WHATSOEVER befalls us, famine, flood or fire, comes forth the support of the Red Cross to relieve all races, colors and creeds.

LESS SCHOOL PUPILS

SCHOOL CLASSES in many cities are declining because the number of children is reduced. A few years ago many cities were almost breaking the backs of the taxpayers by the money required for new schools.

TELLING THE PUBLIC

PEOPLE attract interest in every phase of life by telling what they are doing. The man who talks about his business experiences is more interesting to the public than the one who shuts up his mouth when he leaves his workshop.

HONORS FOR WRITERS

WRITERS as a class have a fairly tough time of it. They send around thousands of well prepared manuscripts. In the great majority of cases these soon bounce back, like a check drawn on some bank where the maker of the check has no balance.

ATTRACTING THE PUBLIC

A NICELY dressed person is more attractive than one who is poorly dressed. The man who has neat and well fitting clothes has twice the chance to sell goods.

REMS PRIVATE OPINIONS PUBLICLY EXPRESSED

Strikes in defense plants are anything but encouraging to taxpayers of this country who are breaking their backs in long hours of work and going deep into their pockets for the cause of freedom.

Statements now being filed of the recent spring election expenses of the various state central committees show clearly that too much money is being spent in the effort to swing elections.

It looks pretty much as though the State Conservation Commission is beginning to be made the football of politics. That's a shame. Vigorous public opinion in opposition should make itself heard.

Every worker in every field of endeavor, every man engaged in business and every young couple will be wise to lay aside a cash reserve as a bulwark against the era of hard times likely to follow the aftermath of war.

Tact is applied commonsense.

Rotary Club Thrilled by Hon. E. W. Fehling

An inspiring address appropriate to "I Am An American" Day was delivered at Lowell Rotary Club this week Wednesday noon by the Honorable Edward W. Fehling, well-known St. Johns attorney and formerly a state senator who served his district with credit and distinction.

I Am An American

It is indeed a pleasure to participate with you in a small measure on this occasion.

It is fitting and proper at this time to take cognizance of the varied influences, hopes, and tendencies of thought that have made themselves conspicuous in these latter days and here and now to take an inventory of ourselves, our State and our Nation.

The "Dump Cart"

Driving north of Harvard the other day we saw a "dump cart", relic of lumbering days, beside the road. It could help but think of an episode that happened to me when a kid fresh on a farm. This farm was owned by a lumbering firm. A dump cart was used to haul wood and feed around the farm, plus other odd jobs.

More Funds For Club Camp

Funds for the completion of the Kent county 4-H Club Camp at Bostwick Lake had an addition recently when five groups gave money. The Phillips Club, of Nelson township gave $5.00; the Colton School, in Alpena, $5.00; the Peach Grove Rustlers 4-H Club, in Grand Rapids township, $10.00 and the Oakview School, in Otsego, $4.75.

The clubs earned this money by selling popcorn, candies, quilts, collecting old papers, having parties and some from club dues.

Work is actively under way at the camp this week with expectations that everything will be completed by the middle of June.

Driving north of Harvard the other day we saw a "dump cart", relic of lumbering days, beside the road. It could help but think of an episode that happened to me when a kid fresh on a farm. This farm was owned by a lumbering firm. A dump cart was used to haul wood and feed around the farm, plus other odd jobs.

The dump cart named "Mike". Mike and the dump cart were inseparable. One day it was my job as "assistant to the chore boy" to take a load of feed in sacks from one barn to the other. Mike and I negotiated the trip all right. Then not thinking what would happen I tied the lines to the box of the truck. I tipped it. When the box tipped up it jerked the lines on old Mike and of course he reared up. There was plenty of commotion and the green farm hand had a mess on his hands. Finally got the lines loose but I never heard the last of Mike and the dump cart.

Safe driving is not a matter of our past record, but of the lessons we have learned from past experience, of the habits we employ on the road today, and of the preparations we take to insure highway safety in the future—and underneath it all lies courtesy. Our cement roads provide for smoother driving, multiple lane highways offer safe facilities for increased and faster traffic, and through highways cut travel time. However, these improvements, designed for convenience and safety, will not serve their purpose unless our driving habits and manners show similar advances. Faster traffic requires greater caution and an recognition of the privileges of other motorists. Our actual driving must confirm the remarks we make in private since a lack of courtesy interferes with the correct driving of others and causes accidents.

Practice a little courtesy, Mr. Driver, and you too, Mr. Reader, so that road improvements will lead to the pleasure of motoring and not to the danger of highways.

It's smart to drive carefully—and it's American to be courteous.

EDIBLE WILD GREENS

In a recent publication, the Michigan Department of Health calls attention to the several species of edible greens which are to be found widely disseminated in the State during the spring months and stresses both their nutritive value and economy.

Drawings permitting the easy recognition of these greens as well as instruction for gathering and preparing them for the table have been made available by the Department. The list includes dandelion, winter cress, water cress, marsh marigold, dock, milkweed, lamb's quarter, chloery, summer mustard, pokeweed or scoke, sorrel and purslane or wild parsley.

They are made so commonly used because the average American housewife has never been accustomed to regard them as such. In most European countries, where extremely limited budgets compel the exploration of nearly everything that grows for the table, "weeds" have been long prized. Many an American visitor to France has exclaimed in delight over a particularly pungent salad—only to learn that it is made of dandelion leaves or other plants generally classed as the bane of the garden or lawn.

The spring is the time to gather those wild greens since they are young and tender at that period, later becoming dry, yellowed or woody. They are necessarily classed among the protective foods since they contain large amounts of iron and Vitamin A and considerable amounts of Vitamins C, G and the thiamin component of B-1. They are also rich in calcium and other minerals. They also contribute roughage to the diet which is essential for good elimination. Once prejudice has been overcome, the average family will enjoy the appetizing odor, crispness and taste of these greens.

Thorough washing is the first step in preparing the greens for the table. Warm water facilitates washing away the dirt particles, but if the leaves are to be served raw, the final waters should be cold. The greens should not be allowed to stand in water.

In cooking, just enough water that will cling to the leaves should be used, and any liquid residue should be saved and served with the dish since this contains an appreciable amount of vitamins and minerals. As an alternative, the water from the greens may be served in soups or gravies.

To reduce the loss of vitamins from heat, the cooking time should not exceed five to ten minutes. Salt may be added as desired. If the cover is removed from the vessel as soon as the greens are wilted, the natural color will be preserved.

As seasoning, besides the salt and pepper, cooked greens are served with butter or other fat, with bacon, salt pork fried crisp, or with sliced, hard-boiled eggs. Mildly flavored greens are garnished with finely-chopped onions or green peppers.

Favored in some parts of the country is a combination made of several kinds of raw greens chopped and served with a dressing of oil, vinegar, salt and pepper. To this dressing there may also be added, according to fancy, bits of bacon, sliced, hard-boiled egg, or chopped sweet pickle.
