Next Monday, April 2, is the biennial spring election, at which time we elect various state officials and all our township officers. As the Cassopolis Vigilant points out:

This election has, therefore, both state and local importance, and sufficient impertance to warrant every voter going to the polls to vote; but they will not do this. The vote at spring elections in the rural areas of Michigan is often 25 to 40 per cent less than at the preceding fall elections, which gives to Detroit and the larger
