NON-VOTERS

WHAT CAN you do, here in Lowell and elsewhere, with the great number of people who could vote, but refuse to do so, or who vote only very rarely?

Mrs. Grace Morrison Poole, past president of the General Federation of Women's clubs, said in a recent address that the "non-voter is responsible for most of the evils from which the country suffers." She suggested that the right to vote be taken away from the people who fail to exercise that privilege.

As this eminent lady says, the non-voter is responsible for many of our troubles. When the great causes of progress or decline, of honor or corruption, are at stake, he remains engrossed in his pribate affairs or forgets there is an election. When the trumpet call rings through the air for every good citizen to get out and help save his country, the non-voter was found asleep and didn't hear.

A good part of these folks are excellent citizens in other respects. We need their wisdom. We need to have them wake up and see the perils that threaten the country, so they shall rally to the flag and help us stem the tide of evil. Cutting them off the voting list might confirm them in their desire not to be disturbed by these mighty issues.

What we need is a campaign to convince these folks that it is their duty to exercise the voting privilege. We need organizaions of citizens going through their home towns, talking with every non-voter, finding out why he or she fails to vote, trying to rally such folks to the good cause. We need lessons in every school on the duty of voting, so the young people should come out with the idea that they should no more refuse to vote than they would refuse to aid their country in time of war.

The importance of these facts is emphasized when we realize that of the 1800 or more voters in Lowell township only one-fourth of that number participated in the recent September primary. The ration was nearly the same in neighboring townships.

COLUMBUS DAY

IN THE early hours of October 12, in the year 1492, the little expedition commanded by Christopher Columbus discovered an island in the West Indies which they called San Salvador. This discovery led to the settlement and development of our great country, and all the wonderful things that have happened here. The nation does well to honor that great memory by making that date a holiday.

Is there in all history an exploit so remarkable as that performed by this man Coumbus? He prepared himself for it by adventurous explorations along the coast of Africa. He became convinced that there was land on the other side of that mysterious ocean, which in the belief of that time had no end and no limits.

When Columbus formed that conviction, he was one man against all the science and experience of the world. In the popular view, an attempt to cross that forbidding ocean was about like the desire to explore that unknown sea which we call Death.

Columbus strugged on, harassed by poverty and baffled by skepticism. The force of his knowledge and persistence was finally so great that he assembled his expedition, and persuaded a crew of sailors to cross that great unknown. They finally rebelled, and cowering with fear, wanted to turn back. But Columbus, ever bold and forceful, induced them to keep on and on, until one morning the sun rose on the glories of an untarnished new world.

Have we any of that faith and courage left in America today? Do we still keep some of it here in Michigan? If we could only have some of that dauntless resolution, we should discover new continents in the realm of the spirit and of human knowledge, in which man should rise to new heights of happiness and welfare.

VIEW OF AUTUMN

ARE YOU a pessimist? If so, probably the autumnal months are a sad time for you. The falling leaves, the fading flowers, suggest decay and death of human ife.

If you are an optimist, no season can be more cheerful. The glorious colors of fruits and trees are Nature's way of celebrating the harvest season. The world bursts into a splendor of color, as if singing a symphony which says that life is good, and man was meant to be happy. The life giving air pulsates through your vens, and you say you can go out into the world of effort and achieve great deeds.

The approaching winter should not be viewed as some great calamity, which settles down on the life of man. Rather it should be seen as a period of rest and refreshment, when the earth gains strength for the great effort of a coming spring and summer.

DEVALUING MONEY

THE FINANCIAL world has been shaken by the action of the French and other governments, in devaluing their money. The average person can't grasp it, and asks what it is all about.

Money is devalued when a country decides that its dollar, or whatever the money is called, shall not be worth so much in gold, or whatever metal it is based on. If the money is worth less, then it won't buy so much and prices rise.

When prices rise, the farmers and some other producers are helped because it is easier to pay their debts with their products. But the effect is hard on the people who depend on wages and salaries, since their cost of living goes up. Let us hope these countries will be able soon to fix a permanent and just value on money, so it won't keep the world disturbed by fluctuating up and down.

Action Expected By Local Bodies On Amendments

Joint Resolution May Be Passed Here

In the absence of a quorum the regular meeting of the Lowell Common Council scheduled for last Monday evening was adjourned to next Monday.

Nevertheless, with President John A. Arehart and Trustees Cook, Day and Christiansen present, decisions were reached on several questions, subject to ratification in regular session.

Phil Hartley asked protection for the property owner against dogs permitted to run at large and damage shrubbery, yards and gardens. President Arehart read the village ordinance on the subject, which provides only for the impounding of dogs which are untagged. Marshal Fred Gramer was instructed to consult Village Attorney R. M. Shivel regarding legal measures which might be taken to control destructive animals.

The purchase of an oil reclaimer for the deisel engines at the Municipal Light and Power Plant was discussed. The engines use approximately nine barrels of oil annually for lubrication. A reclaimer, purifying the oil for reuse, would affect a saving of about $230 worth of oil each year, it was maintained. The purifying machine most suitable to local needs would cost $650, although a smaller capacity machine is available for $350. Decision as to the purchase was placed by President Arehart in the hands of the Light & Power Committee and Supt. F. J. McMahon, with power to act.

By arrangement with Supt. W. W. Gumser, the village bleachers will be used in the basketball gymnasium at the new school unit this winter.

Mr. Gumser then discussed the constitutional amendments exempting foodstuffs from the sales tax and eliminating the tax on real property. Both, through diminished revenues available, will seriously curtail the activities of the public schools, if not ruin the Michigan public school system entirely, he declared. Mr. Gumser asked that the council go on record as opposed to the passage of these amendments. It was decided to wait until after the regular monthly meeting of the school board later in the week, when the opinion of both bodies may be expressed in a joint resolution.

Skull Fractured Kaufman Rallies

While working on the roof of the garage being constructed on the Earl Nash property on East Main-st., formerly the William Anderson residence, Walter Kaufman fell and sustained critical injuries, including a skull fracture, a double fracture of the left arm, serious injury to his left eye and other cuts and bruises. The accident occurred at 9:00 a. m. Saturday.

Bert Hawley, a fellow worker, called a physician and Mr. Kaufman was rushed to Blodgett hospital. The injured man's life was at first despaired of, and relatives were summoned to the bedside. Later, however, to the joy of Mr. Kaufman's hundreds of friends in this community, he rallied, and is making progress toward recovery at this writing. Mr. Kaufman's buddies of the American Legion have been particularly thoughtful in their efforts to lighten the burden of his suffering.

Ionia high school initiated its night football field last Friday night by defeating Lowell high, 13-6, before an estimated crowd of 1,000 fans. Ionia with a heavy experienced team, in spite of poor generalship, made large gains on the Lowell team, scoring in the first quarter and again toward the end of the game. Lowell showed improvement over last week and made the game interesting to watch with their fighting spirit. Ionia was completely fooled on several Lowell plays that were well executed and made the local team appear to be the better of the two teams despite the score. Poor charging and blocking were the overwhelming factors that lost the game for the home-town boys, but Coach Emery is emphasizing this part of the game in the forthcoming practices and with a lay off over the next week-end and two hard weeks of practice, the Lowell squad should put up a good game against the Lee team which is appearing very strong in conference playing.

Lowell high school's "B" team will play Greenville's "B" team this Friday night under the lights at Recreation Park, Lowell, at 7:30. Admission 15c to everybody.

Lee will meet the Lowell first team on Friday, Oct. 16, in a conference game.

4-H STYLE QUEEN

MAXINE ROARK

Michigan's 4-H Style Queen for 1936, Maxine Roark, 15, of Alto, will represent the state's 17,000 club girls in the National Style Revue to be staged in Chicago, Dec. 1, as a feature of the National Club Congress. She receives as state prize an all-expense trip from the Chicago Mail Order company, sponsor of the contest conducted in cooperation with extension agents. Miss Roark will model a "best dress" of yellow gold silk crepe, her sixth 4-H clothing project, which was valued at $10 and cost $4.09. Total cost of the outfit with accessories was $14.73.

Too Fast On Curve Car Is Demolished

Failure of their car to negotiate a curve on M-66 about a quarter mile north of the Lowell village limits, might have cost three people their lives Monday evening at 11:15 when the car, traveling south, left the road and crashed into two wooden poles carrying high tension wires from the village power plant and a tree on the L. A. Weaver property just south of the curve.

The occupants of the car were Spencer Mitchell of Saranac, R. 3, driver; Richard Lyons, Saranac, and Irene Speerstra of Lowell, none of whom were seriously injured. Mr. Mitchell told Deputy Frank Stephens, who investigated, that he was going too fast to make the curve. The car, a new one, was completely wrecked. It was reported to be owned by the Ionia County Infirmary and is said to have been loaned to Mr. Mitchell by his father-in-law who is superintendent of that instiution.

As a result of the accident, the village was cast into darkness for several minutes when the two poles struck by the car were knocked down, carrying wires charged with 2300 volts of electricity, with them. The local deisel engines were started within a few minutes while the employes of the light and power plant immediately began to clear up the wreckage.

This makes the second time within the past few weeks that motor cars have failed to travel around this curve, and have left the road, a previous instance occurring when two local boys narrowly missed these same electric light poles, with their car, which also ended up on the Weaver property.

Good Program At Kent Pomona

Kent County Pomona Grange was held at Kinney Grange hall Thursday, Oct. 1, with a large attendance. Seven new members were given the obligation in the Fifth Degree. On October 22, a large class of candidates from several subordinate Granges will be initiated in the Fifth Degree at the Silver Lake Grange hall. It will be an evening meeting.

Alto Grange was represented at Pomona Grange by Roland Depew, Master, Arba Wood and Mr. and Mrs. Newton Coons. Mrs. Stella Baker of Spencer Grange, lecturer of Pomona Grange, had a nice program prepared that was enjoyed by all. Part of the evening was devoted to a "song festival" contest, participated in by Spencer, Algoma and Courtland Granges. The Courtland Grange group was awarded the prize for best Kent County rendition and will compete at Sturgis in the song festival contest for state honors and awards at Michigan State Grange the week of October 27 to 30. Delegates elected to represent Kent County Pomona Grange at the State Grange at Stugis the last week of October are Cyrus H. Jasperse and Miss Madge Corstange, both of Paris Grange. Kent County delegates are Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Sowerby of Rockford, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Hull of Grattan Grange and Mr. and Mrs. Newton Coons of Alto Community Grange.

The Postal Savings Division of the Post Office Department is already at work preparing material to demonstrate the continued need of the system in anticipation of expected attacks in Congress. Former Depositors To Get $43,500

Dividend Is to Be Paid Soon; Alto Bank Also Makes Payment

Good news this week for depositors of Lowell's former banks, F. H. Swarthout, Liquidator of the City State Depositors Corporation and the Lowell State Depositors Corporation, announced to the Ledger this Thursday morning, the declaration and intended payment of a 10% liquidating dividend upon all outstanding Certificates of Indebtedness for each corporation. Checks in payment of such dividend will doubtless be ready within the next thirty days and will release to Lowell and vicinity the sum of approximately $43,500.00 in cash.

Such payment or release is made possible through the cooperation of a certain Detroit banking institution. Later notice in this and other papers will fix definite dates and advise requirements.

Upwards of 1600 persons will participate in the $43,500.00 distribution in sums ranging from as low as one dollar to several hundred dollars. When the 50% distribution was made on Aug. 20, 1934, a total of $435,000.00 was paid out.

Alto Bank Also in Line

The Farmers State Bank of Alto through its trustees also announces a 10% payment on certificates of participation. This makes two payments on certificates of participation, the first being Feb. 1, 1936 and the second payment was made payable Oct. 1, 1936.

Funeral Rites For Catholic Teacher Born in Grattan-tp.

Sister M. Aquinas Byrne, 62, supervisor for the last five years of high schools taught by the Dominican sisters of Marywood, died Thursday night at Marywood academy, Grand Rapids. She had been a teacher 37 years and was active until about a week ago.

Born at Grattan June 15, 1874, the daughter of William and Mary McGee Byrne, she entered the Dominican novitiate at St. John's Home in 1897, received her religious habit the next year and in 1900 made her first profession.

Survivors are a brother, Austin Byrne of Belding, and three sisters, Mrs. Chas. Farrell of Grand Rapids, Mrs. Kate A. McCarthy of Pine Bluff, Ark., and Mrs. Charles Collar of Lowell.

Funeral services were held at 9:30 Saturday morning at the Sacred Heart chapel, Marywood, Grand Rapids. Rev. T. W. Albin of St. Simon's church, Ludington, was the celebrant of the solemn high requiem mass. He was assisted by Rev. J. F. Drew as deacon and Rev. William V. Flannery as subdeacon. Rev. Raymond Baker was master of ceremonies.

Community Chest Now County Wide

Tentative Budget For Kent County Ready For Board

Some Higher, Lower Rate Is Likely

A county budget of $849,181.18 for 1937, compared with $842,-276.37 for 1936, has been agreed upon tentatively by the county finance committee for presentation to the board of supervisors which meets in its annual budget session Oct. 12.

While the budget total, which includes restoration of half of the depression salary cuts of the county employes, is slightly higher than the 1936 budget, the tax rate likely will be lower, it was explained by the committee. The reason given was that only $488,-011.77 of the total need be raised by taxation. The difference is to be taken out of the existing surplus.

Chairman John A. Collins explained the $488,011.77 represents the 2 mills allocated by the county allocation commission. It would be possible, said Collins, to continue on the 2-mill basis for at least another year, giving the benefit of the existing surplus to the taxpayers.

Salary increase averaging 10 per cent are included in the budget.

The general fund item is set up in the tentative budget at $466,-134.77. Welfare items total $373,-801.18, including $200,000 for contagious diseases, $125,000 for mothers' pensions and $48,801.18 for soldiers' relief. The soldiers' relief item represents the full .2 mill allowed under the law. The mothers' pension item is $5,000 below the 1936 figure. County parks are given the more or less standard sum of $21,877.

The budget includes a delinquent tax item of $100,000. Anticipated revenues are set at $150,-000.

The county valuation for budget purposes is determined at $244,005,885. The tax rate this year was 2 mills.

Until he left on Tuesday morning for his annual trip to Florida, an almost daily pedestrian on the principal thoroughfare was Robert B. Boylan, Lowell's only surviving Civil war veteran. At 87, Mr. Boylan gives every impression of resilient vitality and unimpaired health. His faculties are undimmed, his interests broad. Every best wish goes out to him for a score more of years as this community's representative of epochal events and men who now, as Stanton said of Lincoln, "Belong to the ages."

More Books Added To Public Library

The Public Library has added another smaller list to its collection of new books. One that is sure to appeal to every lover of wild life is "Enos Mills of the Rockies," a biography of the famous guide and interpreter of the Rockies and an inspiring adventure story as well. Another book worth mentioning is "Beyond Sing the Woods" by Trygve Gulbranssen, which is described thus by one reviewer: "Something of the earthy richness of Knut Hanson's early books, something of the magic of old Norway that inspired Sigrid Undset, is in Trygve Gulbranssen's heart-warming and romantic novel, "Beyond Sing the Woods." The complete list follows:

East River, by Borden Chase; With Banners, by Emilie Loring; Mother of the Bride, by A. G. Rosman; The Graper Girls Go to College, by Elizabeth Corbett; So You Are Going to the Mediterranean, by C. E. Laughlin; Live Alone and Like It, by Marjorie Hillis; Beyond Sing the Woods, by Trygve Gulbranssen; The Way of a Trangressor, by Negley Farson; Enos Mills of the Rockies, by H. Hawthorne and E. B. Mills; Also three gift books: America Strikes Back, by Gustavus Myers; The Romance and Drama of the Rubber Industry, by H. S. Firestone, Jr.; Democratic Despotism, by R. E. Desvernine.

JOHN YOUNG GROCERY HAS NEW PROPRIETORS

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Boyd of Rockford have purchased the John Young grocery and general merchandise store in Segwun, taking possession on Oct. 1. For thirteen years Mr. and Mrs. Boyd were engaged in the general merchandise, bakery and restaurant business in the North Kent County city, and bring to their new enterprise a wealth of practical experience and buying knowledge. The business is being conducted along the lines of fair prices and courteous service which made the Young store a widely popular institution over a period of years. Mr. and Mrs. Young are living at the old Young residence on C-462. He has no immediate plans for re-entering business.

The acquisition of the permits of Central Coach Lines, operating between Lansing, Marshall, Coldwater and Ft. Wayne is announced by Short Way Lines, Inc., of Toledo, Ohio. The approval of the transfer, and actual start of operation was authorized by the Michigan Public Utilities Commission on Sept. 24, 1936.

The addition of this important 130 mile route increases the length of the interstate routes of Short Way to 868 miles. The coordination and consolidation of schedules will not only tend to improve existing service but will tie together the service to numerous important points in central and western Michigan. New coaches have been ordered and a general consolidation of terminals will be made.

Improved Roads Prime Factor In Town's Welfare

Kent's Park System Is Among Finest

Lowell's reputation as a good place to trade, a live town and market, easily accessible via improved roads, was stressed as a prime factor in community prosperity by Engineer-Manager Otto S. Hess of the Kent County Road Commission, at the Wednesday noon luncheon of the local Rotary Club.

To maintain this advantage, communicating highways must not only be kept up, but constantly improved to meet increasing traffic hazards, Mr. Hess continued.

The present statutory allocation of tax funds leaves neither Kent nor any other Michigan county any considerable money for highway construction. The remedying of this situation, predicated upon public safety and the sound economics of unhampered commercial intercourse, is the principal problem facing leaders in highway development, the speaker concluded.

1937 Kent Highways

Kent County, however, may next year have $75,000, under a supervisors' resolution available for road construction. The sum may be supplemented by contributions from the townships, Mr. Hess declared.

An outgrown road system is ultimately accountable for a good share of the traffic accidents, Mr. Hess pointed out. Also, high speed cars equipped with balloon tires, operated on gravel, have skyrocketed maintenance costs. Double the former amount of calcium chloride is now needed to lay the dust on a gravel stretch during the dry summer months, it was asserted. An economical method of "tieing-down" gravel surfaces was cited as a needed development in highway chemistry by the speaker. Black-topping seems the best method available under present circumstances. Since one-half of Kent County's 1200 miles of roads are dirt trails, surfacing is an important item.

The McNitt law and the Horton Act, passed by the 1931 Michigan Legislature, were enacted as tax relief measures, not for highway improvement primarily, it was said. As they have functioned, revenues have been cut through the weight-tax reduction, and public duties formerly assigned to other departments of government, have been placed on the shoulders of the highway bureaus.

Practically all Michigan road construction since 1931 has been in collaboration with the federal government in various welfare measures. While not criticising the aims and purposes of the work relief plans, Mr. Hess deplored the multiplied labor costs, speaking from the standpoint of a highway engineer.

In keeping with the nippy fall weather, Mr. Hess ventured a sly weather prediction when he recalled the morning last winter when twelve motorized snowplows were completely lost, submerged in drifting snow. It was two days before several of the drivers and their machines were located.

Palmer Talks Parks

The second speaker secured by Program Chairman Donald A. McPherson was Linus Palmer, also of the Kent County Road Commission. Mr. Palmer traced in absorbing fashion the growth and development of the Kent County system of eleven parks, considered among the finest in the middle west.

He urged that the State Highway Department establish on trunk lines at one hundred mile intervals a series of parks similar to Gordon Park, a tract south of Sand Lake and north of Cedar Springs. The highway department has provided abundantly for roadside tourist conveniences but small ratcts are desirable for the safe exercise of children and pets, an almost invariable adjunct of the modern motoring American family, Mr. Palmer said.

The current annual appropriation of $23,000, compared with urban costs, provides excellent upkeep at minimum expense for the Kent County Park System, he concluded.

Ram Truck To Stop At Lowell, Oct. 17

The ram truck operated by the Michigan Pure Bred Sheep Breeders' Association will stop at Recreation Park on Saturday afternoon, Oct. 17, K. K. Vining, Kent County Agricultural agent, has announced. People waiting outside the church used to melt inside the building when Thurston rode up, and stay there until he had tied his bull securely. A few of those peope are still around. Anyway, that's how Thurston Wells went to church, Sunday after Sunday.

Special details of conservation officers attached to district headquarters posts in the north are to be brought into southern Michigan to give added protection to game during the upland hunting season which opens in the lower peninsula, Thursday, Oct. 15. It is estimated that approximately 250,000 hunters will take the field on opening day and that this vast number of sportsmen will create serious shooting hazards.

Eddie Guest, Michigan's loved poet, arrived where he is by hard knocks and hard work, and he seems still to have some old fashioned ideas about work. Recently he said: "I went to work when I was eleven years old. I can't remember when I haven't worked. I don't think that work ever hurt anybody. In all my experience as police reporter, I can't remember ever having seen a death certificate which indicated that a man had died from overwork."

SOCIAL SECURITY

THE NEW social security law, provid ing unemployment benefits and old age pensions, is an issue in the present political campaign. It should not become any political football to be kicked all over the field. The care of needy and unfortunate folks is a responsibility that has been laid on the nation.

The present law was passed in a hurry, and probably is to be accumulated for the proposed reserves, they may say the payments are too great.

It is not clear that a vast reserve could be accumulated for the payment of these benefits in future years, without creating too much of a temptation to politicians to spend the money. In this way, the American people indorse the principle of the law, and expect, whichever party wins the election, that it will be so amended as to remedy valid objections.

SWALLOWS HOMEWARD FLY

A BEAUTIFUL old song tells about "When the swallows homeward fly." It is quite a sight to see those swallows assemble, sitting on some telegraph wire in a twittering convention, evidently considering the great southern migration that is soon about to make. What moves them all at once to flock together, and apparently consult with each other, about this journey of thousands of miles they are about to take?

We shall never know what lies in that tiny bird head. Some instinct tells these wise little creatures that they need to fly in flocks, which may have a reason for us humans, We too can't do the greater things alone. We have to get together in flocks and unite our energies in combined movements to win the aims we have in view.

"GETTING BY"

ONE OF THE difficulties of business, is that so many people are satisfied if they can just "get by." If they can work well enough to draw their pay, and make goods enough so for the time being the public will buy them, they do not worry.

People who seek merely to "get by," keep finding themselves up against some new situation they had not calculated on. The employer finds such workers unsatisfactory, and they lose their jobs. The customer finds the goods don't suit, and the trade goes elsewhere. There is no way to be sure of holding a job and of retaining trade, but to rise above the "get by" idea, and determine to render the best service possible. The one who expects beats the one who just "gets by."

HOME TOWN THOUGHTS

If you want money, prepare and resolve to render some kind of service that is worth money.

If you want to share whatever success your home town achieves, show you are entitled to that share by spending your money at home so far as possible.

If you want your fair share of the country's prosperity, don't expect to get it unless you tell the people by advertising what you have to sell.

4-H CLUB NEWS

Honors for Ada Boy

Edward Cramton of Ada, dairy herd improvement and leader of the Ada Community 4-H Club, is one of two boys who were presented as winners in the essay contest sponsored by the Michigan Milk Producers Association to go to Dallas, Tex., to the Nation al Dairy Show and the Texas Centennial Exposition.

The essay contest covered trips the boys made in July to Milk marketing plants in various Michigan cities. Over 60 dairy club members who are carrying production projects in club work participated in the contest.

The Michigan delegation will leave Oct. 8 and return Oct. 17.

Handicraft Clubs

Handicraft clubs are coming in for 4-H Handicraft clubs the coming season. Last year 252 boys completed their projects. Members of these clubs must be 10 years old, have finished any summer project in handicraft, and be a member of a farm or manual arts class in high school. A new bulletin covering first and second years work will be ready for this year's work and certain supplies and materials will be furnished all clubs.

Schools or communities desiring such clubs or information concerning them should contact County Farm Agent Ray Hasson, Room 201, Y. M. C. A. Bldg., Grand Rapids

Selecting Exhibits

Members of potato clubs in the east side of the county will meet at the Roy Gray farm in Oakfield township Saturday morning of this week to get information on selecting exhibits of potatoes and on hill selection for seed improvement. The work will start at 9:30 o'clock in the Gray potato field. Any one interested in hill selecting potatoes are invited to attend.

I would like to add at this time some comments on the conduct of children in the matter of schol bus transportation. They must be taught to heed the patrols, to obey the driver, and to observe classroom conduct in the bus.

Parents should instruct their children accordingly. Their manners must be taught to them by their teachers and every one of them should be so instructed that he knows what is expected of him.

Pupils should be on time in the morning to avoid delaying the bus; they should never stand in the road while waiting for a bus; they should not carry on unnecessary conversation with the driver of the bus; they should never throw waste paper or rubbish on the floor of the bus; they should never extend their arms or heads out the windows; they should report to the driver at once any damage done to the bus.

Three Rivers, Mich.
Oct. 5, 1936

Editor, The Lowell Ledger,

Dear Sir:

Well, I see the State Demmycrats got together down at Battle Creek and picked their losers for th' November election. An' they didn't give Michigan's most versatile slip-horn player—Mr. Welsh—a chance to share in their coming defeat.

Empty though the honor might be, I'd like to have seen George get a slice of it. After all, when he was defeated in the Primary by Mr. Murphy—(I'll take Manilly!)—he agreed to help. And then they put the old yarn-tied comfortable over him so he can't be one of the losers —and him so used to it!

I haven't studied over the Democratic Ticket much. I see a Mr. Starr of Grand Rapids was named to run for some office. Mr. Starr is a tall man. That's evidently why they think he's competent. I never heard of the other candidates—but they prob'ly were selected on their executive abilities to assimilate punishment. They're gluttons for it, them Demmycrats.

But, after all—here it is the month of October.

I was standing down on the long bridge over the old millpond here this morning. The usually placid surface was all riffled up by a wind with a tinge of rawness in it—and below the bridge—pointing north—was a long gallinoodle—(some call 'em hell-divers).

I noticed that the first frost had dropped the leaves of the pond-lillies. A swish of rain from the recent skies stippled the water of the channel. Over on the bank by Champlin's Woods the floopp-papered skeletons of two darkhouses were melancholy. On the telephone wires over the bridge a dozen swallows were sitting—looking very thoughtful. A long-legged crane winged its way over, flapplly, with protesting cries.

Then I stood there I realized that Fall was upon us. There'll be bright days of Indian summer yet—when the sunlight glints on cobwebs. But it won't be long before that pond will be frozen over. Then the small boys will skate around with skinny sticks and runny noses and burn off the gaunt cattails in Carter's Cove.

Then some—my friends—what will become of that Lone Gallinoodle?

That's what I wondered as I stood there. And I felt mighty sad about it, too. But a little later I felt more optimistical. I know now that a kind Providence will take care of me. And I know it'll be the same in my sympathetic feelings about Mr. Welsh. The Gods of Oblivion will take care of him. And, after November, for Mr. Murphy. He'll find his way—like the crane—with protesting cries—back to the Philippines.

So why should we be sad and worried about these Demmycrats—and gallinoodles?

Possible Solution Of Farm Surpluses

A posible solution to the problem of farm surpluses is to be found in the increased use of farm products by industry, it is indicated in a new sound slide film, "Farms of the Future," produced by the Ford Motor Company.

The picture, just released to local Ford dealers, is available through them to schools, clubs and farm organizations anywhere in the country.

"Farms of the Future" includes a treatment of the story of the soy bean, showing the early experiments with a variety of farm crops which led finally to the selection of the soy bean for continued experimentation in the Ford laboratories. Progress in the development of the soy bean as a source of raw material, use of a simplified plant for extraction of oil from the bean, and production of automobile parts from soy bean meal are shown.

Agricultural "over-production," farm and factory interdependence, and future possibilities of farm crop conversion into raw materials are among the subjects treated in the film. Also included is a dramatization of the natural partnership of agriculture and industry, the mutual interests of the farmer and the industrialist being portrayed.

The film's consideration of the problem of farm surpluses introduces the belief of Henry Ford that this problem will eventually be solved through the use of farm crops in the world's industries. As an indication of what may lie ahead, the film presents a pictorial summary of that which has already been accomplished by scientific research in the realm of farm crop conversion.

Tremendous Trifles
By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

SPEEDOMETER

"STEP on it, boy!" And the needle on the speedometer climbs up—up—up—fifty—sixty—seventy—fifty miles per hour!

It wasn't thus back in 1846 when Brigham Young was leading his Mormon colony across the plains to Utah. Then the wagon trains crawled painfully along and eighty miles was a journey of days.

Sometimes the urgent leading the Mormon leader pushed on to find the best route, leaving the slower-moving wagons behind to follow along the trail which he would mark out for them. One of these parties was in charge of a young fellow named William Clayton.

A long road and weary road it was for the westward-daring homeseekers. Their goal seemed so far distant and they probably pestered young William Clayton a great deal with their questions of "How far have we come today?"

So, being an ingenious young man, he devised a way to answer. He measured a mile on the tongue that they traversed one day, then marked a wagon wheel at a certain point on its circumference. Keeping his eye on the marked wheel he counted its revolutions to the mile. Next he devised a ratchet which moved a cogwheel that registered accurately the distance the caravan traveled daily. That same principle is used in speedometers today.

COTTAGE CHEESE

U. S. Dept. of Agriculture Circular 109 says: "In food value Cottage Cheese is in the class with lean meat and eggs, being more valuable than either in material that goes to build muscle, blood and bone. Cottage Cheese is in fact, a food that, served either alone or in combination, may form an important part of the diet. In soup, sauce, meatless dish, salad or dessert, Cottage Cheese may be used to advantage. As a basis for the main dish of the meal, it will materially reduce expenses, appeal to the appetite and save meat."

MISLEADING

We hate to get peeved, but we do sometimes. One of our pet peeves right now is hearing a national speaker over the radio giving credit to President Roosevelt for bank deposit insurance. The records show, and most people know that Senator Vandenberg of Michigan wrote the bank deposit insurance law and forced its passage in the face of the fact that President Roosevelt opposed the law. All this is a matter of record, and a man with intelligence enough to make a political speech should be aware of the fact. One can only reach the the conclusion that the speakers who give the Roosevelt credit for the law are dishonest and are deliberately trying to mislead the voters.—Caseopolis Vidette.

Wit and Humor

FLY

A young man went to Australia against his father's wishes. In one letter home he wrote: "I have bought a car; first feather in my cap." In another he wrote: "I have bought a farm; another feather in my cap."

This went on for some time and always the son's letter finished with "another feather in my cap."

Later the father received a letter which ran: "Dear dad, I am broke; please send passage home."

The father replied: "Nothing doing. Take the feathers from your cap, stick them on your back and fly home."

Modesty Preserved

Mrs. Blurb—They say that veils for women are coming in style. I wonder why that is?

Mr. Blurb—I understand the women are ashamed to show their faces when they go out wearing those clothes that they wear now.—Stray Stories Magazine.

Melancholy Punster

"We have squandered money without thought of a proper return," said the student of economics.

"Yes," replied Mr. Dustin Stax. "I fear we have proved one of those countries in which a profit is without honor."

MODEST SARAH

Miss Willing—Sarah, if Mr. Simple calls while I'm out, hold him until I return.

Sarah—Oh, miss, sure I wouldn't like to do that.

More Convenient

Woman—No, I tell you I object to giving money at the door!

Tramp—Well, ma'am, perhaps you'll hand it out of the window. I'm not particular. — Pearson's Weekly.

Tit for Tat

"This pound of butter you sold me is three ounces short."

"Well, I mislaid the pound weight, so I had to weigh it by the pound of steak sold me yesterday."—London Answers Magazine.

Law and Authority

"Do you think women should study law?"

"No," said Miss Cayenne. "Men can look after the law. All a clever woman needs to do is to supervise the authority."

The Main Requisite

"Do you have to have talent to make a living at writing jokes?" asked the fair one.

Coming Up

"How would you like your egg served, sir?"

"Is there any difference in price?"

"None whatever, sir."

"Then serve it on a thick slice of ham."

Waits for the Empty Space

I was warning my little neighbor about being careful crossing streets. "Oh, don't worry," the child assured me. "I always wait for the empty space to come by."—Royal Arcanum.

Alton - Vergennes

Mrs. Clyde Condon

Mrs. Agnes Dickens, aged 55, died Friday, October 2 at the home of her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Bentley Smith, who have tenderly cared for her the past several months after she became ill with a fatal affliction. She had lived nearly her entire life east of Moseley and Whites Bridge vicinity. She leaves this daughter Essie Vandebrook Smith, three grandchildren and an adopted son, Vernon Dickens. Funeral services, conducted by Rev. Loomis, were held Monday afternoon at the home and at the Maccabee Hall in Smyrna of which she was a member. Burial in Alton cemetery.

Albert and Fred Blaser and C. O. Condon have begun their apple harvest.

The little son of Mr. and Mrs Judd Clark has been ill this week.

Mrs. Lucy Blaser spent from Sunday until Thursday last week with Dr. and Mrs. Hapeman in Lansing. Miss Antoinette spent the latter part of the week there. Both of them were having dental work done.

Mr. and Mrs. Victor Johnson of Sparta were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Hilton Condon.

Mrs. Kirk Ford came Friday from Bitely with Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ford and spent the week-end with her sister, Mrs. Dorus Church. Her husband, Kirk Ford and Mr. and Mrs. Leon Ford drove down Sunday and took her home.

Martha Condon and Tom Condon called at the Billy and Clyde Condon homes Thursday.

A little stranger arrived recently at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Larry Eno (nee Alice Purdy) and has been named Ann Ann.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Baird and Mrs. Hazel Baird were week end guests in Flint at the Charles Baird, Glen Condon and Frank Reynolds homes.

Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Thompson of Rockford were last Wednesday visitors of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Vandenbroeck.

Alton Community is having its fourth successive revival meeting Sunday at the church. You are asked to bring sandwiches and one dish to pass. Coffee and table service will be furnished. Program in charge of Rev. S. B. Wenger at 2:30 o'clock. Rev. Reuben Hilty, Emory Corners will be one of the speakers. Come and meet your old friends and relate some childhood experience.

Lewis Hale of Ionia was a caller Sunday at the Dorus Church and Peterson homes.

Mr. and Mrs. Judd Hapeman, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Langler and children and Dr. and Mrs. John Hapeman were callers of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Blaser Saturday and Sunday.

Bessie Frost was elected chairman and Grace Kropf secretary at the district meeting held at the Alton Church of the Kent County Extension Class last week. The first lesson on House Furnishings will be given on October 27 at Lowell City Hall. The Moseley class is organized and their leaders will be in attendance.

Mrs. Dickens has been lifted into a chair a few times but her condition is not improving very much. Billy Condon is also thoroughly enjoying their electricity and have added several conveniences to their furnishings already.

Mrs. Bessie Frost and Mr. and Mrs. D. A. McPherson spent Sunday evening callers of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Condon.

Church meeting is the next big event by the conversation overheard where a few men get together now-a-days.

Essie Baird and her pupils had a "weenie" roast Friday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Florentus Vandenbroeck of Sparta have a baby girl born last week. Mrs. Clark, Mrs. Leach and Mrs. Billy Condon attended a shower given for Mrs. Vandenbroeck recently.

Mr. and Mrs. Kennely Onan announce the arrival of a son at their home last week.

DON'T WORRY FRIENDS WITH PERSONAL TROUBLES

Janet first tells you she can't afford the trip or the matinee or the hair-do and then proceeds to indulge in all of them.

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

IT IS a strange truth about our muddled lives that usually there is just one thing that is worrying us profoundly. It is ONE thing could be settled or changed everything would be wonderful!

The simplicity with which women admit this would be funny if it wasn't somehow so pathetic. They go on from school days to young womanhood, from bridal hours to the serious business of home-making and child-bearing, from youth to age, eternally explaining that it is just this or just that, that keeps her minds from being completely at rest.

We never seem smart enough to win but it always will be "next week." Then even when the last hour of all arrives, and the family gathers for the long parting, and the doctors are packing up their little bags to go on to the next case, just there will be still just that one thing between us and peace—one child or grandchild about whom to worry, one unwritten letter or undelivered message to hand us as we start on the long journey.

Lucy, for example, doesn't like the Morrison house. Lucy married Harry Morrison seventeen years ago, and his parents gave them the big, ugly comfortable old place for their home. Lucy's children have been born there, they've had Christmas trees and measles and baby days and picnics, they've turned the old sewing room into a sleeping porch and put in extension telephones and radios and new bathrooms, but still Lucie doesn't like the Morrison house! "We're still in the old dreadful old red shingled mausoleum," said Lucy to me in 1914, when she had been married about a year. "You know we'd all be in love with it, and it never will seem like home to me!" she told me again last week, when I met her in the market.

Janet, on the other hand, has lived in all sorts of fascinating houses and countries. But Janet never has enough money. She never forgets for one second that she and Tom haven't enough money. If they go abroad she explains it in a scandalized aside; if they wear gars like us on the 'Parisi'" If they stay at home every pleasure and every subject upon which the most brilliant conversation touches is the money phase. Her daughters have been well educated in private schools. "Don't ask me how we did it," says Janet, "for, of course, we're miles in debt!" Whether she has one servant or a retinue of et is always poor. She first tells you that she can't possibly afford the trip or the matinee or the hair-do, and then proceeds to indulge in them. She never gives a penny to charity, "because we simply haven't got it!"

Those who love Janet get sick of the topic of money. What her bridge losses were, what her doctor bills were, what she lost at contract, what Nancy's teeth-straightening is costing, what opera seats are—all these are all you hear from Janet. For thirty years she has had no other topic of conversation, or rather all topics have led straight to this one. "My dear, if I had enough money I'd be the happiest woman in the world!" Janet says.

Mary's trouble is Jacky. Her other four children are perfect specimens, her husband is successful and devoted and charming, married sisters and her mother live near, and adore her—but in Mary's story there is always the tragedy of Jacky. Something in Jacky's bone-structure is wrong, and Jacky, nine years old now, will never walk.

He is content, busy, he works and studies and laughs and makes models of ships and airplanes and reads about Nils and Tarzan and Mowgli like any other boy; everyone in the family adores him, Jacky is a completely happy child. But Mary can't leave it that way. "Why did God send me so much and then give me this bitter cross!" she asks her friends, over and over again. "I could have given him up to death. But to have my beautiful baby crippled—never to play football and run and swim and race with the others! It's too much. I wish I had never married, and never had a child!"

Thousands of persons in the last five years have made their one individual grievance the bad luck of 1929. Things are going better now and they are eating and sleeping comfortably; everyone has something gotten through. But they can't forget those thousands—the beautiful thousands—that were lost in bad investments. Why, they could all have gone abroad for a year, they could have painted the house and the car and built a brick wall and put Georgina through college with that money!

It seems too horrible that it was THEIRS—they HAD it—and now it's gone forever. I know one woman who has reproached her husband with the loss of their fortune every day for five years. I suppose there are many like her. All the events of these sixty vital years—the changes and chances and ups and downs have been colored for her by the memory of that money. "Lewis WOULD invest it that way—I wish he still had it, he couldn't fail," she says bitterly. "I couldn't say a thing—how did I know it was like throwing it away?" she reminds her children of it. "You could do it ten times over if you had that money!" she reminds her husband. "Oh, if I had only!" she says. Her friends can hardly venture a conversational opening without eliciting her patient, "Well, we lost everything in 1929, you know," in reply.

Those thousands of other women the necessity of having some other person in their lives is the unendurable thing. If Mama, or Cousin Ella, or Grandpa was just—well, pleasantly settled somewhere else, the house would run so easily, there would be endless money!

Everyone of us has something—something small and annoying and burdensome, just the one thing of all others with which we feel ourselves least able to bear. Not a major sorrow—no one can rise to that. But just something—something that stands between us and the full sunlight.

It is a wise woman who learns to expect this small percentage of imperfection in her life, and accepts it. It is a stronger woman who learns that if it disappears in one form it will most certainly present itself in another. And it is the wise who without galling conditions of one sort or another. The real difficulty is perhaps that being imperfect ourselves we create imperfections in our separate schemes. Or perhaps our desire for the finer things of civilized life leave these gaps.

Whatever the cause, since a continually changing program of cares and troubles is an inescapable part of our lives it is sensible to train ourselves to bear them with dignity and courage, and to spare our friends as much of them as we can. There is no pleasure in the world like greeting a friend who has not known to be having difficult times and to realize that she is more than adequate to the situation of the making of her; to find her cheerful and resolute and busy where she expected to find her crushed and helpless.

Many, many years ago a fine old Englishman who used to live in our part of the California mountains told me that for a certain time in his life he used to turn his diary's pages three months ahead and write down specifically what was worrying him at the moment. He said it was a splendid habit—helping to work through the days and weeks to reach those entries, and discover that the tremendous anxiety and disappointment of April were forgotten completely in August. July has its own special set of humiliations and worries. The habit perhaps helped to make him the philosopher he became in old age, and nothing troubled him when I knew him, and it was he who gave me the phrase that I have said to myself almost every day for more than thirty-five years.

"To him that loveth God all things work together for good."

Do Not Mourn

Many persons particularly certain large tribes in South Africa, do not mourn or even regret the death of one who has been called by light-hearted to believe that he has been sent for by some heaven. Hence it would be to show any distress over the d a deity.

Mussel Fussy About Diet

The well-known California mussel can make a meal of fine silt, mud and clay, but, nevertheless, this crustacean is very particular about its diet. It scrupulously avoids such food that might poison it, although it sometimes partakes of organic life which poisons human beings.

Banks Hold the Bag

Nearly 60 per cent of the national debt of $34,500,000,000 is owed to the banks of the nation. According to Senator Glass, a drop of ten per cent in the price of government bonds would put 50 per cent of the banks out of business. He says the New Deal forces the banks to buy.

NOTICE OF MORTGAGE SALE

Whereas, default has been made in the payment of money secured by a mortgage dated the Twelfth day of October, A. D. 1935, executed by Andrew D. Gibson, a widower, of Keene Township, Ionia County, Michigan, to James L. Barker, as Receiver of Saranac State Bank, a Michigan Banking Corporation, in receivership, of Saranac, Michigan, which said mortgage was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for the County of Kent, in Liber 797 of Mortgages, at Page 389, on the 18th day of October, A. D. 1935, at 11:08 A. M.; And Whereas, said default has continued for the space of thirty days and the mortgagee has elected to, and does hereby elect to declare the full amount of principal and interest immediately due and payable according to the terms of said mortgage; And Whereas, the amount claimed to be due on said mortgage at the date of this notice is the sum of One Thousand Two Hundred Eleven and 71/100 Dollars ($1,211.71) for principal and interest, and the further sum of Thirty-five Dollars ($35.00) attorney fee stipulated for in said mortgage, the same also claimed to be due and unpaid hereon at the date hereof being the sum of One Thousand Two Hundred Forty-six and 71/100 Dollars ($1,246.71), and no suit or proceeding either at law or in equity having been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, whereby the power of sale contained in said mortgage has become operative;

Now, Therefore, Notice Is Hereby Given that by virtue of said power of sale and in pursuance of the Statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises hereinafter described, at public auction, to the highest bidder, at the South front door of the Court House in the City of Grand Rapids, in said County of Kent, (that being the place of holding the Circuit Court for the County of Kent) on Saturday, the Fourteenth day of November, A. D. 1936 at two o'clock P. M., Eastern Standard time, in the afternoon of that day, which said premises are described in said mortgage as follows, to-wit:

The parcels of land situated in the Township of Spencer, County of Kent, and State of Michigan, described as follows:

The West (W½) Half of the Southwest (SW¼) Quarter of Section Fourteen (14). Chiropractic starts with the known fact that all physical activity is carried on by means of nerve communication. The command to perform an act, and the motive power necessary to the performance are alike transmitted by nerves. Therefore, when bodily function fails, it is but logical to look for an interference with this flow of nerve force. Interference is found at the Spinal Column, where the main trunk line of nerves branches off from the Spinal Cord. The record of Chiropractic proves the hope for the suffering. Investigate. Learn for yourself what it can do for you.

Heed The Following Facts

The demand for coal, both industrial and domestic, is increasing daily.
Coal stocks are dangerously low.
Railroad facilities are already taxed to limit.
Many mines are sold up for weeks ahead.
Cold weather has just started.

Our yards at present are well stocked with all kinds and sizes of coal for immediate delivery, but we cannot guarantee how long coal supplies will be complete. Buy now at present low prices.

Fire Prevention Week

President Wilson first declared Fire Prevention Week a national event. This year it will come between Oct. 4 and 10.

Please observe that inspection by the fire department cannot include all of the houses in a town or city. The householder must be responsible for his own property.

Do not postpone until the winter season sets in an examination of the heating plant. Inflammable liquids ought to be thrown out, but if kept they should be stored properly. Household equipment using electricity or gas should be inspected to see whether it has in any way become faulty. Anything that might cause fire or explosion. Accumulations of rubbish, paper, clothing and other materials of this nature should be removed from cellars, closets and attics. Your slogan is Do Your Own Inspecting.

OBITUARY

James Bruce Walker

James Bruce Walker, son of Thomas Marr Walker and Clarissa Tallant Walker, was born in Lowell, Mich., April 4, 1869, and passed away Sept. 20, 1936.

The name, Bruce Walker, by which he was familiarly known, is synonymous in the minds of those who knew him, with rugged reliability, honesty, Christian manhood, quiet geniality and gentleness. His hands were clean. He sacrificed no principle or high ideal for personal gain, and scorning to stoop to co-erce, influence, or deceive by essaying to be politic, lived a life of utmost purity of purpose and character. He never forgot a friend and gave unselfishly of his time, effort and means to those struggling with adversity. Scholarly, he devoted much time to the study of good literature and found recreation in his gardens.

Bruce Walker's early boyhood was spent under most happy circumstances in Grand Rapids. His father, Thomas Walker, prominent riverman and lumberman, passed on when Bruce was 12 years old, and the manly, handsome boy took his place as head of the family.

Remaining in the city several years to give Bruce and his sisters the advantages of the city schools, the family then removed to Segwun to the home that remained in its possession after financial reverses had come. Bruce then entered Lowell high school under the superintendency of Wm. H. Chapman.

After leaving school he studied telegraphy and was agent at Waterford and Grand Rapids for the Grand Trunk Railroad Company. Later he took charge of the private railroad of the U. S. Gypsum Co. at Tawas. Some twelve years later he returned to Grand Rapids to be near the mother, whom he adored, during her last years.

Bruce Walker whose honesty was a constant rebuke to dishonesty, who, stalwart in truth and honor put perfidy and hypocrisy to shame, leaves a name whose fragrance lies like a sweet benediction on the hearts of those who mourn his passing.

Besides his many friends he leaves two sisters, Clara M. and Grace B. Walker, of Lowell.

You Pay

Taxes levied on manufacturers are a part of their cost of operation and are included in the price of their products. In the end you pay them. For example, one and two-third cents of the price of a loaf of bread is Federal taxes. It helps to pay the high cost of New Deal government.

Paying It Back

For each dollar any American farmer received from the Roosevelt administration he and his children will have to pay back nearly two and one-half dollars as their share of the money spent by the New Deal.

HOW

ATTAR OF ROSES IS MADE IN BIG COPPER RETORTS—In the making of attar of roses, petals, mixed with water, are sealed into great copper retorts heated by wood fires. During the first distillation, rose water trickles out through cool coils and a green oil rises like cream.

A single retort may hold half a ton of petals. Such a retort can be refilled five or six times between dawn and afternoon, when the second distillation begins; yet a battery of 12 retorts, working 24 hours a day during a 25-day season, produces only 200 pounds of attar.

If the dewy petals are held too long, they ferment and the oil is ruined. By four o'clock in the afternoon the last mixture of petals and water is drained off into a convenient brook, and the distilled rose water, from which the floating green oil has already been removed, is distilled again. From this second process a yellowish oil is obtained.

A blend of these two oils forms the base for the world's best perfumes. Attar of roses has a most persistent but not strong odor, does not readily evaporate or spoil, and is shipped in triple-sealed copper flasks shaped like flat-sided canteens.

How the Fox's Tail Got White Tip Is Revealed

Once upon a time an old German woman was seeking a shepherd to care for her flocks. But all the men and boys of the neighborhood were busy and could not help her, so she accepted the offer of a sly red fox. He claimed that he could care for the sheep as well as anyone, especially as he was very fond of them.

The old woman did not suspect his cunning and left him in the meadow each night. Each morning, the fox came to the old woman's cottage with the sad story that a wolf had eaten a sheep during the night. He seemed so sad that the old woman did not scold him.

Early one morning, muses a writer in the Los Angeles Times, as she was eating her breakfast, she decided to share some fresh cream with the fox. She took her pitcher and went to the meadow where she discovered the fox himself devouring one of her sheep. Very angry, she threw the cream at the thief, and as the tip of his tail was drenched with the liquid, it has been white from that day to this.

How British Empire Is Divided

The British empire occupies one-fourth of the world's land area and controls one-fifth of the world's people. Since England began to expand, less than three hundred years ago, the authority of the British rulers has spread to every continent, either by exploration, war, peaceful occupation, treaty, or purchase. The Union Jack also flies over numerous islands in each of the seven seas. While vacationists are sunning themselves on the beaches of half of the empire, vacationists in other half may be skiing and bobsledding on snow and ice, for the British lands are almost equally divided between the northern and southern hemisphere.

How Wooden Sponge Is Made

Wood pulp is treated with lye and carbon disulphide to give a viscose solution, a sirupy liquid that can be hardened by contact with acid solutions. By passing viscose through a fine hole into a hardening bath, rayon is formed. Cellophane is formed by passing it through a slit. The wooden sponge is made by mixing the viscose with crystals of a water-soluble substance and then treating the mass with dilute acid. This hardens the viscose and at the same time dissolves out the crystals, leaving a spongelike solid.

How Dog River Got Its Name

Dog river is a short distance from Beirut, Syria. The name is derived from the great stone dog—or perhaps it was an Assyrian bull—that once stood on the height overlooking the mouth of the river and the sea. The figure's head was hollow and when the wind blew from a certain direction the dog used to give forth howls, to the terror of the surrounding populace. The bravest man of the community finally got up enough courage to push the figure over the cliff's edge into the sea, where it is still visible at low tide.

How to Lacquer New Wood

Apply a wood filler before lacquering new wood to secure a finish that is entirely smooth. The filler is applied in the usual manner, being brushed on, the excess wiped off, the surface allowed to dry. Lacquer is applied with a soft hair brush and "flowed" on rather than stroked back and forth. It should smooth itself out and never be gone over a second time if it is possible to avoid it.

How to Open Oysters

Opening oysters is not always such an easy task. But here is a simple way of doing the job. Put a thin knife under the flat valve of the oyster and cut the adductor muscle that is there. Then the valve may be lifted up in such a way that it is quite separated from the lower valve that holds the oyster.

How Hospital Patients Increase

The number of patients admitted to all recognized hospitals in the United States in the latest available year was 7,147,416. Of these, 6,291,556 were admitted to general, while only 172,413 were admitted to nervous and mental institutions.

How to Thank for Funeral Flowers

The phrase "Mr. and Mrs. Blank and Family" is used on formal cards which one secures from an engraver and which are only in good taste when it is physically impossible to communicate individually with every one.

Who's Who in State

Work on the official "Who's Who in Michigan," a volume unique in the publication history of the state, has been completed and the book will be off the presses in a week, according to an announcement by the Editor, Herbert S. Case of Munising.

The volume will contain approximately 3,000 biographical sketches of the outstanding men and women leaders of the State today, selected from all walks of life on the merits of their contributions to the progress of Michigan.

The editor of the book is also editor and publisher of two Michigan newspapers, a vice president of the Michigan State Chamber of Commerce, founder of The Northern Sportsman magazine, and one of the five Michigan publishers on the National Freedom of The Press Committee of The Thomas Jefferson Memorial Foundation.

The Board of Editorial Councilors of "Who's Who in Michigan" is composed of William A. Comstock, James E. Davidson, Webster H. Pearce, T. Hawley Tapping, E. W. Thompson and Arthur D. Wood. About 100 other distinguished Michigan citizens have aided in the compilation of the book, including leaders in the fields of science, industry, art, education, etc.

Among those from Lowell who have been selected for a place in Michigan's "Who's Who" are M. N. Henry, C. H. Runciman and R. G. Jefferies.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank our neighbors and friends for their expressions of sympathy and acts of kindness in the passing of our loving mother; also Rev. F. Loomis for his words of kindness and Mrs. Earl and Mrs. Barry for their vocal renditions at the funeral.

NON-VOTERS

WHAT CAN you do, here in Lowell and elsewhere, with the great number of people who could vote, but refuse to do so, or who vote only very rarely?

Mrs. Grace Morrison Poole, past president of the General Federation of Women's clubs, said in a recent address that the "non-voter is responsible for most of the evils from which the country suffers." She suggested that the right to vote be taken away from the people who fail to exercise that privilege.

As this eminent lady says, the non-voter is responsible for many of our troubles. When the great causes of progress or decline, of honor or corruption, are at stake, he remains engrossed in his pribate affairs or forgets there is an election. When the trumpet call rings through the air for every good citizen to get out and help save his country, the non-voter was found asleep and didn't hear.

A good part of these folks are excellent citizens in other respects. We need their wisdom. We need to have them wake up and see the perils that threaten the country, so they shall rally to the flag and help us stem the tide of evil. Cutting them off the voting list might confirm them in their desire not to be disturbed by these mighty issues.

What we need is a campaign to convince these folks that it is their duty to exercise the voting privilege. We need organizaions of citizens going through their home towns, talking with every non-voter, finding out why he or she fails to vote, trying to rally such folks to the good cause. We need lessons in every school on the duty of voting, so the young people should come out with the idea that they should no more refuse to vote than they would refuse to aid their country in time of war.

The importance of these facts is emphasized when we realize that of the 1800 or more voters in Lowell township only one-fourth of that number participated in the recent September primary. The ration was nearly the same in neighboring townships.

COLUMBUS DAY

IN THE early hours of October 12, in the year 1492, the little expedition commanded by Christopher Columbus discovered an island in the West Indies which they called San Salvador. This discovery led to the settlement and development of our great country, and all the wonderful things that have happened here. The nation does well to honor that great memory by making that date a holiday.

Is there in all history an exploit so remarkable as that performed by this man Coumbus? He prepared himself for it by adventurous explorations along the coast of Africa. He became convinced that there was land on the other side of that mysterious ocean, which in the belief of that time had no end and no limits.

When Columbus formed that conviction, he was one man against all the science and experience of the world. In the popular view, an attempt to cross that forbidding ocean was about like the desire to explore that unknown sea which we call Death.

Columbus strugged on, harassed by poverty and baffled by skepticism. The force of his knowledge and persistence was finally so great that he assembled his expedition, and persuaded a crew of sailors to cross that great unknown. They finally rebelled, and cowering with fear, wanted to turn back. But Columbus, ever bold and forceful, induced them to keep on and on, until one morning the sun rose on the glories of an untarnished new world.

Have we any of that faith and courage left in America today? Do we still keep some of it here in Michigan? If we could only have some of that dauntless resolution, we should discover new continents in the realm of the spirit and of human knowledge, in which man should rise to new heights of happiness and welfare.

VIEW OF AUTUMN

ARE YOU a pessimist? If so, probably the autumnal months are a sad time for you. The falling leaves, the fading flowers, suggest decay and death of human life.

If you are an optimist, no season can be more cheerful. The glorious colors of fruits and trees are Nature's way of celebrating the harvest season. The world bursts into a splendor of color, as if singing a symphony which says that life is good, and man was meant to be happy. The life giving air pulsates through your vens, and you say you can go out into the world of effort and achieve great deeds.

The approaching winter should not be viewed as some great calamity, which settles down on the life of man. Rather it should be seen as a period of rest and refreshment, when the earth gains strength for the great effort of a coming spring and summer.

DEVALUING MONEY

THE FINANCIAL world has been shaken by the action of the French and other governments, in devaluing their money. The average person can't grasp it, and asks what it is all about.

Money is devalued when a country decides that its dollar, or whatever the money is called, shall not be worth so much in gold, or whatever metal it is based on. If the money is worth less, then it won't buy so much and prices rise.

When prices rise, the farmers and some other producers are helped because it is easier to pay their debts with their products. But the effect is hard on the people who depend on wages and salaries, since their cost of living goes up. Let us hope these countries will be able soon to fix a permanent and just value on money, so it won't keep the world disturbed by fluctuating up and down.

Action Expected By Local Bodies On Amendments

Joint Resolution May Be Passed Here

In the absence of a quorum the regular meeting of the Lowell Common Council scheduled for last Monday evening was adjourned to next Monday.

Nevertheless, with President John A. Arehart and Trustees Cook, Day and Christiansen present, decisions were reached on several questions, subject to ratification in regular session.

Phil Hartley asked protection for the property owner against dogs permitted to run at large and damage shrubbery, yards and gardens. President Arehart read the village ordinance on the subject, which provides only for the impounding of dogs which are untagged. Marshal Fred Gramer was instructed to consult Village Attorney R. M. Shivel regarding legal measures which might be taken to control destructive animals.

The purchase of an oil reclaimer for the deisel engines at the Municipal Light and Power Plant was discussed. The engines use approximately nine barrels of oil annually for lubrication. A reclaimer, purifying the oil for reuse, would affect a saving of about $230 worth of oil each year, it was maintained. The purifying machine most suitable to local needs would cost $650, although a smaller capacity machine is available for $350. Decision as to the purchase was placed by President Arehart in the hands of the Light & Power Committee and Supt. F. J. McMahon, with power to act.

By arrangement with Supt. W. W. Gumser, the village bleachers will be used in the basketball gymnasium at the new school unit this winter.

Mr. Gumser then discussed the constitutional amendments exempting foodstuffs from the sales tax and eliminating the tax on real property. Both, through diminished revenues available, will seriously curtail the activities of the public schools, if not ruin the Michigan public school system entirely, he declared. Mr. Gumser asked that the council go on record as opposed to the passage of these amendments. It was decided to wait until after the regular monthly meeting of the school board later in the week, when the opinion of both bodies may be expressed in a joint resolution.

Skull Fractured Kaufman Rallies

While working on the roof of the garage being constructed on the Earl Nash property on East Main-st., formerly the William Anderson residence, Walter Kaufman fell and sustained critical injuries, including a skull fracture, a double fracture of the left arm, serious injury to his left eye and other cuts and bruises. The accident occurred at 9:00 a. m. Saturday.

Bert Hawley, a fellow worker, called a physician and Mr. Kaufman was rushed to Blodgett hospital. The injured man's life was at first despaired of, and relatives were summoned to the bedside. Later, however, to the joy of Mr. Kaufman's hundreds of friends in this community, he rallied, and is making progress toward recovery at this writing. Mr. Kaufman's buddies of the American Legion have been particularly thoughtful in their efforts to lighten the burden of his suffering.

Ionia high school initiated its night football field last Friday night by defeating Lowell high, 13-6, before an estimated crowd of 1,000 fans. Ionia with a heavy experienced team, in spite of poor generalship, made large gains on the Lowell team, scoring in the first quarter and again toward the end of the game. Lowell showed improvement over last week and made the game interesting to watch with their fighting spirit. Ionia was completely fooled on several Lowell plays that were well executed and made the local team appear to be the better of the two teams despite the score. Poor charging and blocking were the overwhelming factors that lost the game for the home-town boys, but Coach Emery is emphasizing this part of the game in the forthcoming practices and with a lay off over the next week-end and two hard weeks of practice, the Lowell squad should put up a good game against the Lee team which is appearing very strong in conference playing.

Lowell high school's "B" team will play Greenville's "B" team this Friday night under the lights at Recreation Park, Lowell, at 7:30. Admission 15c to everybody.

Lee will meet the Lowell first team on Friday, Oct. 16, in a conference game.

She receives as state prize an all-expense trip from the Chicago Mail Order company, sponsor of the contest conducted in cooperation with extension agents. Miss Roark will model a "best dress" of yellow gold silk crepe, her sixth 4-H clothing project, which was valued at $10 and cost $4.09. Total cost of the outfit with accessories was $14.73.

Too Fast On Curve Car Is Demolished

Failure of their car to negotiate a curve on M-66 about a quarter mile north of the Lowell village limits, might have cost three people their lives Monday evening at 11:15 when the car, traveling south, left the road and crashed into two wooden poles carrying high tension wires from the village power plant and a tree on the L. A. Weaver property just south of the curve.

The occupants of the car were Spencer Mitchell of Saranac, R. 3, driver; Richard Lyons, Saranac, and Irene Speerstra of Lowell, none of whom were seriously injured. Mr. Mitchell told Deputy Frank Stephens, who investigated, that he was going too fast to make the curve. The car, a new one, was completely wrecked. It was reported to be owned by the Ionia County Infirmary and is said to have been loaned to Mr. Mitchell by his father-in-law who is superintendent of that instiution.

As a result of the accident, the village was cast into darkness for several minutes when the two poles struck by the car were knocked down, carrying wires charged with 2300 volts of electricity, with them. The local deisel engines were started within a few minutes while the employes of the light and power plant immediately began to clear up the wreckage.

This makes the second time within the past few weeks that motor cars have failed to travel around this curve, and have left the road, a previous instance occurring when two local boys narrowly missed these same electric light poles, with their car, which also ended up on the Weaver property.

Good Program At Kent Pomona

Kent County Pomona Grange was held at Kinney Grange hall Thursday, Oct. 1, with a large attendance. Seven new members were given the obligation in the Fifth Degree. On October 22, a large class of candidates from several subordinate Granges will be initiated in the Fifth Degree at the Silver Lake Grange hall. It will be an evening meeting.

Alto Grange was represented at Pomona Grange by Roland Depew, Master, Arba Wood and Mr. and Mrs. Newton Coons. Mrs. Stella Baker of Spencer Grange, lecturer of Pomona Grange, had a nice program prepared that was enjoyed by all. Part of the evening was devoted to a "song festival" contest, participated in by Spencer, Algoma and Courtland Granges. The Courtland Grange group was awarded the prize for best Kent County rendition and will compete at Sturgis in the song festival contest for state honors and awards at Michigan State Grange the week of October 27 to 30. Delegates elected to represent Kent County Pomona Grange at the State Grange at Stugis the last week of October are Cyrus H. Jasperse and Miss Madge Corstange, both of Paris Grange. Kent County delegates are Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Sowerby of Rockford, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Hull of Grattan Grange and Mr. and Mrs. Newton Coons of Alto Community Grange.

The Postal Savings Division of the Post Office Department is already at work preparing material to demonstrate the continued need of the system in anticipation of expected attacks in Congress. The argument of opponents, supported by banking interests, is that bank deposit insurance makes the postal savings system superfluous.

Former Depositors To Get $43,500

Dividend Is to Be Paid Soon; Alto Bank Also Makes Payment

Good news this week for depositors of Lowell's former banks, F. H. Swarthout, Liquidator of the City State Depositors Corporation and the Lowell State Depositors Corporation, announced to the Ledger this Thursday morning, the declaration and intended payment of a 10% liquidating dividend upon all outstanding Certificates of Indebtedness for each corporation. Checks in payment of such dividend will doubtless be ready within the next thirty days and will release to Lowell and vicinity the sum of approximately $43,500.00 in cash.

Such payment or release is made possible through the cooperation of a certain Detroit banking institution. Later notice in this and other papers will fix definite dates and advise requirements.

Upwards of 1600 persons will participate in the $43,500.00 distribution in sums ranging from as low as one dollar to several hundred dollars. When the 50% distribution was made on Aug. 20, 1934, a total of $435,000.00 was paid out.

Alto Bank Also in Line

The Farmers State Bank of Alto through its trustees also announces a 10% payment on certificates of participation. This makes two payments on certificates of participation, the first being Feb. 1, 1936 and the second payment was made payable Oct. 1, 1936.

Funeral Rites For Catholic Teacher Born in Grattan-tp.

Sister M. Aquinas Byrne, 62, supervisor for the last five years of high schools taught by the Dominican sisters of Marywood, died Thursday night at Marywood academy, Grand Rapids. She had been a teacher 37 years and was active until about a week ago.

Born at Grattan June 15, 1874, the daughter of William and Mary McGee Byrne, she entered the Dominican novitiate at St. John's Home in 1897, received her religious habit the next year and in 1900 made her first profession.

Survivors are a brother, Austin Byrne of Belding, and three sisters, Mrs. Chas. Farrell of Grand Rapids, Mrs. Kate A. McCarthy of Pine Bluff, Ark., and Mrs. Charles Collar of Lowell.

Funeral services were held at 9:30 Saturday morning at the Sacred Heart chapel, Marywood, Grand Rapids. Rev. T. W. Albin of St. Simon's church, Ludington, was the celebrant of the solemn high requiem mass. He was assisted by Rev. J. F. Drew as deacon and Rev. William V. Flannery as subdeacon. Rev. Raymond Baker was master of ceremonies.

Tentative Budget For Kent County Ready For Board

Some Higher, Lower Rate Is Likely

A county budget of $849,181.18 for 1937, compared with $842,276.37 for 1936, has been agreed upon tentatively by the county finance committee for presentation to the board of supervisors which meets in its annual budget session Oct. 12.

While the budget total, which includes restoration of half of the depression salary cuts of the county employes, is slightly higher than the 1936 budget, the tax rate likely will be lower, it was explained by the committee. The reason given was that only $488,011.77 of the total need be raised by taxation. The difference is to be taken out of the existing surplus.

Chairman John A. Collins explained the $488,011.77 represents the 2 mills allocated by the county allocation commission. It would be possible, said Collins, to continue on the 2-mill basis for at least another year, giving the benefit of the existing surplus to the taxpayers.

Salary increase averaging 10 per cent are included in the budget.

The general fund item is set up in the tentative budget at $466,134.77. Welfare items total $373,801.18, including $200,000 for contagious diseases, $125,000 for mothers' pensions and $48,801.18 for soldiers' relief. The soldiers' relief item represents the full .2 mill allowed under the law. The mothers' pension item is $5,000 below the 1936 figure. County parks are given the more or less standard sum of $21,877.

The budget includes a delinquent tax item of $100,000. Anticipated revenues are set at $150,000.

The county valuation for budget purposes is determined at $244,005,885. The tax rate this year was 2 mills.

More Books Added To Public Library

The Public Library has added another smaller list to its collection of new books. One that is sure to appeal to every lover of wild life is "Enos Mills of the Rockies," a biography of the famous guide and interpreter of the Rockies and an inspiring adventure story as well. Another book worth mentioning is "Beyond Sing the Woods" by Trygve Gulbranssen, which is described thus by one reviewer: "Something of the earthy richness of Knut Hanson's early books, something of the magic of old Norway that inspired Sigrid Undset, is in Trygve Gulbranssen's heart-warming and romantic novel, "Beyond Sing the Woods." The complete list follows:

East River, by Borden Chase; With Banners, by Emilie Loring; Mother of the Bride, by A. G. Rosman; The Graper Girls Go to College, by Elizabeth Corbett; So You Are Going to the Mediterranean, by C. E. Laughlin; Live Alone and Like It, by Marjorie Hillis; Beyond Sing the Woods, by Trygve Gulbranssen; The Way of a Trangressor, by Negley Farson; Enos Mills of the Rockies, by H. Hawthorne and E. B. Mills; Also three gift books: America Strikes Back, by Gustavus Myers; The Romance and Drama of the Rubber Industry, by H. S. Firestone, Jr.; Democratic Despotism, by R. E. Desvernine.

JOHN YOUNG GROCERY HAS NEW PROPRIETORS

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Boyd of Rockford have purchased the John Young grocery and general merchandise store in Segwun, taking possession on Oct. 1. For thirteen years Mr. and Mrs. Boyd were engaged in the general merchandise, bakery and restaurant business in the North Kent County city, and bring to their new enterprise a wealth of practical experience and buying knowledge. The business is being conducted along the lines of fair prices and courteous service which made the Young store a widely popular institution over a period of years. Mr. and Mrs. Young are living at the old Young residence on C-462. He has no immediate plans for re-entering business.

The acquisition of the permits of Central Coach Lines, operating between Lansing, Marshall, Coldwater and Ft. Wayne is announced by Short Way Lines, Inc., of Toledo, Ohio. The approval of the transfer, and actual start of operation was authorized by the Michigan Public Utilities Commission on Sept. 24, 1936.

The addition of this important 130 mile route increases the length of the interstate routes of Short Way to 868 miles. The coordination and consolidation of schedules will not only tend to improve existing service but will tie together the service to numerous important points in central and western Michigan. New coaches have been ordered and a general consolidation of terminals will be made.

Improved Roads Prime Factor In Town's Welfare

Kent's Park System Is Among Finest

Lowell's reputation as a good place to trade, a live town and market, easily accessible via improved roads, was stressed as a prime factor in community prosperity by Engineer-Manager Otto S. Hess of the Kent County Road Commission, at the Wednesday noon luncheon of the local Rotary Club.

To maintain this advantage, communicating highways must not only be kept up, but constantly improved to meet increasing traffic hazards, Mr. Hess continued.

The present statutory allocation of tax funds leaves neither Kent nor any other Michigan county any considerable money for highway construction. The remedying of this situation, predicated upon public safety and the sound economics of unhampered commercial intercourse, is the principal problem facing leaders in highway development, the speaker concluded.

1937 Kent Highways

Kent County, however, may next year have $75,000, under a supervisors' resolution available for road construction. The sum may be supplemented by contributions from the townships, Mr. Hess declared.

An outgrown road system is ultimately accountable for a good share of the traffic accidents, Mr. Hess pointed out. Also, high speed cars equipped with balloon tires, operated on gravel, have skyrocketed maintenance costs. Double the former amount of calcium chloride is now needed to lay the dust on a gravel stretch during the dry summer months, it was asserted. An economical method of "tieing-down" gravel surfaces was cited as a needed development in highway chemistry by the speaker. Black-topping seems the best method available under present circumstances. Since one-half of Kent County's 1200 miles of roads are dirt trails, surfacing is an important item.

The McNitt law and the Horton Act, passed by the 1931 Michigan Legislature, were enacted as tax relief measures, not for highway improvement primarily, it was said. As they have functioned, revenues have been cut through the weight-tax reduction, and public duties formerly assigned to other departments of government, have been placed on the shoulders of the highway bureaus.

Practically all Michigan road construction since 1931 has been in collaboration with the federal government in various welfare measures. While not criticising the aims and purposes of the work relief plans, Mr. Hess deplored the multiplied labor costs, speaking from the standpoint of a highway engineer.

In keeping with the nippy fall weather, Mr. Hess ventured a sly weather prediction when he recalled the morning last winter when twelve motorized snowplows were completely lost, submerged in drifting snow. It was two days before several of the drivers and their machines were located.

Palmer Talks Parks

The second speaker secured by Program Chairman Donald A. McPherson was Linus Palmer, also of the Kent County Road Commission. Mr. Palmer traced in absorbing fashion the growth and development of the Kent County system of eleven parks, considered among the finest in the middle west.

He urged that the State Highway Department establish on trunk lines at one hundred mile intervals a series of parks similar to Gordon Park, a tract south of Sand Lake and north of Cedar Springs. The highway department has provided abundantly for roadside tourist conveniences but small ratcts are desirable for the safe exercise of children and pets, an almost invariable adjunct of the modern motoring American family, Mr. Palmer said.

The current annual appropriation of $23,000, compared with urban costs, provides excellent upkeep at minimum expense for the Kent County Park System, he concluded.

Ram Truck To Stop At Lowell, Oct. 17

The ram truck operated by the Michigan Pure Bred Sheep Breeders' Association will stop at Recreation Park on Saturday afternoon, Oct. 17, K. K. Vining, Kent County Agricultural agent, has announced. Sheep owners having purebred rams with papers may make exchanges if the rams are of the right kind. Farmers wanting rams are urged by Mr. Viming to visit the truck.

F. F. A. OFFICERS ELECTED

The Agricultural department of Lowell high school elected the following officers for the F. F. A. at their first meeting: President, Raymond Denny; vice president, James Jasperse; secretary, Allen Roth, and treasurer, Donald Anderson.

Here they are: One radio to 17 persons, one telephone to 35 persons, one auto to 59 persons, only $69 of life insurance per person, and only two families in 15 have electric service.

Thurston Wells lived a mile from the church at McIntyre's Corners, Tuscola county, which he liked to attend, but he did not like to walk. He sat down to take stock of his belongings and this is what he had in the way of vehicles: Horses—none. Buggies—none. Saddles—one. Bulls—one. Ideas—one. Why not saddle the bull? People waiting outside the church used to melt inside the building when Thurston rode up, and stay there until he had tied his bull securely. A few of those peope are still around. Anyway, that's how Thurston Wells went to church, Sunday after Sunday.

SOCIAL SECURITY

THE NEW social security law, providing unemployment benefits and annuities in old age pensions, is an issue in the present political campaign. It should not become an issue for football to be kicked all over the field. The need of needy and unfortunate folks is a responsibility that has been laid on the nation.

The present law was passed in a hurry, and probably is to be accumulated for the proposed reserves, they may say the payments are too great.

It is not clear that a vast reserve could be accumulated for the payment of these benefits in future years, without exerting too much of a temptation to politicians to spend the money. Anyways, the American people must settle the principle of the law, and each whichever party stands in with election, that it will be so amended as to remedy valid objections.

Honors for Ada Boy

Edward Cramton of Ada, dairy livestock club member and leader of the Ada Community 4-H Club, is one of two boys who were chosen as winners in the essay contest sponsored by the Michigan Milk Producers Association to go to Dallas, Tex., to the National Dairy Show and the Texas Centennial Exposition.

Edward was selected several trips since the boys made in July to Milk Marketing plants in various Michigan cities. Over 60 dairy club members who are carrying projects in dairy cattle work participated in the contest.

The Michigan delegation will leave Oct. 8 and return Oct. 17.

SWALLOWS HOMEWARD FLY

A BEAUTIFUL old song tells of the swallows flying southward homeward fly." It is quite at a sight to see those swallows assemble, sitting on some telephone wire in a twittering convention, evidently considering the great southern migration they are about to make. What moves them all at once to flock together, and apparently consult with each other, about this journey of thousands of miles they are about to take?

We shall never know what lies in that little head, but some instinct tells these wise little creatures that need to fly in flocks, which may have a leader for us humans. We too can't do the greater things of life alone. We have to get together in flocks and unite our energies in combined movements to win the aims we have in view.

"GETTING BY"

ONE OF THE difficulties of business, is that so many people are satisfied if they can just "get by." If they can work well enough to draw their pay, and provide goods enough so for the time being the public will buy them, they do not worry.

People who seek merely to "get by," keep finding themselves up against some new situation they had not calculated on. The employer finds such workers unsatisfactory, and they lose their jobs. The customer finds the goods don't suit, and the trade goes elsewhere. There is no way to be sure of holding a job and of retaining trade, but to rise above the "get by" idea, and determine to render the best service possible. The one who excels, beats the one who just "gets by."

HOME TOWN THOUGHTS

If you want money, prepare and resolve to render some kind of service that is worth money.

If you want to share whatever success your home town achieves, show you are entitled to that share by spending your money at home so far as possible.

If you want your fair share of the country's prosperity, don't expect to get it unless you tell the people by advertising what you have to sell.

I would like to add at this time some comments on the conduct of children in the matter of school bus transportation. They must be taught to heed the patrols, to obey the driver, and observe classroom conduct in the bus.

Parents should instruct their children accordingly. Their manners must be taught to them by their teachers and every one of them should be so instructed that he knows what is expected of him.

Pupils should be on time in the morning to avoid delaying the bus; they should never stand in the road while waiting for a bus; they should not carry on unnecessary conversation with the driver of the bus; they should never throw waste paper or rubbish on the floor of the bus; they should never extend their arms or heads out the windows; they should report to the driver at once any damage done to the bus.

Obey the driver of the bus, children! He is your guide and safety advisor while on the bus.

Three Rivers, Mich.
Oct. 5, 1936

Editor, The Lowell Ledger,
Dear Sir:

Well, I see the State Democrats got together down at Battle Creek and picked their losers for November election. An' they didn't give Michigan's most versatile all-born player—Mr. Welsh—a chance to share in their coming defeat.

Empty though the honor might be, I'd like to have seen George get a slice of it. After all, when he was defeated in the Primary by Mr. Murphy—(I'll take Murphy)—he agreed to help. And then they put the old varnished comfortable over him so he can't be one of the losers—and him so used to it!!

I haven't studied over the Democratic Ticket much. I see a Mr. Starr of Grand Rapids was named to run for some office. Mr. Starr is a fine man. They're evidently why they think he's competent. I never heard of the other candidates—but probably were selected on their respective abilities to assimilate punishment. They're glutons for it—them Demmycrats.

Further, after all there it is the month of October.

I was standing down on the long bridge over the old millpond there this morning. The usually placid surface was all riffled up by a wind with a tinge of rawness in it—and below the bridge—puttering around—was a lone gallinole—(some call 'em hell-divers).

Then it struck me first frost had dropped the leaves of the pond-lilies. A rain from the Kent, State of Michigan.

overcast skies stippled the water of the channel. Over on the bank by Champlin's Woods the floppy-paper-like skeletons of two dark-house were mouldering. On the telephone wires over the bridge a dozen swallows were sitting—looking very doleful. A long-legged crane winged its lonely way. Everything was pretty depressing.

And I stood there I realized that Fall was upon us. There'll be bright days of Indian summer yet—when the sunlight glints on cobwebs. But it won't be long before that pond and the Cranberry Swamp are frozen over. Then the small boys will skate around with shiny skates, mummy noses and burn off the gaunt cattails in Carter's Cove.

And then—my friends—what will become of that Lone Gallinoole?

That's what I wondered as I stood there, and I felt mighty sad about it, too. But a little later I got philosophical. I know now that a kind Providence will take care of it. And I know it'll be the same in my sympathetic feeling about Mr. Welsh. The Gods of Politics will take care of him. And, after November, for Mr. Murphy. I will wing his way—like the crane—with protesting cries—back to the Philippines.

So, why should we be sad and worried about these Demmycrats—and Gallinoodles?

yrs (sgd) Chet Shafer.

First and last, a Humanitarian.

P. S.—And, after all, what we're doin' for, as near as I've been able to figure, is the right t' eat our buckwheat pancakes with maple syrup—and take a bite and find out that somebody's mixed some shellac in with it.

Possible Solution Of Farm Surpluses

A possible solution to the problem of farm surpluses is to be found in the increased use of farm products by industry, it is indicated in a new sound slide film, "Farms of the Future," produced by the Ford Motor Company.

The picture, just released to local Ford dealers, is available through them to schools, clubs and farm organizations anywhere in the country.

"Farms of the Future" includes a treatment of the story of the soy bean, showing the early experiments with a variety of farm crops which led finally to the selection of the soy bean for continued experimentation in the Ford laboratories. Progress in the development of the soy bean as a source of raw material, use of a simplified plant for extraction of oil from the bean, and production of automobile parts from soy bean meal are shown.

Agricultural "over-production," farm and factory interdependence, and future possibilities of farm crop conversion into raw materials are among the subjects treated in the film. Also included is a dramatization of the natural partnership of agriculture and industry, the mutual interests of the farmer and the industrialist being portrayed.

The film's consideration of the problem of farm surpluses introduces the belief of Henry Ford that this problem will eventually be solved through the use of farm crops in the world's industries. As an indication of what may lie ahead, the film presents a pictorial summary of that which has already been accomplished by scientific research in the realm of farm crop conversion.

Tremendous Trifles

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

SPEEDOMETER

"STEP on it, boy!" And the needle on the speedometer climbs up—up—up—fifty—sixty—seventy miles an hour!

It wasn't thus back in 1846 when Brigham Young was leading his Mormon colony across the plains to Utah. Then the wagon trains crawled painfully along and eighty miles was a day's journey.

Somewhere in Nebraska the Mormon leader pushed on to find the best route, leaving the slower-moving wagons behind to follow along the trail which he would mark out for them. One of these parties was in charge of a young fellow named William Clayton.

A long road and weary road it was for the westward-faring homeseekers. Their goal seemed so far distant and they probably pestered young William Clayton a great deal with their questions of "How far have we come today?"

So, being an ingenious young man, he devised a way to answer. He measured a mile on the trail that they traversed one day, then marked a wagon wheel at a certain point on its circumference. Keeping his eye on the marked spoke he counted its revolutions to the mile. Next he devised a ratchet which moved a cogwheel that registered accurately the distance the caravan traveled daily. That same principle is used in speedometers today.

The MARCH of POLITICS

By JOHN H. O'BRIEN

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg turned aside for a moment from the discussions he has been making of national issues and settled once and for all the mysterious charges of Frank Murphy that Vandenberg had nothing to do with the preparation, discussion, or passage of the Vandenberg Amendment guaranteeing bank deposits.

The charges are mysterious because they do not seem to serve any useful purpose for either Frank Murphy or the Democratic party. It was generally assumed, and still is, that Vandenberg favored the bill, fought for it, and that it was named after him. There was no doubt in anybody's mind at the time that at least he was showing some interest in the bill. Murphy, for some unaccountable reason, has been going about denying that the Senator had anything to do with it. What all this has to do with the profitness of Murphy for the governorship of Michigan nobody knows, except Murphy, if he does.

At the end of his Grand Rapids speech, Senator Vandenberg took a few moments to apply the buzzsaw to Murphy. After stating that he did not blame Murphy for his ignorance because he was 10,000 miles away at the time, Vandenberg went on to cite chapter and verse to show that not only was he for it, but President Roosevelt was for it and the most powerful opponent.

Quoted Senator Glass, speaking in the Senate: "When it was first proposed to establish the insurance-deposit fund, the President and Secretary of the Treasury Woodin were completely and bitterly opposed to it. They said they would not stand for it."

Vandenberg said that he wrote the amendment to create immediate insurance and it was adopted certain. At the conference between the House and Senate on the banking bill a letter from Roosevelt was received demanding that the amendment be eliminated.

Next quotation Vandenberg cited, from a speech delivered by Representative Steagall of Alabama, Democrat, in which he considered him the "father of the Vandenberg amendment." Said Steagall:

"Mr. Chairman, I call attention to the fact that the Comptroller of the Currency, wrote to Vandenberg, 'You have rendered a great service to the country in connection with the banking act.'"

After citing these facts and opinions Vandenberg concluded:

"Enough is enough. Personal credits are of no moment. But facts are always important. I have simply wanted to demonstrate to Mr. Murphy's audiences that all is not dew that glitters in the sunshine; and to Mr. Murphy himself that he would not believe everything Washington tells him to say in this campaign."

Murphy may well take a lesson from his experience with the deposit insurance amendment issue if it ever could be called an issue. It should teach him, in the first place, to talk about something he knows preferably through his own experience, and in the second place, not to tangle again with Senator Vandenberg. We don't expect to hear any more about this matter during the campaign.

COTTAGE CHEESE

U. S. Dept. of Agriculture Circular 109 says: "In food value Cottage Cheese is in the class with lean meat and eggs, being richer than milk either in material for body uses or to build muscle, blood and bone. Cottage Cheese is, in fact, a food that when eaten alone or in combination, may form an important part of the diet. In sour cream, medium fat, Cottage Cheese may be used to advantage. As a basis for the main dish of the meal, it will materially reduce expenses, appeal to the appetite and save meat."

MISLEADING

We hate to get peeved, but we do sometimes. One of our pet peeves right now is hearing a national speaker over the radio giving credit to President Roosevelt for bank deposit insurance. The record will show, and most people know that Senator Vandenberg of Michigan wrote the bank deposit insurance law and forced its passage in the face of fact that President Roosevelt opposed the law. All that is a matter of record, and a man with intelligence enough to make a political speech should be aware of the fact. One can only reach the conclusion the speakers who give Mr. Roosevelt credit for the law are dishonest and are deliberately trying to mislead the voters.—Cadillac Evening News.

FLY

A young man went to Australia against his father's wishes. In one year home he wrote: "I now bought a car; first feather in my cap."

In another he wrote: "I have bought a farm; another feather in my cap."

This went on for some time and always the son a letter finished with "another feather in ry cap."

Later the father received a letter from the son. And, alas! it was broke; please send passage home."

The father replied: "Nothing doing. Take the feathers from your cap, stick them on your back and fly home."

"Do you think women should study law?"

"No," said Miss Cayenne. "Men can look after the law. All a clever woman needs to do is to supervise the authority."

The Main Requisite

"Do you have to have talent to make a living at writing jokes?" asked the fair one.

Coming Up

"How would you like your eggs served, sir?"

"Is there any difference in price?"

"None whatever, sir."

"Then serve it on a thick slice of ham."

Relief Obligation

Gov. Landon's philosophy is that relief to the unemployed is not a privilege or a vested right, or charity. He told the Kansas legislature that it is a common obligation created by the rapidity and complexity of economic growth.

Wireless rays may be a mile long, while X-rays are shorter than atoms.

Unemployment on Farms

Why has Washington refused to make an unemployment census now? Because the greatest unemployment exists on the farms, and the gentleman sitting in the White House and his Brain Trust were deliberately throwing men out of work by their agricultural policies.

Mrs. Clyde Condon

Mrs. Agnes Dickens, aged 55, died Friday, October 2 at the home of her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Bentley Smith, who have tenderly cared for her the past several months after she became ill with a fatal affliction. She had lived nearly her entire life east of Moseley and Whites Bridge vicinity. She leaves this daughter Essie Vandenbrook Smith, three grandchildren and an adopted son, Vernon Dickens. Funeral services, conducted by Rev. Loomis, were held Monday afternoon at the home and at the Maccabee Hall in Smyrna of which she was a member. Burial in Alton cemetery.

Albert and Fred Blaser and C. O. Condon have begun their apple harvest.

Alice Winegier came Tuesday to help Mr. and Mrs. Fred Blaser with their apple harvest and will stay with her sister, Mrs. Gust Winegier.

The little son of Mr. and Mrs. Judd Clark has been ill this week. Several from here attended the funeral services for Agnes Dickens Monday.

Mrs. Lucy Blaser spent from Sunday until Thursday last week with Dr. and Mrs. Hapeman in Lansing. Miss Albertine spent the latter part of the week there. Both of them were having dental work done.

Mr. and Mrs. Victor Johnson of Sparta were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Billy Condon.

Mrs. Kirk Ford came Friday from Stanton with Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ford and spent until Sunday with her sister, Mrs. Dorus Church. Her husband, Kirk Ford, Mrs. and Mrs. Leon Ford drove down Sunday and took her home.

Marie Wilson and Tom Condon called at the Billy and Clyde Condon home Thursday.

A little daughter arrived recently at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Larry Cino (nee Alice Purdy) and has been named Sarah Ann.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Baird and Mrs. Hazel Baird were week end guests in Flint at the Charles Baird, Glen Condon and Frank Reynolds homes.

Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Thompson of Rockford were Sunday afternoon visitors of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Vandenbrocek.

Alton Community is having its fourth annual Homecoming next Sunday at the church. You are asked to bring sandwiches and one dish to pass. Coffee and table service will be furnished. Program in charge of Rev. S. B. Wenger at 2:30 o'clock. Rev. Rennells of Hickory Corners will be one of the speakers. Come and meet your old friends and relate some childhood experience.

DON'T WORRY FRIENDS WITH PERSONAL TROUBLES

Janet first tells you she can't afford the trip or the matinee or the hair-do and then proceeds to indulge in all of these.

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

IT IS a strange truth about our muddled lives that usually there is just one thing that is worrying us profoundly. If that ONE thing could be settled or changed everything would be wonderful!

The simplicity with which women admit this would be funny if it weren't somehow so pathetic. They go on from school days to young womanhood, from bridal hours to the serious business of homemaking and child-bearing, from youth to age, eternally explaining that it is just this or just that, that is keeping their minds from being completely at rest.

We never seem smart enough to learn that it always will be this way. Then even when the last hour of all arrives, and the children and grandchildren are long parting, and the doctors are packing up their little bags to go on to the next case, that there will be still just that one thing between us and peace—one child or grandchild about whom to worry, one unwritten letter or undelivered message to haunt us as we start on the long journey.

Lucy, for example, doesn't like the Morrison house. Lucy married Harry Morrison seventeen years ago, and his parents gave them the big, ugly comfortable old place for their home. Lucy's children have been born there, they've had Christmas trees and measles and birthdays and picnics, they've turned the old sewing room into a sleeping porch and put in extension telephones and radios and new bathrooms, but still Lucie doesn't like the Morrison house! "We're still in that dreadful old red shingled monstrosity," said Lucy to me in July, when she had been married about a year. "You know we're still in the old place, and it never will seem like home to me!" And I told her again last week, when I met her in the market.

Janet, on the other hand, has lived in all sorts of fascinating houses and countries. But Janet never has enough money. She always forgets for one second that she and Tom haven't enough money. If she goes abroad she explains that it is a scandalized aside; "Imagine boggars like us on the 'Paris!'" If they stay at home every time a cousin in every subject upon which Janet's brilliant conversation touches is the money phase. Her daughters have been well educated in private schools. "Don't ask me how we did it," says Janet, "for, of course, we're miles in debt!" Whether she has one servant or seven Janet is always poor. She first tells you that she can't afford the trip or the matinee or the hair-do, and then proceeds to indulge in them. She never gives a penny to charity, "because we simply haven't got it!"

Those who love Janet get sick of the topic of money. What her bridge losses were, what her doctor bills were, what she has to spend to get what Nancy's teeth-straightening is costing, what opera seats are—these are all apt subjects for her. For thirty years she has had no other topic of conversation, or rather all topics have led up to this one. "My dear, if I had enough money I'd be the happiest woman in the world!" Janet says.

Mary's trouble is Jacky. Her other four children are perfect specimens, but poor Jacky is nervous and devoted and charming, married sisters and her mother live near, and adore her—but to Mary Jacky stares there is always the tragedy of Jacky. Something in Jacky's bone-structure is wrong, and Jacky, nine years old now, will never walk.

He is content, busy, he works and studies and laughs and makes models of ships and airplanes and reads about Nils and Tarzan and Mowgli like any other boy; everything seems in the family adjusted, Jacky is a completely happy child. But Mary can't leave it that way. "Why did God send me so much and then give me this bitter cross!" she asks her friends, over and over again. "I could have given him up to death. But to have my beautiful baby crippled—never to play football and run and swim and race with the others! It's too much. I wish I had never married, and never had a child!"

Unhappiness of persons in those five years have made their one individual grievance the bad luck of 1929. Things are going better now and they are eating and sleeping comfortably; everyone has somehow gotten through. But they can't

NOTICE, LEDGER READERS

Friends of The Ledger and Allied Solo having business in the Probate Court of Kent County will confer a favor on the publisher by requesting the court to order probate notices published in this paper. The Court will be glad to comply with the request when made. Respectfully,

R. G. Jefferies, Pub. Ledger.

Canada held the title to a total debt of $94,000,000,000 to owed to the banks of the nation. According to Senator Glass, a drop of ten per cent in the price of government bonds would put 90 per cent of the banks out of business. He says the New Deal forces the banks to buy.

HOW

ATTAR OF ROSES IS MADE IN BIG COPPER RETORTS.—In the making of attar of roses, petals, mixed with water, are sealed into great copper retorts heated by wood fires. During the first distillation, rose water trickles out through cool coils and a green oil rises like cream.

A single retort may hold half a ton of petals. Such a retort can be refilled five or six times between dawn and afternoon, when the second distillation begins; yet a battery of 12 retorts, working 24 hours a day during a 25-day season, produces only 200 pounds of attar.

If the dewy petals are held too long, they ferment and the oil is ruined. By four o'clock in the afternoon the last mixture of petals and water is drained off into a convenient brook, and the distilled rose water, from which the floating green oil has already been removed, is distilled again. From this second process a yellowish oil is obtained.

A blend of these two oils forms the base for the world's best perfumes. Attar of roses has a most persistent but not strong odor, does not readily evaporate or spoil, and is shipped in triple-sealed copper flasks shaped like flat-sided canteens.

Once upon a time an old German woman was seeking a shepherd to care for her flocks. But all the men and boys of the neighborhood were busy and could not help her, so she accepted the offer of a sly red fox. He claimed that he could care for the sheep as well as anyone, especially as he was very fond of them.

The old woman did not suspect his cunning and left him in the meadow each night. Each morning, the fox came to the old woman's cottage with the sad story that a wolf had eaten a sheep during the night. He seemed so sad that the old woman did not scold him.

Early one morning, muses a writer in the Los Angeles Times, as she was eating her breakfast, she decided to share some fresh cream with the fox. She took her pitcher and went to the meadow where she discovered the fox himself devouring one of her sheep. Very angry, she threw the cream at the thief, and as the tip of his tail was drenched with the liquid, it has been white from that day to this.

How British Empire Is Divided

The British empire occupies one-fourth of the world's land area and controls one-fifth of the world's people. Since England began to expand, less than three hundred years ago, the authority of the British rulers has spread to every continent, either by exploration, war, peaceful occupation, treaty, or purchase. The Union Jack also flies over numerous islands in each of the seven seas. While vacationists are sunning themselves on the beaches of half of the empire, vacationists in other half may be skiing and bobsledding on snow and ice, for the British lands are almost equally divided between the northern and southern hemisphere.

How Wooden Sponge Is Made

Wood pulp is treated with lye and carbon disulphide to give a viscose solution, a sirupy liquid that can be hardened by contact with acid solutions. By passing viscose through a fine hole into a hardening bath, rayon is formed. Cellophane is formed by passing it through a slit. The wooden sponge is made by mixing the viscose with crystals of a water-soluble substance and then treating the mass with dilute acid. This hardens the viscose and at the same time dissolves out the crystals, leaving a spongelike solid.

How Dog River Got Its Name

Dog river is a short distance from Beirut, Syria. The name is derived from the great stone dog—or perhaps it was an Assyrian bull—that once stood on the height overlooking the mouth of the river and the sea. The figure's head was hollow, and when the wind blew from a certain direction the dog used to give forth howls, to the terror of the surrounding populace. The bravest man of the community finally got up enough courage to push the figure over the cliff's edge into the sea, where it is still visible at low tide.

How to Lacquer New Wood

Apply a wood filler before lacquering new wood to secure a finish that is entirely smooth. The filler is applied in the usual manner, being brushed on, the excess wiped off, the surface allowed to dry. Lacquer is applied with a soft hair brush and "flowed" on rather than stroked back and forth. It should smooth itself out and never be gone over a second time if it is possible to avoid it.

How to Open Oysters

Opening oysters is not always such an easy task. But here is a simple way of doing the job. Put a thin knife under the flat valve of the oyster and cut the adductor muscle that is there. Then the valve may be lifted up in such a way that it is quite separated from the lower valve that holds the oyster.

How Hospital Patients Increase

The number of patients admitted to all recognized hospitals in the United States in the latest available year was 7,147,416. Of these, 6,291,556 were admitted to general, while only 172,415 were admitted to nervous and mental institutions.

Who's Who in State

Work on the official "Who's Who in Michigan," a volume unique in the publication history of the state, has been completed and the book will be off the presses in a week, according to an announcement by the Editor, Herbert S. Case of Munising.

The volume will contain approximately 3,000 biographical sketches of the outstanding men and women leaders of the State today, selected from all walks of life on the merits of their contributions to the progress of Michigan.

The editor of the book is also editor and publisher of two Michigan newspapers, a vice president of the Michigan State Chamber of Commerce, founder of The Northern Sportsman magazine, and one of the five Michigan publishers on the National Freedom of The Press Committee of The Thomas Jefferson Memorial Foundation.

The Board of Editorial Councilors of "Who's Who in Michigan" is composed of William A. Comstock, James E. Davidson, Webster H. Pearce, T. Hawley Tapping, E. W. Thompson and Arthur D. Wood. About 100 other distinguished Michigan citizens have aided in the compilation of the book, including leaders in the fields of science, industry, art, education, etc.

Among those from Lowell who have been selected for a place in Michigan's "Who's Who" are M. N. Henry, C. H. Runciman and R. G. Jefferies.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank our neighbors and friends for their expressions of sympathy and acts of kindness in the passing of our loving mother; also Rev. F. Loomis for his words of kindness and Mrs. Earl and Mrs. Barry for their vocal renditions at the funeral.

OBITUARY

James Bruce Walker

James Bruce Walker, son of Thomas Marr Walker and Clarissa Tallant Walker, was born in Lowell, Mich., April 4, 1869, and passed away Sept. 20, 1936.

The name, Bruce Walker, by which he was familiarly known, is synonymous in the minds of those who knew him, with rugged reliability, honesty, Christian manhood, quiet geniality and gentleness. His hands were clean. He sacrificed no principle or high ideal for personal gain, and scorning to stoop to co-erce, influence, or deceive by essaying to be politic, lived a life of utmost purity of purpose and character. He never forgot a friend and gave unselfishly of his time, effort and means to those struggling with adversity. Scholarly, he devoted much time to the study of good literature and found recreation in his gardens.

Bruce Walker's early boyhood was spent under most happy circumstances in Grand Rapids. His father, Thomas Walker, prominent riverman and lumberman, passed on when Bruce was 12 years old, and the manly, handsome boy took his place as head of the family.

Remaining in the city several years to give Bruce and his sisters the advantages of the city schools, the family then removed to Segwun to the home that remained in its possession after financial reverses had come. Bruce then entered Lowell high school under the superintendency of Wm. H. Chapman.

After leaving school he studied telegraphy and was agent at Waterford and Grand Rapids for the Grand Trunk Railroad Company. Later he took charge of the private railroad of the U. S. Gypsum Co. at Tawas. Some twelve years later he returned to Grand Rapids to be near the mother, whom he adored, during her last years.

Bruce Walker whose honesty was a constant rebuke to dishonesty, who, stalwart in truth and honor put perfidy and hypocrisy to shame, leaves a name whose fragrance lies like a sweet benediction on the hearts of those who mourn his passing.

Besides his many friends he leaves two sisters, Clara M. and Grace B. Walker, of Lowell.

You Pay

Taxes levied on manufacturers are a part of their cost of operation and are included in the price of their products. In the end you pay them. For example, one and two-third cents of the price of a loaf of bread is Federal taxes. It helps to pay the high cost of New Deal government.

Paying It Back

For each dollar any American farmer received from the Roosevelt administration he and his children will have to pay back nearly two and one-half dollars as their share of the money spent by the New Deal.
