Ringing up the cash register after a day's work is a much different task nowadays than it used to be 10 years ago for the clerks in Cary's drygoods store. Before Cary Stiff bought the store from the late Harold Weekes, the end of the day meant cranking up the heavy old cash register and adding endless columns of figures. Now the job is not quite so laborious for Beatrice Balley, Soph Gramer, and Martha Lewis, three clerks who have been with Mr. Stiff during his decade in Lowell, Beccle, who sometimes used to walk to work from her former home on Balley drive in Vergennes, and Martha both started working under the tutelage of Jennie Nash and Hazel Moore, after graduating from high school. Soph, who always has the store swept out before 8 o'clock in the morning, came to work two years before Mr. Stiff purchased the store. All three girls are well known for their cheerful service and interest in their customers,

Over 250 Children Enrolled in New Elementary Building

When school opened, Tuesday, September 4, over 250 youngsters entered classrooms in this brand new elementary building on the corner of High and Monroe streets. This structure, with 7 classrooms for the kindergarten through the 3rd grades, is completely modern, with all the newest facilities for the best of education for the youngsters. An "All Purpose" room too is featured, containing a stainless steel kitchen. Lowell voters favored the proposal to bond the district $250,000 in a special election in August of 1955. We understand there may be some problems in the kindergarten-most of those youngsters are firmly convinced that this is their own personal school-try to tell them any different!
