BANISH THE DISH TOWEL

The figure of death is usually portrayed in a winding sheet but the Journal of the American Medical Association would substitute the dish towel.

Certainly the use of drying tableware is responsible for the transmission of such organisms as hemolytic streptococci, pneumococci, diphtheria bacilli, colic bacilli and diphtheria bacilli. The danger, of course, is greatest in restaurants and public eating places than in the home.

Just how ineffective is the method of sterilization ordinarily practiced was disclosed by a recent survey conducted in Peterboro, Ont. Investigators rubbed sterile wash water over silver and glassware following their "cleaning" and, as a result, collected more than 100 organisms. Riley waters from 18 eating places and beverage parlors.

Ninety percent of the specimens showed disease-bearing organisms. It was assumed that a count of 100 bacteria was an allowable maximum but some of the specimens showed counts as high as 20,000.

Certain recommendations for improving conditions were made to the proprietors of the eating and drinking places. These included the installation of double sinks, one for washing and one for rinsing. Each sink was to contain a solution of chlorine. A simple and inexpensive sterilizing agent in a concentration of 100 parts to 1,000,000 of water.

The results are reported as gratifying. Only four specimens of wash water were found to contain more than 1,000 bacilli. In all but one case, identical wash water yielded less than 100 organisms each. The bacilli had completely disappeared.

The investigators are turning their attention to another method for controlling the spread of communicable diseases—short forceps for use in local legislation which health officers would undertake to enforce.

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

EVERY husband was an unselfish angel, wives wouldn't often be confused with questions of where their own duty lay.

If every mother and father considered their growing children as individuals, with separate entities and rights, how much simpler the paths of those children would be!

In short, if men and women weren't faulty, stupid, blind men bringing at all, but strong, self-reliant, self-asserting super-men and women, my flogging-bud would be considerably lightened of the problems young wives and sons and daughters write me, as they attempt to adjust life to suit themselves, and themselves to get along in life.

One of the eternally unsettled questions is how much a daughter owes her father and mother when she becomes a money-earner and she is setting up for herself. "Phillips" describes her perplexities in a spirited letter.

"I have been married six years," writes Phillips, "and have a son of four and another baby coming. My father-in-law is very old and whether that a profession that actually affects the nerves, or whether it is an eye problem, or whether it is a little at a time to mixure. Best well, milk, nutra raisins. Drop by apothecary on corner of Main and 400 degrees. Yield: 2160 kinds.

To polish silver, drop it into a pan of soapy milk, leave for 1/2 hour, remove, wash with clean water, drop of lemon juice will make cream white more quickly and easily. Have a good supply of quantities and allowed to dry out, and in my father's case, he has left barely enough insurance to glass, china or crockery, with very course sandpaper for some with a fine sandpaper. For an unpleasant odor in the hands, scrub with lemon juice and a teaspoon of vinegar added to fat in which douches are fried prevents their getting on the hands.

Dental Care

Children are apt to be careless about how they scrub their teeth. Many schools instruct in the proper manner how to clean your teeth. Always brush your teeth before retiring for at night is when the germs seem to do most of the damage. Have a long enough handle on your brush, have bristles placed in groups and stiff enough to do some good. Do not brush vigorously, you cause soreness in the gums. Work away from the gums and don't forget the inside of your teeth as well as the outside.

HOME TOWN THOUGHTS

Everybody seems to favor the cause of home town progress, provided somebody else does the work.

If you remove part of the foundation of a building, the structure will slump down out of shape. The business of the home town is one of the chief foundations of our country. If people spend money away from home, they remove a portion of the town's property foundation.

Effective traffic regulation follows good accident investigation and reporting. Police departments are being called on to investigate automobile accidents promptly and to determine definitely the cause of each accident.

If a number of accidents have occurred in a certain locality of your community or at a certain intersection, there is something fundamentally wrong with the con-
