Recent visitors to my Washington office have remarked about the attractively decorated wooden shoes which have been placed at the entrance to our office in connection with our "Dimes for Dikes" campaign, My staff has been diligent as beavers in collection contributions for the Netherlands flood victims, and in about a week's time we have collected over $30. I was most impressed by the villingness with which most people will contribute to a fund for the good people of Holland. The general remarks as individual dropped their dimes and dollars into the wooden shoes ran something like this: "Sure I'll give omething for the Dutch people. They're wonderful." "They'd help us if they could. Here's my money." "Those folks really need help at this time and it's up to us to give it to them." Mose noticeable, however, was the overall attitude that their contributions were going to help friends. And I'm certain that I was this friendly spirit which ompted the help which came from all over the nation.
