CHAPTER IX—The stars were shining brightly, and the moon was full...

What help would that be to him? Fire, only fire would keep them back...

"Thank God for that. Instinctively she looked up. Were her eyes deceiving her or were those stars?

A touch on her shoulder. She started to turn. A sob of relief tore up at her as she looked into Ned Paxton's grimy, weary face.

"After you threw the door on the fire we didn't need the log. Crawled back. There is a pink light in the east. The wind has changed. It's blowing the smoke away. They will find us soon. Meanwhile—"

"I've been different since I found me that I bought everything I could. Don't care for that word 'Red'."

"You'll believe me, won't you?" He looked down at the scratched, bruised fingers. His haggard eyes met hers. "I believe you. We'll have no tarmin' on the memory of this night, Jan."

"Tarnation! It will shine as clear as the silver moon on the brook."

"Jan darling, I can't let you go!" Bruce Harcourt looked down at Chester lying in the cot in the cabin...

"I'll stay with him." Harcourt's tired eyes narrowed as he stepped out upon the boardwalk. Lights, windows in the dormitories at this time of night? What had happened?

"Where's Janice? Where's Grant? What's happened?" She patted the hand on her sleeve. "Hush, hush. Mr. Bruce, don't get excited yet."

"I'll do whatever you say, Ned. I'll do whatever you say, Ned. I'll do whatever you say, Ned."

have rushed to the shore long before this. Perhaps she was hurt. Paxton could have come. Paxton! Her better kept him out of his mind...

"Horror clutched at his throat, he stumbled into a clearing. Stopped. Caught at a scorching spruce. He steadied himself. Were those faces on the threshold of that blackened shack? Their clothes were scorched brown. Their faces smooched as stokers'.

"Yes, sirree, I hustle." The swing-door closed with a force which brought a yelp of pain from Tong who was passing through. He stopped to lick his tail before he jumped on Harcourt in effusive welcome.

"Down! Down, Tong! Miss Mar-tha, I'm going for Janice. Have everything ready here in case she's—the child's or her hurt!" He pulled off his wet jacket. Went into his room for a fresh one. Mar-tha followed him to the door.

"You've got to get up with stars, you sirree." That's a natural voice came through the ear-phones in warning. "Gettin' dry quick! Look out. We fit dem now."

"Watch the shore for signs of a fire, Paaco." Below, the white yacht steamed slowly, like a faded bird floating on the breast of the water. Still searching. From a volcano of smoke on the east a column of smoke rose languorously, as though the force within the mountain was being exhausted from its struggle to do its duty.

"Harcourt strained his eyes till they seemed starting from their sockets. He saw nothing. Not a sign of smoke. Not a sign of fire. Not a sign of life. Not a sign of hope. Not a sign of anything but the dark, dark woods near that wrecked boat."

"All right, you don't know the half. I've had hair-raising adventures and escapes since I came into this north country but nothing equal to the hell of these last hours. Came down twice on the shore. Had to risk it though I knew my mind was done for. Radio wouldn't work. Compass use less. Chester half dead. I thought, God! Lord! Why am I living over that? It's behind me. If you turn sure Janice is all right. If I turn sure I'll stay with him."

"Harcourt's tired eyes narrowed as he stepped out upon the boardwalk. Lights, windows in the dormitories at this time of night? What had happened? He had come down in the flying field. Paaco and an Indian had come running at sound of the plane. He had been intent on transferring Chester, on getting hold of Stephen Mallory, who was as much of a doctor as he was a minister, to take care of his wounds. The sky was clear, spangled with stars. Moonlight delivered the sparkling water with silver. What did he miss? Paxton's yacht? Gone! Janice!

Throw Your Scrap Into The Fight - Junk Needed For War! JUNK NOW Will Help Save the Life of Your Boy or Your Neighbor's Boy.

LAST YEAR America's railroads moved 475 billion ton-miles of freight, history's greatest traffic job. (We'd like to tell you how many millions of soldiers and sailors we carried, but...)

This year the railroads may haul 50 million carloads of freight—10% to 15% more than in 1941. We did the 1941 job pretty easily because freight shippers and carriers and the public cooperated. We can do this year's bigger job if we again get that cooperation.

This all-out war requires all-out transportation. Uncle Sam is depending on the railroads for that. We're handling 70% of his military freight. To let him down would be tragic. So "the tall man in the high hat" comes first. At any time now there may be one, two or three fewer cars in your passenger train. You'll excuse it, won't you? Uncle Sam will be using them.

Or your freight may move out, or come to you, a little later than you had hoped. We're certain you'll overlook that, too. We'll be moving important things for Uncle Sam. We know you would. And you'll be helping him, too.

SOCIAL EVENTS

Fortnightly Club
 The first meeting of the year for the Fortnightly Club was held at Mrs. Don McPherson's the evening of Sept. 8. Mrs. Dorothy Kleflich was assistant hostess. Mrs. Anne Roth told about her experiences in New York, Philadelphia and Washington, D. C. this summer. Mrs. Clarence Bergin, Mrs. Howard Peckham and Mrs. Ruth Neimeyer were guests.

Entertain at Bridge Luncheon
 Mrs. Melville McPherson and Mrs. Donald McPherson entertained with a delightful bridge luncheon recently at the home of the former. Covers were laid for eight, Mesdames N. Borgerson, J. Gallagher, E. Quick, C. Hall, Kreiger, E. A. Ruah, R. Hahn and F. M. Newell. Defense stamps were given for honors and were won by Mrs. Borgerson and Mrs. Gallagher.

Mrs. Gottfredsen Honored
 Twenty-five ladies tendered a supper party at Lone Pine Inn Wednesday evening in honor of Mrs. H. P. Gottfredsen, who is leaving Friday for East Lansing. Afterwards, bridge was played at the W. W. Gumber home.

Golden Wedding
 The home of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Simpson of Saranac was a happy place Sunday, when their relatives and friends gathered to help them celebrate their golden wedding anniversary. About sixty were present from Lowell, Grand Rapids, Alto, Ann Arbor, Royal Oak, Lansing and Saranac.

Vergennes Cooperative Club
 The Vergennes Cooperative Club met at the home of Mrs. Glenn Martin in Ada. Mrs. Blanche Funderburk, area supervisor of old age assistance, aid to dependent children and the blind, was the guest speaker. She gave an interesting talk on the History of Social Work and its Present Application. A discussion period followed the talk, after which refreshments were served from tables decorated with red, white and blue napkins and centered by a clever flag made of the same. Everyone enjoyed this meeting immensely.

Farewell Party
 Helen Bailey and Virginia Young gave a farewell Monday evening in honor of Stanley and Clifford Guild, who have enlisted in the Marines. The rooms were decorated in red, white and blue. The boys received some very nice gifts and everyone had an enjoyable time. Those present were Herman Guild, Lucille Binns of Greenville, Robert Gene and Junior Guild of Ithaca, Mr. and Mrs. Irvin VanWagner of Stanton, Betty, Dick and Virginia Young, Homer and Leroy Guild and Helen and Bob Bailey.

Mrs. Hahn Entertains Book Review
 The Book Review Club met at the home of Mrs. Robert Hahn on Tuesday evening. Mrs. E. C. Foreman reviewed "The Sea Gull Cry" by Robert Nathan. Mrs. Allan MacDonald and Mrs. Howard Peckham were guests. Howard Peckham gave an informal talk on Carl VanDoren who did research work at the Wm. L. Clements Library in Ann Arbor for his recent book, "Secret History of the American Revolution."

Monday Book Club
 The Monday Book Club met with Mrs. Bruce McQueen with Mrs. Jean Wachterhauser reviewing "The Family" by Nina Federova. The list of words along with selections of music on the piano and with delicious refreshments closed a very enjoyable afternoon.

St. Mary's Guild
 The St. Mary's Guild met at the home of Mrs. George Pappin Monday evening, nine members being present. After the business meeting, the evening was spent in playing bridge, honors going to Mrs. E. P. Quick.

OUR BOYS HAVE GONE TO WAR
 Our boys have gone to war. We saw them go. And they're going to win it too. They told us so. From the farm and from the city And every walk of life they came Willing to do their best or even die To keep liberty's torch aflame. Wherever duty calls them Whether far or near You'll find them up and doing There's nothing that they fear. And when the war is over And we've squelched the enemy powers We'll welcome them back with pride and joy These fine noble lads of ours. But let's not forget to do our part And send them tanks and guns To help rid the world of the measly Japs And do the same to the Huns. For we know those yellow rascals Are the meanest under the sun They'll find out along with Hitler Uncle Sam means business, not fun. —Mabel Overley, Belding Banner.

MARRIED

Ellis—Stormzand
 Miss Doris M. Stormzand, daughter of A. H. Stormzand, became the bride of Robert E. Ellis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Ellis, at a ceremony performed Saturday evening at eight o'clock at the home of the bride. The ceremony was read by Melvin Ellis of Alto, uncle of the groom, in the presence of only the immediate families.

The bride chose a two-piece street-length dress of pink silk crepe trimmed with light blue and wore light blue accessories. Her corsage was of pink rosebuds. She was attended by Mrs. Burke Kenyon of Ypsilanti who wore a street-length dress of light blue with navy blue jacket and navy blue accessories. Mr. Kenyon assisted the groom as best man.

After the ceremony, ice cream, wedding cake and punch were served, after which the couple left on a trip to Northern Michigan. Mrs. Ellis is a graduate of Lowell high school class of 1938 and Mr. Ellis graduated from Lowell high school in 1936 and at present is employed in Ypsilanti. The couple have the best wishes of many friends.

Cull Trees Make Wood For Winter

Michigan's woodlots contain enough cull trees for a two-year fuel supply for farm and small town homes, reports P. A. Herbert, head of the Michigan State College forestry department. He suggests use of such wood for heating and cooking as a measure to lower the amount of transportation needed in carrying coal from the mines. Cutting of this fuel should be of the improvement type of cutting, says Professor Herbert. In fact, fuel wood can be obtained in immense quantity without damaging stands or affecting their productive ability. Decayed, defective or otherwise undesirable trees should go into the fuel pile. Winter needs can be estimated now and a start made toward laying up a supply. Trees cut now will begin drying out to make better kindling and chunks for the winter heating period. Wood offers advantages over coal. When properly burned, wood produces little smoke or soot and is relatively free from dust. A cord of hardwood leaves only about 60 pounds of ashes, suitable for use as fertilizer. A ton of hard coal can be counted on to make 200 to 300 pounds of ashes. Braising, browning and cooking in a small amount of moisture with the lid on, is used for less tender meat cuts.
