With Ernie Pyle at the Front

Doolittle Meets Doolittle, Son Drops In on Father

Tokyo Bombing Hero Has Still Another Namesake to Meet in Same 8th Air Force

By Ernie Pyle
(Editor's Note: Due to transmission delay, brought on by the volume of news dispatches, Ernie Pyle's first report on that historic event has not yet reached this country. The following dispatch was written before the invasion started. This time it is Jimmy Doolittle, who is still the same magnificent guy with three stars on his shoulder that he used to be as a captain's rank.)

General Doolittle runs the American Eighth air force. It's a grim and stupendous job, but he manages to keep the famous Doolittle sense of humor about it. Doolittle, as you know, is rather short and getting older bald. Since arriving in England from Italy he has disablically started a couple of tales rumormongering about himself.

Ernie Pyle
Jimmy Doolittle is one of the most engaging persons you ever ran across. His voice is clear and keen, he talks with animation, and his tone carries a sense of quick and right decision. He is one of the greatest of storytellers. He is the only man I've ever known who can tell stories all evening long and never tell you a word you've heard before. He can tell you in any dialect, from Swedish to Chinese.

Ernie Pyle
Above all he loves to tell stories himself. Here is an example: He was at a flying fortress base one afternoon when the planes were coming back in. Many of them had a hole in the tail fin and that was the sign of a good shot. The general walked up to one plane from which the crew had just got out. The upper part of the tail gun turret was shot away. General Doolittle said to the tail-gunner: "Where you in there when it happened?"

Ernie Pyle
The general, a little peevishly, replied: "Yes sir." As the general walked away the annoyed gunner turned to a fellow crewman and said in a loud voice: "Where in the hell did he think I was, out buying a ham sandwich?"

Ernie Pyle
A frightened junior officer, fearful the general might have overheard him, said: "My god, don't you know who that was?" "Sure I know," the tail-gunner snapped, "and I don't give a damn. That was a stupid question."

Ernie Pyle
Jimmy tells these stories wittily, with most zest and humor that I can put into them second-hand. As he says, the heart-breaking and tragedies of war come times past all your gaudy down into the depths. But if you can keep a sense of the ridiculous about things, you can get through them. Jimmy Doolittle can.

Ernie Meets Another Old Friend

In re-creating around the country the other day I ran into Lieut. Col. William Proctor Sr., whom I used to see occasionally in the 8th Air Force. His old outfit was the first hospital unit ashore in the African invasion, landing at dawn on D-Day. They are so proud of their feat that they'll show you their eyes out at the slightest word that you're confusing them with their second unit to land.

But when I dropped in to say hello I discovered General Doolittle's machine, which they landed at Yorks Le Bains in February of 1943. He was one of the men who ran for the shell hole that night.

Infantry Training

tion training. The setting is a simulated no-man's land, criss-crossed with barbed wire and pocketed with shell holes, leading to an enemy trench.

The doughboys armed with rifles make their way toward the enemy trench, machine guns are firing live bullets in criss-cross fashion over their heads, in a control tower an operator sets off deafening blasts of dynamite that spout up high in the air like the burst of an artillery shell. The blasts spray mud over the men. The whirl of live bullets is in their ears.

Thus the army conditions each infantryman to actual battle scenes. It is a grim business and it makes you think and think.

The day's program was concluded with a division review. After a hot day cloud appeared in the west and soon a heavy thunderstorm broke loose. The 100,000 infantrymen took it as part of the war training. Without raincoats, General and Private alike participated in the event while civilians caught the spirit of the occasion and shouted round after round of cheers as the units marched by.

Seeing is believing. We only wish that every person on the Michigan front could have shared these experiences and could have seen for themselves what the American boys in camp or overseas today are doing for them. It would have made you more proud to be an American.

man for rural Kent County, has set up a fine group of people in the townships who are giving their time in a busy season to solicit their neighbors. When your bond salesman comes, be prepared to sign on the dotted line.

This year is moving along in fine shape for our side but because our side is carrying the ball is no sign less support should be given. The home teams need support like it never had.

Farm folks have a vital stake in this war. They have never been known to let a good cause down. Be sure and support Dick Krause and his township bond salesman.

Agricultural Extension Service is sorry to see Albert Hall leave Lowell as Smith-Hughes teacher of Agriculture. Hall has been justly.

about an assistant extension agent in the Lowell area. He helped with 4-H Fair and was largely responsible for the growth of the F. F. A. exhibits. The school forests at Lowell have grown under his direction. We are going miss him and know that Clarence Prentice, County Agent in Sanilac county, will be the gainer.

There seems to be considerable interest in the use of frozen food lockers these days. On Wednesday, June 14, eighty-seven women, patrons of the Sparta Locker Plant, met at the Sparta high school to hear Miss Roberta Hirshey with the latest information on the preparation of foods for the frozen food lockers. She also gave the women helpful tips. Not that canning will be forgotten, for we are always canning certain things, but the new freezing methods are several jumps ahead of our old methods of preservation.
