Junior Baseball team tied for second place in the League by defeating Caledonia Saturday at Caledonia 3-1. Bernard Miller buried a line drive when the Cubs eleven and allowing two hits. William Dawson, substituting for Hoyt Phelps at short, played like a veteran, throwing out a runner at the plate and accepting four other throws without making an error.

Boulard Family to Keep the Old Farm

Percy Boulard of Grand Rapids has acquired, through purchase, the Lewis Boulard farm located on M-50 in Bowne township. This farm has been in the Boulard family since 1855, having been purchased from the State by his grandfather, Martin Boulard. His father, the late Lewis Boulard, spent his entire life of 77 years on this farm, bringing it from almost wilderness to a high state of cultivation.

Percy Boulard, who has been in the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad for about thirty-five years, will assume active management of the farm. His mother, Edith Boulard, who has lived on the farm for over sixty years, and his sister Ethel will continue to make the farm their home.

1935 Showboat To Be Greatest Spectacle

The Old Robert E. Lee To Renew The Glories of the Past

The big secret is out at last. Lowell has advertised a bigger and better Showboat every year and each year, in spite of all their honesty, the same boat made its appearance on Flat River; but this year (and this no baloney as your reporter was right on the grounds and watched the actual construction) a fifteen-foot addition was made to the boat. This is probably the first time since the World War, when they took lake boats and put additions on them to make ocean liners, that an old river steamer with three decks and a gasoline barrel bottom has had fifteen feet tacked on her stern for the one and only purpose of making the old show bigger and better than ever before.

Just how they are going to make the sharp bend around Sawdust Island hasn't as yet been determined; however, if you are knocked out of bed Sunday morning by some large explosion, you will know that the sharp bend couldn't be maneuvered and that they are blowing another fifty feet off Cat-tail Point.

To add another 15 feet to the end of the boat required another 40 drums which now gives the boat a carrying capacity of 42,000 lbs. or, in other words, she will carry close to 500 people, so have no fear for your loved ones as the old craft is seaworthy.

Along Main St.

Holders of lucky numbers at the cash drawing on Main street Wednesday evening were Mrs. Arthur Schneider, John Swanson and Mrs. George Pfalter.

Dr. William Butler of Grand Rapids will be the speaker at the regular noon-day luncheon meeting of the Lowell Rotary Club Wednesday, July 31. He will talk on the subject, "History of Surgery."

A miniature reproduction of the Lowell Showboat on display in the Christiansen's store window is attracting favorable comment from passers-by. The reproduction is the handiwork of Joe Havlik.

William C. Doyle, chairman of the Showboat ticket committee, reports that orders for reserved seats are coming in by every mail from points in all sections of Michigan. The 1935 Showboat surely is going over big.

Miss Ruby Eickhoff, cheerful and good natured as ever, has returned to Christiansen's ice cream parlor here, after having gotten Christiansen's ice cream parlor at Saugatuck off to a good start. The Saugatuck store is now in charge of Lester Ross, assisted by Earl Doyle.

Several local businessmen will start out Friday morning on a goodwill tour of the surrounding towns and also for the purpose of distributing advertising matter for the Lowell Showboat. The following committee is in charge of the tour: Wesley A. Roth, Dr. H. Oulley, Paul Kellogg and Bruce McQueen.

Visitors to Lake Michigan Beach at Grand Haven are finding the Harbor View Chicken Inn, which is operated by Mrs. Geraldine Simon, formerly of Lowell, a very delightful place. Southern fried chicken, fish dinners, sandwiches and salads are featured. A famous colored cook, Teresa Carew, prepares the food. The location is at Franklin and Water streets.

The Palace Cleaners this week completed the installation of a Band Box Dry Cleaner for cleaning men's and women's suits, hats and other articles. With this outfit a suit may be cleaned in 45 minutes if necessary. The equipment leaves clothing odorless and does a first-class job in other respects. Heretofore it has been necessary to send drycleaning jobs out of town but now on the work will be done at home. Freyermuth & Kiel are an enterprising firm.

The Puget Sounder, published in the state of Washington, describes in a recent issue a little spot of four acres on the Skagit River bank which is operated by William Crofoot, who at one time lived in Lowell and has many friends here. The article said, in part: "Bill is an oldtimer, who can tell you they did things back in the early days. He keeps a little store to serve his fishermen and summer guests and around his park of grass and silver birches, he has a flock of little cabins as clean as pins and they are supplied with stoves, electric lights and necessary furnishings."

If Michigan ever seeks to find its most consistent early riser, the claims of D. D. Torrey, of Armada for the title will merit consideration. For 40 years Torrey has arisen before the sun to serve this town as its milkman. "Poggy" who stay in bed in the morning miss half the pleasure of living. The world is a different, clearer, fresher place in the morning. Nobody need waste any sympathy on the milkman," Torrey declares.

Each of the three bins contains a thermometer 85-ft. long and at the top of the storage tank is a switchboard and a reading instrument which enable the person who keeps the records to tell the condition of the wheat in every five feet from top to bottom of each of the bins. When the what begins to get too warm, the elevator superintendent can turn the grain long before there is any danger of overheating. When grain is in good condition, the temperature remains practically constant during the whole season.

SEES INFLATION A SLOW PROCESS

A Real Danger for the Future, Col. Ayres Tells Banking Groups.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J.—Present prospects do not indicate that inflation seems to be causing fear among financiers in this country, but as an ultimate development it seems to be a very real danger, Leonard P. Ayres, Vice President of the American Bankers Association, said here tonight in a speech before the National Association of Bankers. He highlighted in his speech the danger of inflation, which he said is a slow process, but one that is not to be ignored. He said that the danger of inflation is not in the immediate future, but in the long run. He said that the danger of inflation is not in the immediate future, but in the long run. "I began my life, I performed on the public calls a mid-revered. I did not believe in mid-revered. That my act was the result of four years' study, to develop a code with my assistant, of 2100 words, and to know the names of all the men, generals, the capitals of all countries, the names of steamships, etc."

"One evening after I, blindfolded, had been reading the numbers on bills for people, I heard in the creaky tones of an old gentleman's voice, some one challenging me. 'You can't tell me what I have in my pocket.'"

"I suddenly gentlemen in the audience says I cannot tell what is in his pocket, I repeated. 'How do you know I am an elderly man?'"

"You, sir, I began in a portentous voice, 'have in your pocket a bill for $1.00, and a bill for $2.00, and a bill for $3.00, and a bill for $4.00, and a bill for $5.00, and a bill for $6.00, and a bill for $7.00, and a bill for $8.00, and a bill for $9.00, and a bill for $10.00.'"

IRONY OF FATE

By R. H. WILKINSON
© Bell Syndicate.—WNU Service.

BEGINNING with the day Sheila Fluke commenced her duties at the Bellevue hospital, she promised herself that, under no conditions, would she fall in love with Dr. Julian Oakes.

The resolution was made entirely because of hearsay. Until the moment she stepped into Doctor Oakes' office, garbed in her immaculate, starched uniform, she had not set eyes on the unsuspecting object of her self-denial.

And for this reason, Sheila can be forgiven for so hasty a decision. For as Sheila stood there just inside the office door and looked across the room at the tall, spare man who, at the moment, was stooped over a filing cabinet, understanding came.

In one breath-taking moment she knew why it was that all the other nurses (with no exceptions) so frankly admitted their affection for this noble-fetured surgeon.

He looked up at her and smiled. Sheila saw the marks of strain and worry that lined his face. She saw eyes that were filled with kindness and gentleness; eyes that were at once alive and interesting, yet thoughtful and appraising.

He came across the room and spoke to her, introduced himself, offered a chair. And for some unaccountable reason her heart began to pound, a pounding she could not still.

There was something about him; his voice, his manner of walking, the gentle appeal of his personality, that sent the warm blood coursing through her veins.

And from that day forward Sheila was miserable. She loved him. She admitted it frankly, but only to herself.

And this reluctance to release the last fragment of her cramped resolution only served to make the misery in her heart more poignant.

Those others—her fellow nurses—who so openly discussed their regard for "handsome Doctor Oakes" found relief for their feelings in those little intimate tea-tetes that are forever in progress in one room or another during the course of a day or night; a relief that Sheila would not permit her tortured soul.

Never, she told herself, would she admit or even hint at the depth of this strange emotion that stirred her at sound of Doctor Oakes' familiar steps in the corridor, at sight of his tall form bent over an operating table.

There was consolation in the knowledge that Doctor Oakes' attitude toward the obvious flirtatiousness of the other nurses was quite phlegmatic.

Though by the same token Sheila knew that should she betray her own feelings, her humiliation would be ten times greater; her hurt unbearable.

For even as Sheila was certain of her love for the man, she was even more certain that that love was a thousand times deeper and more lasting than that of all her companions combined.

Sheila knew it couldn't last. Sooner or later he would have to know.

Either that or she'd have to go away. And of the two courses that were open to her she wondered on more than one occasion if she had the courage to choose the latter.

For the present it was bearable; though with each passing day the torture increased. Her work brought her in close contact with him.

"Irony of fate it was. For of all those to choose from, old and new, Doctor Oakes had selected her to aid him in the majority of his operations.

Little did he know that the act of adding fuel to the fire of conflict and suppressed emotion that raged within the girl's soul.

If, at first, Sheila had dimly hoped his discrimination for her attendance upon him was prompted by personal interest, she hoped in vain.

Not by the merest broadening of a smile did the man indicate his concern was other than professional. During business hours he looked upon her with the same expression as he bestowed upon an unusual streptococcal infection.

And when, during off hours, they chanced to meet in one of the many corridors, his greeting was nothing more than the bright nod which he reserved for all nurses alike.

The climax came six months after the first day that Sheila had stepped into Doctor Oakes' office. The conflict in her soul had not raged without leaving physical traces of its existence.

The color had left her cheeks. There were rings under her eyes. Her nerves were jumpy. And when at last she was forced to admit to herself that the end had come, that she must get away, she was thankful.

She thanked God for the courage that would enable her to depart from the hospital without betraying her secret.

It was mid-afternoon when Sheila descended to the floor where the superintendent's office was located. The corridor was empty, the hospital unusually quiet. But as Sheila hurried past one door after another, the quietude was abruptly interrupted. A door was flung open, and a doctor emerged. He stared wildly about him for an instant, and his eyes fell on Sheila.

He gestured excitedly. "Quick! It's Doctor Oakes! We must operate at once! He's collapsed as a result of overwork and strain!"

Sheila's heart stood still. For just a moment she hesitated. The doctor had gone. The corridor was empty again. Beyond lay the superintendent's office.

Could she go through with it? On top of everything else, this! Would her nerves stand the strain? Other nurses were available. . . . There was one in the corridor now. She shuddered at the thought.

Another in attendance while an operation was being performed on this man who had stirred the very depths of her soul! Unbearable! Sheila steeled herself to the task.

It was the smile with which he had looked upon her before going under the ether that steadied her; that bore her up during that delicate performance of the surgeons.

And now it was over. Things awayed crazily. Sheila leaned against the wall for support.

She felt herself sinking; knew that she had found a chair. She tried bravely to rally. How humiliating for them to find her like this.

And her last operation, too. But no one was looking, no one paying any attention. Doctor Oakes was coming out of the ether.

She heard him moan. She stood up, tried to reach the door, failed. She must go, must get away from him.

He was safe now. It would be better that she didn't wait until he'd regained consciousness, better that she didn't look into his eyes again.

She clutched at the door jamb. . . . The unconscious man was talking, mumbling incoherently. Sheila tried not to listen, tried not to hear his voice. . . . And then her grip on the door jamb tightened. Her heart stood utterly still. . . . A strange nausea swept over her. But through the thickness of it she heard Doctor Oakes' voice. Clearer now, more distinct, unmistakable.

"Sheila! Darling, come to me. Oh, it's been torture not telling you, trying not to let you know I loved you. . . . Silly I was to even think there was a chance, that you could care. . . . Why, I'm so much older. . . . Of course you couldn't care. . . . No fault of yours. . . . I did I was for ever thinking. . . . I must get away. . . . some place where I can forget. . . . Darling, I love you. . . ."

T-B Clinics Are Of Great Value

The people of rural Kent County are appreciating the services which are being rendered by the Anti-tuberculosis Society if one may judge from a recent study of work done in this territory between June 1, 1934 and May 31, 1935. In 21 free clinics for examination of the chest, 849 people either were examined or tuberculin tested. These clinics were held in Ada, Alto, Byron Center, Caledonia, Cedar Springs, Comstock Park, Fairview, Galewood, Grandville, Home Acres, Lowell, Rockford, Sand Lake and Sparta.

Throat and chest examinations were made for 258 people and 591 school children were given tuberculin tests; 355 suspicious cases or those who have lived in family contact with tuberculosis are being kept under observation. X-rays of the chest were made for 232 people in an effort to discover childhood tuberculosis or the first stage of the disease. Admission to Sunshine Sanatorium was arranged for nine people suffering from an adult, progressive type of tuberculosis. Miss Frances I. Williams, R. N. made 1232 follow-up home visits.

General health education is also a part of the program of the Anti-tuberculosis society's staff, and 23 health talks were made before rural groups. These organizations include Kent County Council PTA; parent-teacher associations of Byron Center, Barney, Rockford, Bowne Center, Oakleigh and Dutton Red school; the students of Sparta schools; members of a church in Kent City; parents of township schools in Alpine No. 6 and Cascade No. 6; Girl Reserves of Godfrey Avenue school and classes in hygiene in Lee Street school. Some of this work was done by physicians of the Kent County Medical Society and some by Blanche H. deKoning, executive secretary for the tuberculosis society. Literature numbering 6411 pieces were distributed at group meetings and 1350 posters were sent throughout the territory, mostly to school rooms.

The society pays for this work with funds raised through the annual sale of tuberculosis Christmas Seals—those on which we see a double barred cross. Gross receipts from this sale throughout rural Kent County average $1500 yearly but this sum does not cover the expense of carrying out the extensive rural program of the organization.

Rail Tax 44% Of School Fund

State's Lines Through Levies Meet Year's School Costs of $2,005 Children

The taxes of Michigan's railroads make up 44% of Kent county's share of the state primary school fund, according to a study by Floyd E. Drake, executive secretary of the Michigan Railroad Employees and Citizens League.

This county's current allocation of the fund totals $681,615.57, Drake explains, which is at the rate of $10.41 for each of its 65,477 school-age children. Of the $14,444,239.35 in the fund, the railroads through taxes paid $6,385,723.40, or a sum equal to 44% of the total. On this basis railroad taxes made up $301,338.25 of this county's share of the fund.

"The primary school fund is one of our state's most sacred funds and, basically, finances the education currently of 1,387,735 Michigan children," Drake said. "Without this fund their education would be seriously impaired.

The biggest contributors to the fund are the railroads, whose taxes by law go directly into it. Thus, of the $10.41 the state gives through the fund toward the schooling of each child, $4.58 is supplied from the railroads' taxes. Based on an average annual per pupil cost of $77.87 for education in this state, the railroads' taxes equal a year's education for 82,065 of our children. On the basis of rural school district costs, the railroads' taxes would meet the annual educational expense of well over 100,000 children.

"These rail contributions to our schools are further proof of the vital part the lines play in our economic life, a part now threatened by the competitive inequality of the excessively regulated railroads are being subjected to by unregulated other forms of transportation, none of which, incidentally, contribute a penny to public education in this state."

Mrs. Arch Wood, of McCords, had heard a great deal about the cat and the canary, but when a neighbor warned against leaving the bird cage near lace window curtains she laughed and set it down as folk lore.
