

To Vote on Home Rule City Proposal, Charter Commission, Officers Monday

Lowell citizens and those from the surrounding proposed area will go to the polls Monday to decide whether Lowell will become a city. A big turnout is expected with 800 registered voters in the village and 150 from the surrounding area.

Nine candidates for the Charter Commission will also be voted on. If it is decided that Lowell will become a city, these members would formulate the provisions of the charter and this would be submitted for a vote later. Those who are running for the charter commission are: George Dey, sr., David Coons, Herbert Elzinga, Dr. Orval McKay, Walter Gurnser, John Arehart, Richard Court, Charles Doyle, Jules Erler, Earl Evans, Orlo Gwatkin, William Jones, jr., Dr. R. E. Reagan, Gould Rivette, Edward Ward, Wesley Roth and Peter Speerstra. If the city proposal is not passed, the votes for these candidates will not need to be counted.

Also to be voted on Monday are the officers of the village. Contesting for the positions on the village council are George Dey, sr., Ronald Fish and Charles Doyle on the Peoples Party and Louis Kingsley on the Citizens ticket. Three of these will be elected to replace G. R. Thompson and Jay Boiens, who are not seeking reelection, and William Jones.

There is no contest for the other village offices. William Jones, jr., is seeking the position of Village President; Laura Shepard for village clerk; Theo Bailey, assessor, and Esther Fahmi, treasurer.

Anyone who does not have transportation to the polls may call TW 7-9280, TW 7-9294, TW 7-7713, TW 7-9281, TW 7-9257 or TW 7-9207.

Honor Members And Parents in 4-H Club Week

Lowell businessmen are among the many who honor 4-H members and parents in National 4-H week, in a page of congratulation in this issue. Lowell is proud of the part the community has played in furthering 4-H work in this area.

Behind every successful 4-H'er there is an interested parent, is a paraphrase that undoubtedly applies to each and every Michigan 4-H Club member who will join more than 2,200,000 other 4-H'ers and their local leaders in the "4-H Salute to Parents" during National 4-H Club Week, March 1-8.

National commemoration will take place in Washington, D. C., where six national 4-H champions, parents, State Extension representatives, members of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, and the National Committee on Boys and Girls Club Work assemble to participate in a special 4-H Week program.

Two of the principal participants in this year's program are from Michigan. They are Wendell Crites, 18, Albion, national 4-H Citizenship winner, and Mrs. Alfred Kinney, Baldwin, one of the 1958 national winners in the 4-H Alumni Recognition program. This will be an open discussion program to which each member is urged to bring any seed catalogs she may have in her possession.

At this meeting a new touch will be added with the presenting of a "Welcome Gift" to a lucky member present. The member winning the gift will in turn be responsible for selecting the gift (though paid for by the club) to be presented at the next meeting and so it will go with each successive meeting.

Linda Connors, sophomore, has been selected "Teen of the Week" because of her outstanding work in home economics. For several years she has excelled in cooking and sewing especially. Linda is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Connors.

Last week Linda was one of the local winners of the Pillsbury baking contest with her apple crunch cake. This isn't the first time that she rated high in baking. Several months ago she received a second place in the Cherry Pie Contest and last year she rated 3rd.

As a class project in sewing, Linda made a turquoise velvet jumper on which the home economics teacher, Mrs. Ruth Ward, felt she did an exceptional good job. She will model it in the style show to be held later in the spring.

Because of her interest in this subject, Linda plans to become a home economics teacher. She thinks she would like to attend Michigan State University after graduating from high school.

Linda helps in many extra-curricular activities and is a good student. Besides maintaining a B average, she is a Pom-Pom dancer, a member of Girl's Club, plays clarinet in band and has a week end job. She also likes to skate, swim and horseback ride and she attends the Ada Reformed church.

Mrs. Ward said, "She is a very conscientious girl, interested, enthusiastic and rates very high in quality of work."

In the contest Linda entered and won last week, there were 6 other winners.

The six girls and Linda planned to compete in the final school bakeoff Wednesday, Mar. 5. They are Mary Bigelow, Marilyn Green, Kathy Kyser, Marjorie Rinard, Carole Pearson and Barbara Vander. Two prize winning recipes will be chosen to represent Lowell High School in the state competition.

These girls won over twenty other contestants, ranging from the eighth through the twelfth grades, under the sponsorship of Mrs. Ward. Judging the contest were: Miss Julia Herrick, Mrs. Stephen Nisbet and Mrs. Patricia Mullen.

Mr. Clink has two boys of his own, one 15 and the other taking a pre-ministerial course at Alma College.

Members of the Esther group will be the hostesses for the evening. Mrs. William Collins is in charge of the program. Anyone who would like to hear Mr. Clink speak is invited to attend.

Village Report Shows Savings From Economies

The village report, which appears in the second section of this week's issue of the Ledger, reveals that the program of economies inaugurated by the council last spring have born results.

The general fund shows a saving of some $1,300.00 over 1956; in the electric utility a gain of some $23,000 was made. The street department was the only division to spend considerable more. This was for the big job of resurfacing most of the streets in the town last summer. The water and sewer utility earnings were about the same.

The group, under the leadership of Miss Ann Bloodgood, left Lowell at 8 a. m. When they arrived at Junior College, they registered and were assigned rooms. First ratings: Duet by Sue Keek and Judy Posthumus.
Second ratings: Trio, Sue Keek, Judy Posthumus, Sylvia Dykhuizen; trio, Martha Stiff, Martha Wittenbach and Sharon Ellis; duet Terry Paddock, Rosemary Kutchev; duet, Judy Posthumus, Sharon Ellis; solos by Rosemary Kutchev, Jane Vanderveen and Julie Frahm; octette, Sylvia Dykhuizen, Martha Wittenbach, Martha Stiff, Judi Ellis, Sue Keek, Terry Paddock, Lloyd Norwood, Gene Walter.

Arrows Open in Tourney Tonight

Tonight (Thursday), March 6 the Red Arrow eagets travel to Ionia where they will meet the Greenville Yellowjackets at 8:30 in district play of the state tournament. The Yellowjackets have a record of 14 wins and 2 losses and are favored to capture the district crown. The Arrows, however, will be out seeking their first win of the season. This will be the first time this year that the Arrows will try for that first victory, since if they lose, they will be eliminated.

The team spirit is very high, and, although there is a big difference in the won-lost column between the two teams, the Arrows promise a thrilling battle to all loyal fans who attend. Coach Norm Gotschall has brought Frank McMahon and 6-ft.-4-in. Bill McClure up from the second team to provide additional tournament depth.

The Arrows will be led by senior Tony Stormzand, senior Don Dawson, junior Chuck Ryder, and freshman Allen Seely in their try to upset the Greenville express.

In the event that the Arrows are victorious, they will meet the winner of the clash between Belding and the winner of the Ionia-Rockford tussle Saturday night at 8:30 in the finals.

Last Friday at Lee, the Arrows got off to a slow start and fell behind the Rebels 6-10 at the first quarter mark, and trailed 19-27 at halftime. At the start of the final period the Arrows were 9 points down, 27-36. A final push by the Arrows kept the game tense in the final eight minutes as the Rebels came within a very narrow margin of the Rebels but could not seem to get those extra few points to grab the lead. The final score read Lee 47, Lowell 42.

Senior Don Dawson was high for the game with 15. Ryder and Stormzand each netted 10. With the rest of the squad netting only seven points among them, it appears that the Arrows trouble was not enough balanced scoring punch. Sneyink was high for the victors with 13.

HONOR TEENS

Sandra Joan Bozung, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Bozung, another of the top seniors, has been on the honor roll ever since she has been in high school. She also was on the All A record twice.

After studying English, Latin, history, science and math, she chose the latter as her favorite, especially advanced algebra and trigonometry. Because of her love for math, Sandy has decided that she would like to teach it in high school after finishing her college education.

As for college, Sandy has already been accepted by Michigan State University and is hoping for an Entrance Scholarship. When asked why she would like to go to college, she replied, "I want to go for the experience it will give me and mainly for the education. A college education will enable me to have my own career."

Sandy thinks it would be a good idea to have a tax reduction for any parent who sends their child to college. She said, "This will give an incentive to send their children to college."

Besides being in the top of her class, she is active in many class and community projects. Most everyone will agree that Sandy is likely to go far in life.

Michigan's proud robin—the cherty bird who sings "It's Great to Live in Michigan"—has a new and lofty perch this year.

The 1958 Michigan week emblem, announced this week shows the robin, the state's official bird, standing atop the huge towers of the Mackinac Straits bridge, looking out across the water at the state's two vast peninsulas.

And the honored bird is prouder than ever as he tells the world about another great Michigan achievement, the world's greatest bridge, something new added to the long list of wonders he has boasted so loud about in four previous Michigan Week celebrations.

The robin and bridge will appear on millions of pieces of promotional materials which will be used throughout the state and nation in connection with the fifth annual Michigan Week, May 4-10.

These include lapel buttons, posters, decals, window streamers, place mats, street banners, bumper strips and many other articles. The emblem also appears on all letterheads, bulletins, manuals and other materials used by the state organization and scores of Michigan Week committees.

The robin didn't appear in the first Michigan Week celebration in 1954 when the state slogan was "This Is Your Michigan." However, in 1955 when the promotional materials committee came up with a new slogan the robin was utilized to sing "I'm Glad I Live in Michigan."

In 1956 when the present slogan "It's Great to Live in Michigan" came into being, the robin appeared perched on a nest over a map of the state. Last year the bird took on a new look and developed a very pronounced chest as it looked over the state and proclaimed the slogan.

The robin was adopted as the official bird of Michigan in 1911 by a House concurrent resolution.

You would not think of having your wife use the old scrubbing board, the clothes boiler and the old galvanized wash tub. Sure you wouldn't. Not since there are better ways to do the washing.

Who drives a horse and buggy today?

That's what we are talking about when we say village government is outmoded.

The village charter we operate under was passed when the scrubbing board, the wash tub, the oil lamp and horse were in vogue.

There is something new, Home Rule. Why not have the latest model?

It's better; it meets today's needs; it is geared to our present-day economy and costs no more than the old.

People say Lowell hasn't progressed. They are right. A village is no different than a person. As it progresses in age, it should show growth in integrity, intellect, financially and in size.

A baby gets off to a good start—You don't say, Oh! he's doing alright, he doesn't need this or that. He is alright just the way he is.

No you don't! You encourage his every little success; you assist his growth. You encourage him to try new things. You revel in his accomplishments and you encourage him in his future. You don't say quit. You say try again. You watch his growth mentally, physically, and economically, and 9 out of 10 times you marvel at his accomplishments, for they generally surpass your fondest dreams.

What is Lowell? It is you and I, our next door neighbor and the guy who lives in the next block or across town.

Let's try to look at it as something alive, with a real future.

Let's Vote YES, March 10.

Wayne State U. Coach Sees New Cage Scoring

Wayne State coach Joel Mason someday hopes to see the basketball floor layed out in this manner, with three scoring zones and a short offensive zone. He would change the rules to give 1, 2 or 3 points for different length shots and move the present 10-second line from midcourt to within 30' (dotted line) of the end line.

There has never been a change in basketball scoring since the game was invented but Wayne State University coach Joel Mason thinks it's about time for one.

The Tartar head coach would like to see a "zone" system of scoring which would award three points for long shots, two points for medium shots and one point for short shots.

In addition, he would like to see the present 10-second line moved from midcourt to a point 30' from the offensive end line.

Mason believes either change—but preferably the combination of both—would open up the college game and eliminate cries of "dull basketball."

It would, for instance, defeat the zone defense, a prime reason for slow basketball. By awarding three points for long shots, the system would force man-to-man play on the long shooters and would make for more action by forcing aggressive guarding of those men. It would also open the middle for more action because of better out court guarding.

In addition, the zone scoring would give the little man with ability as much a place in the game as the big man with nothing but height to offer.

For instance, in a recent Wayne State game a team took all of its scoring shots in one half from within the one-point zone, capitalizing on sheer height and working against Wayne State's good outside shooters.

The shorter offensive zone would force the offense to move the ball up court quicker and then would enable the defense to press effectively without having the offense wander over half the court. This could eliminate stalling, Mason believes.

Mason is a real native of Michigan's Upper Peninsula—he was born in Iron River, his parents live in Stambaugh and his first coaching job was at Stephenson high school.

Following graduation from Western Michigan and the Stephenson job, Mason played pro football with the Chicago Cardinals and Green Bay Packers and pro basketball with Sheboygan (Wisc.).

He came to Wayne State in 1946 and took over as head basketball coach in 1948.

Mason acknowledges that the zone scoring is not an original idea with him. The shorter offensive zone is a Mason idea, however.

When the basketball rules committee meets at the NCAA finals this spring, Mason hopes to start machinery moving for consideration of either as both rules changes.

While he is not optimistic about passage of such changes, Mason believes they would make college basketball a better game. Most short players agree.

Retail Problems Outlined to Aid Salesmen at MSU

Newspaper advertising can help a retailer establish his store as a quality institution in the eyes of the consumer.

Retailers can also use newspaper advertising to stimulate consumer traffic and increase profits, according to Dr. Paul E. Smith, assistant dean for continuing education, College of Business and Public Service, Michigan State University.

Dr. Smith spoke at the second annual Conference for Newspaper Advertising Salesmen held this month at Kellogg Center. "Institutional advertising is very effective in promoting quality merchandise," Dr. Smith pointed out. "Both private and public brands are especially adaptable to promotion by newspaper advertising." Dr. Smith explained that institutional advertising can also help the retailer in promoting low prices, wide assortments of merchandise, credit and other services and can do much to level out sales "peaks and valleys."

The speaker emphasized the need for well-trained and informed sales personnel. "Sales people should know their merchandise and should be aware of what is being advertised in the newspaper and displayed within the store," he added.

Before coming to M. S. U., Dr. Smith had an extensive background in retail business and education.

BUCK SHOT

by Norman Gotschall

Three days later the East Grand Rapids game was very interesting to us. Out of 33 shots, we made three the first half. The jitters had us. During the warm-up drills it was evident that the "psychological" factor of playing East was there. They were a better team, but certainly not as much as they appeared. The only bright spot in our game was the defense of Don Dawson. He held Maentz to no field goals for one half.

Don exemplifies a pattern that existed in Lowell. As a freshman he became interested in basketball. He worked quite hard, but his first good game came the next to the last game in the season. Although he is now one of the better boys in the valley, he has little to show for the four years during which he and his coaches worked. The answer is of course, starting the boys younger which we have done for the past three years. Our answer to becoming as competent as East can be found in the East Grand Rapids School, and is provided by Coach Reed Waterman who furnishes the high school with an outstanding athletic feeder system.

If you're interested in the conservation of wild life, or if you love the out-of-doors, don't miss a chance to take a snowshoe trek back into the deep cedar swamps of the northern part of the state during this season of the year. You will see many signs of deer, rabbits, cats, and among other animals, an occasional wild turkey, all trying to eek out a little food from this barren but "out of the cold wind" solitude. This year so far the deer have been a little lucky. They had a good crop of acorns which sent them into the winter fat. The snow has been so heavy this year that it has bent down many cedar trees of which the deer are fond. An early spring would prevent very many losses, but a late one would send many toward the long painful death of starvation.

At the teacher's bowling party last week Miss Kengis displayed a "behind the back" delivery which amazed the entire faculty.

Within the past two weeks Don Dawson has shown considerable improvement. Don has a lot of natural ability (speed, and jumping ability) but started basketball late and has always had a great deal of difficulty with the dribble. Don hit 7 out of 17 in the Lee game, held one of their best shots to two field goals, and secured 8 rebounds. He will in all probability be assigned to watch Ropp when we play Greenville, and will have his hands full.

Greenville is a large favorite to win the tournament, but tournament play is so unpredictable. Belding and Ionia have given Greenville good games. Also, some players get "tournament jitters" while some get tournament heat and can't miss a shot. Several times when smaller towns have been finalists, guards had to be hired to come into the town as every person "left for the game."

We're plugging for Michigan State against Indiana next Saturday noon. These are two of the top teams in the nation. Each team has a fine and balanced attack, but each boasts of one of the finest pivots in basketball today. John Green is second to none in his rebounding ability, and getting better offensively in each game. Archie Dees of Indiana is one of basketball's best shots, and towers over Little John who is only 6'-5". Last game Archie scored 37 points and was finally taken out. Don't miss this game!

Real Estate, Sales Taxes Curb Service

More important than federal aid to education is the need to minimize the importance of real estate and sales taxes in education and find a broader base for financing such community services.

Wilbur J. Cohen, University of Michigan professor of public welfare administration, believes federal, state and local government must find a broader economic base, one that is more responsive to the needs and growing demand for community services.

Congress should search for ways to provide sources of revenue with which to finance local education, he says. "Equalization measures should be encouraged in state legislation to aid those school districts with less adequate fiscal resources."

Federal aid to education is not a new policy, he points out. "The federal government now subsidizes education in many ways. Although there may be heated controversy over current proposals, it seems necessary and very likely that both state and federal expenditures for education should increase if we are to meet the growing demands for educational services."

"The major problem we are faced with is the reliance upon real estate and sales taxes for such a large share of the cost of education. If the health and welfare programs of this country depended upon real estate taxes, they would be held down. But since health expenditures come so largely directly from the consumer, and since welfare expenditures come so largely from payroll contributions, they more closely and immediately respond to the demand for services and price increases."

Rather than repeal federal grants for teachers' salaries for vocational education, as has been proposed by a joint group of governors and federal cabinet officers, this program should be broadened and made more flexible, Professor Cohen asserts.

Existing legislation should be modified so that the states could use federal funds for the payment of teachers' salaries for any and all types of vocational education, especially in areas where there are scarce skills, he suggests.

"Moreover, Congress should give consideration to adding to this legislation federal funds for teaching handicapped children. Here is an area of heavy cost and a need for special skills which require additional support."

"The federal government is already providing some funds for the mentally retarded child. If it is proper to aid in educating the mentally retarded child, then it is equally proper principle to do so for all handicapped children."

Healthy Teeth Important; Tooth Decay Expensive

Healthy teeth are much more important than many people realize, Dr. Prothro, City-County Health Director points out. Tooth decay costs an estimated $31 million in Michigan each year and in addition, brings on much ill health, suffering and even emotional problems.

The serious implications of tooth decay, and the opportunity of preventing most of this painful disease makes the whole problem a matter of public concern.

It is a challenge to every person to push forward the programs of good diet, toothbrushing, visits to the dentist and fluoridation so that our children will grow up with strong, healthy teeth, Dr. Prothro concluded.

At the age of 17, the average teen-ager has seven decayed teeth. By the time he is 21, he has lost five teeth because of decay. Yet most of this loss can be prevented.

"Four measures—correct diet, toothbrushing, full use of fluorides and regular visits to the dentist—will greatly reduce tooth decay," Dr. Prothro explained.

Prevention of tooth decay begins with good eating habits. A well-balanced diet, with lots of milk and only a few sweets, will aid in the development of strong teeth. Regular and proper use of the toothbrush after meals and periodic visits to the dentist will help keep teeth in good shape.

Full use of fluorides greatly reduces the sacrifice to tooth decay, Dr. Prothro stated. Direct applications of fluoride to children's teeth will cut decay about 40 percent. Fluoridation of public water supplies as is done in Lowell can reduce tooth decay by two-thirds.

Evenings and Thursdays seem to be becoming the major grocery-buying periods. In addition to a swing toward Thursday food buying, about one-third is now being done in the evening.

The man who doesn't like hot weather can now get ready to enjoy cold weather. It's about here.

Your Washington Review

by Congressman JERRY FORD

The really big news out of Washington at this writing is not politics but the weather. We shared in the snow (up to 18 inches around the Ford home) and the cold (10 degrees early Monday morning).

To add to the difficulties (and all a Congressman's problems are not legislative) the thermostat on our furnace at home went out-of-order and the temperature indoors also fell rapidly. We did get that fixed eventually and then found that the battery in the car was dead and that snow plows just don't come by the house. To top it off little Steve (21 months) developed a high fever and an upset stomach, and the Doctor thought possibly he had appendicitis. (He didn't.)

A breakdown in transportation kept thousands of government employees home for two days and closed the Washington schools for three. By Thursday, however, the sun shown brightly, the snow shrunk, and the Government was again in full operation.

PINE SHOOT MOTH: In adopting the 1959 Appropriation bill for the Department of Interior and related agencies last week, the House of Representatives approved the expenditure of approximately $25,000 for continuing the research in control and eradication of the European Pine Shoot Moth. This amount was included in the budget for forest insect research and will be spent largely in the experimental work which has been going on since April 1956 in Ottawa County. Two years ago I was successful in my plea to the Congress for funds to undertake the essential task of determining a method for controlling an insect which was causing irreparable damage to thousands of pine trees in Michigan. The forestry entomologists have had appreciable success in the past two years, but the work must continue if the data already accumulated is to bear practical results.

OTTAWA'S SOIL BANK PROBLEM: Because Ottawa County was declared a "commercial corn area" after the closing date for signing wheat acreage contracts, many farmers find themselves in a position of having to restrict their corn acreage to 60 percent of their normal crop in order to draw benefits under the Soil Bank Act. This restriction on corn was not a part of the contract. It appears, therefore, that the Government has "changed the rules after the game started."

I have tried to convince the Department of Agriculture that it should straighten this out within the framework of the law. Having been informed that this was legally impossible, I introduced two bills to correct the situation. One bill applies only to Ottawa County, while the other covers 38 counties in the country which find themselves in a similar predicament.

Last week I appeared twice before the House Committee on Agriculture in support of these bills to point out the necessity of prompt action to eliminate an obvious injustice. The committee was most receptive and cooperative. I'm confident it will report some remedial legislation and I hope we can obtain House and Senate action in time to be of practical value to the farmers of Ottawa County.

VETERAN'S LAW: The House has approved H. R. 9700 which consolidates into one act all of the laws administered by the Veterans' Administration containing 421 pages with a 41-page comprehensive index, this is the first complete codification of Veterans' laws in our history. The enactment of this bill will be of great assistance to all veterans and to those who advise them on their rights, privileges, and benefits.

WITH THE COMMITTEES: Education and Labor is receiving testimony on scholarships, loans, work-study programs, and various other aids to education. Post Office and Civil Service continues its hearings on bills relating to salary increases for postal workers and classified employees. Ways and Means is holding hearings on the reciprocal trade agreements. Veterans' Affairs continued its inquiry into fund-raising campaigns by or in behalf of veterans' organizations. The Committee on Foreign Affairs is receiving reports on the military assistance program.

OUR NATION'S ECONOMY: I have tremendous faith in America as a strong, prosperous, and productive nation. The prophets of doom and gloom who would steer us

Hardwood May Prove Economical, Reports U-M

Lower Michigan's low-grade hardwoods, an estimated million and a half acres in farm wood lots, long untouched by the lumber industry because of prohibitive costs, may prove economically valuable as a result of University of Michigan research.

In addition, "hidden values" of removing the inferior hardwoods could be better forest practices and use of forest resources plus improvement of forest stands.

That's the opinion of experts from the Department of Wood Technology, School of Natural Resources, who are conducting a study of the problem on a grant provided by the U. S. Forest Service, Lake States Experimental Station, St. Paul.

Directed by Prof. Everett L. Ellis, the project is now in its third year. It involves work with a "bolter saw," one that cuts ("cleans") four-foot logs called "bolts." Until now, Ellis points out, this type saw was used almost exclusively in the New England states.

Ellis further maintains that the abundance of lower Michigan hardwoods are too defective for conventional saw mill purposes but can be sawn "Economically with the bolter saw."

If the process proves financially feasible, inferior hardwoods could be removed resulting in better forest practices—that is, the bare area could be replanted with material of greater market value. Ultimately, Ellis says, the entire hardwood stand would improve.

As the research has progressed, graduate student Walter Johnson has been busy operating the "bolter saw" at the School's 840-acre Stinchfield Woods reserve near here.

His job? To cut bolts furnished by the Forest Service with two thoughts in mind: One, to learn "grade recovery" (from inferior to superior), and two, to devise an effective means for reducing the four-foot logs to usable stock.

Procedures for drying the hardwood bolts are currently being tested by the experts in the Wood

THINGS TO COME . . .

Fiber glass, which has taken a lot of the maintenance problems out of boating by its use in hull construction, now appears in molded masts for larger sailing craft. . . The world's first practical diesel outboard motor has been introduced in a seven-and-one-half-horsepower size that costs approximately 25 percent more than comparable horsepower gasoline engines. . . Humor Helps Ease Life's Problems

People who can use and enjoy humor may be better adjusted psychologically and more able to meet life's problems than those who cannot appreciate humor, indicated a researcher at Michigan State University.

Allyn F. Roberts used cartoons to test 25 mental patients and 25 tuberculosis patients in Veterans hospitals. He was investigating theories of Sigmund Freud and George H. Mead that humor is important in mental and psychological adjustment.

He found differences in the way his subjects laughed at certain cartoons—which were typed according to the problem involved. "I found," he said, "the persons who were psychologically stronger and had more resistance to frustration rated cartoons funnier."

Roberts feels humor has an important place in man's make-up, enabling him to relax and better understand himself and others. By developing enjoyment of humor, the researcher believes, a person may be more able to adjust to change and solve complex problems.

Drainage Official Named by State

Appointment of an agricultural engineer to fill vacancy in the office of deputy state drain commissioner caused by the recent death of an employee of 21 years in the department was announced this week by Director G. S. McIntyre, of the Michigan Department of Agriculture.

Taken by death in a Lansing hospital following two years of failing health was John Hudson, 60, who at one time served two terms as Shiawassee drain commissioner after having been engaged in private drainage construction contracting work. Mr. Hudson came with the Michigan Department of Agriculture in 1937.

Named to fill the vacancy was Stanley Quackenbush who came into the drainage section of the department a year ago.

Previous to that time Quackenbush had been with the Soil Conservation Service for eight years serving as area engineer in charge of drainage in southeastern Michigan.

Born in Detroit and educated in Jackson public schools, Quackenbush graduated from Jackson Junior college. In 1948 he was graduated in agricultural engineering from Michigan State University.

Quackenbush is married and the father of four children, and makes his home in Lansing.

Under Michigan law the Director of Agriculture is chairman of all inter-county drainage Boards. The drainage section in the department represents the director on all drainage boards in matters affecting two or more counties.

Look Neat, Be Pleasant As You Work

An attractive appearance helps you have a happy, positive attitude toward homemaking tasks, believes Coral Morris, Michigan State University extension specialist in home management.

To keep your appearance neat, dress when you first get up. This way you avoid becoming the typical "pincurler housewife in an old wrapper." Select clothes in becoming colors and in easy-to-care fabrics. Look for styles that give freedom of movement while you work but are not so loose as to catch on things.

A good figure is not just a matter of size nor weight nor years. Good posture counts, too, so groom your figure to bring out its best lines. The time for you to wear a good foundation garment is while you are doing housework, not just on social occasions.

A mirror in the kitchen lets you face yourself several times a day. It may remind you to take a few minutes to rest, smooth your hair or square your shoulders. A touch of make-up, combed hair and carefully tended hands and nails should be a part of your daily beauty routine.

When you have rough, dirty work to do, dig your fingers into a soft cake of soap or good hand cream before beginning the task. This will protect your nails and make your hands easier to clean when the job is finished, says Miss Morris.

Housework is strenuous—bathing frequently and using a deodorant will contribute to making you an attractive homemaker.

According to Miss Morris, the next best thing to being born beautiful is to have a smart well-groomed look.

Governor Williams Reveals Banks Could Easily Pay Additional Taxes

now admitting what I have said all along—that the increase would be paid by the banks, not by bank depositors.

The admission wasn't direct, of course. But when they argue that this tax increase would ruin the banks, they are also arguing that the banks—not the depositors—would pay the tax. That is what I say, too.

The charge of State Senator Clyde Geerlings (R) of Holland that the proposed tax increase would hurt the banks has done much to clarify the issue. A couple of weeks ago opponents of this tax were searing the daylight out of

You're Right—Our Winters Are Warmer

Yep, those old timers were right. It WAS colder in the "good old days."

So said Professor Erling Dorf of Princeton University in a recent lecture at the University of Michigan.

"Climatic conditions in the United States are due to climb to subtropical temperatures within the next 200 years," Professor Dorf said.

According to the weather expert, "The average temperature has been rising gradually since the last ice glacier age about 12,000 years ago although the earth experienced a 'little ice age' from 1600 to 1850. We are 'still hearing stories' about it," he commented.

An authority on paleobotany, Professor Dorf based his conclusions on plant fossil remains which, he says, are better indicators of the past than remnants of fossil animals. "Plants are more sensitive and stationary."

He explained that animals can escape an advancing glacier by running away and when fossils of such animals are found, the location often does not indicate their native habitat.

"Plant species typical of warm and cold climates indicate more closely the true temperature existing in the particular period in which they are found," he said.

Backing his theory of continually increasing temperature, Professor Dorf reported the findings of scientists in related fields. "Records of sea levels indicate the oceans have been rising at the rate of two feet per 100 years since 1920 due to melting glaciers," he said.

And what if all the ice caps melted? "In that case," said Professor Dorf, "the sea level would rise over 100 feet."

"Warmer temperatures have already had some effect in various parts of the world," he concluded. In Canada, for instance, the crop line was extended 65 miles northward since 1920."

'Pink Wheat' Gets Grower in Court

Arrested for selling wheat that had been treated with a mercury compound after mixing it with untreated wheat, a Berrien county grower paid a $35 fine and costs of $4.30.

He was also given a 30-day suspended jail sentence with a court order to dispose of the wheat only for seed purposes when arraigned before a Bridgman justice of the peace.

The grower, Leons H. Strauss, of Glendora, was arrested on complaint of inspectors of the Michigan Department of Agriculture's food and standards division. They said he offered 1,840 pounds of adulterated wheat. The wheat that was treated with mercury compound, exceeded the tolerance by 10 times.

Strauss is reported to have offered the grain to one buyer who rejected the offering when he noted some of the wheat was pink. Pink grains indicate it has been treated with poisonous substances before planting to control growth of smut or scab.

After one buyer refused to purchase the grain, the Berrien grower is reported to have taken it to another buyer where he left the wheat. Here it was found stored in a separate building by Michigan Department of Agriculture inspectors who placed it under seizure in compliance with law.

In the past "pink wheat" has shown up in lots offered for sale by growers, and has resulted in several seizures of truckloads and carlots as a health hazard. At one time as much as 45 cars containing "pink wheat" have been under seizure at one time.

Kneeling will keep you in good standing.

the bank depositors, by saying that we proposed to tax every savings account. Now they have changed ground. They are saying that the banks can't afford to pay the tax.

That puts the argument on the simple question: can the banks of Michigan afford to pay the increased intangibles tax I have recommended? Let's look at the figures.

First of all, what does the proposed tax increase actually mean to a bank?

It means that instead of paying the State 4 cents a year on each $100 of deposited money, the bank would pay 13 cents—an increase of 9 cents per year per $100 of deposits.

Remember, the intangibles tax is the only tax paid by banks to the support of the state government. The banks are excluded from the corporation franchise tax and the business activities tax.

Michigan banks pay no state income tax, as Wisconsin banks do. They pay no gross income tax as Indiana banks do.

They would be paying, under my proposal, 7 cents per $100 LESS than the rate they pay in Ohio, and 12 cents per $100 LESS than the rate in Indiana. (Indiana allows an offset of gross income taxes against the bank tax.)

Now let's ask ourselves if bank Opponents warrant any increase in bank taxes?

The answer is that Michigan banks have profited enormously from the "hard money" policy which has raised interest rates on borrowed money. Their estimated profits before taxes, in 1957, were $34.6 million—the highest in history.

After payment of federal taxes, the net profits of Michigan banks in 1957 (estimated) were $54.7 million. If the 9-cent intangibles tax increase I have proposed had been in effect last year, the net profits of our banks, after taxes, would have been about $51.7 million—the second highest net profit in history.

As a matter of fact, the impact of the deposit tax on bank profits has steadily declined since the tax was levied in 1945. In that year the deposit tax represented more than 4 percent of gross profits. In 1957 they represented about 2.9 percent of profits. This is because the tax rate has never been increased, but profits today are about six times as great as they were in 1940.

Those are the figures on the bank tax I have proposed. I am willing to leave it to the people of Michigan whether the increase is unreasonable in view of these facts.

When you hear complaints that we are trying to tax the widow's mite, or the worker's few shares of stock, please remember these additional facts about my proposal:

1. It would affect only those who have fortunes in excess of about $30,000 in securities.

2. It would give a tax cut or complete exemption to all whose income from stocks, bonds, land contracts, mortgages, or other securities, is less than $1,600 a year. That will exclude most of the widows and old folks in Michigan.
