S. A., last June. He is one of 261 district governors supervising the activities of more than 10,200 Rotary clubs which have a mem-bership of nearly 500,000 business and professional executives in 113 countries throughout the world.

Wherever Rotary clubs are lo-cated, President Hugo B, Hammerslag asserted in discussing the governor's visit, their activities are similar to those of the Rotary Club in Lowell because they are based developing better understanding and fellowship among business and professional men and professional men are also better understanding with Open House professional men, promoting comm u n i t y-betterment undertakings and professions, and fostering the advancement of good will, understanding and peace among all the peoples of the world. Each year, this world-wide service organization continues to grow in numbers and in strength, President Hugo B. Hammerslag added. During the past fiscal year, 374 new Rotary clubs were organized in 53 countries, bringing the total number of Rotary Clubs to an alltime high of more than 10,200 and four countries were added to Rotary's roster-British Guiana, Ghana, Madagascar and Nepal.

The competition between cities industry has come to be a highly organized effort, well-financed in many cases and certainly highly promoted. The town or state that is not prepared to meet this type of competition is bound to see business and payrolls reduced, thus af-of money spread in the economy of

Among the states, Michigan stands fifth in the value of proeach other for new industries and ducts manufactured, according to latest census. If Michigan industry remains at its present level or and states for new business and higher, the people of the state will benefit accordingly. If Michigan slips from its position, because some towns fail to do their part to retain present industry and attract new industries, the whole state and its people suffer from loss of income. A great deal of the answer as to what happens depends on each individual community. If Michigan communities make themselves attractive to the industries they now have, by cooperating with those industries and helping them in every way possible, so they may prosper, this is the best possible advertising for more industry. Companies seeking locations for new plants look to towns with a warm and friendly climate for industry as evidenced by the way they treat the firms they now have,

Michigan occupies prominent stature on a map which shows the size of the states in proportion to the value of their manufactured products

This map is part of an adver-tisement captioned "Our Town Stands Tall On the Map," which appears in this edition. This is one of a series of 26 ads on community industrial development which is sponsored by the Michigan Press Association and the Michigan Economic Development Department, which have been appearing as a public service in this and 300 other Michigan newspapers during the past year.

if There Ought To Be a Law,

This popular expression of how used in jest, has a significance people may overlook,

Americans, by virtue of their naa constitutional democracy, fundaof society's problems through proa law is recognized Americans have the right and the means, also guaranteed by law, to get it.

American laws are essentially the rules of conduct desired and approved by the majority for the common good. Yet the application of these rules often produces a considerable minority who classify themselves as exceptions to the law. It is ironic that the law-mak-light braking, Following such ing process is democratic but that observation of law is often arbi-

This seems particularly true in regard to traffic laws, which are enacted to provide for the safe and efficient movement of all vehicular traffic. Yet, many of the individuals constituting this traffic deliberately choose to disregard these rules, thereby risking not only the penalties which society has attached to such action but also jeopardizing their own property and lives.

To those whom society has given the responsibility of traffic law enforcement, the police agencies of city and state, this arbitrary disregard of law and life seems unbelievably stupid. Perhaps it is because the police, constantly exposed to the lawbreaker, haven't much opportunity to get a broader and less personal perspective. For there must be more good, law-abiding traffic citizens than there are offenders. It with caution. If traffic is sufficient just seems that there are not to the police.

From the viewpoint of the police the problem does appear formid-

For example, convictions for moving traffic violations each year in Michigan total about one million. These are for violations to which drivers have either pleaded guilty or have been found guilty of committing by a court of law. These are essentially violations committed in the presence of po-

How many violations occur which go undetected is anyone's guess There are approximately four million licensed drivers in Michigan. To get an idea of how many traffic violations occur, each driv er can examine his own conscience and do his own arithmetic. To the police, who are daily exposed to the tragic results of accidents resulting from traffic law violations, it is hard to understand why anyone arbitrarily takes a chance by breaking the law. To them it is not a calculated risk but an uncalculated loss which drivers gamble with on the highway That's why the Michigan Association of Chiefs of Police are calling attention to traffic law violathem in their "Unwanted Driver" poster campaign. And in the current emphasis on the Stop Sign to solve a problem, though often Drifter who deliberately ignores stop signs and signals, the police hope that such drivers will cease being a minority and join the tional heritage and conviction in great majority of good drivers who obey traffic stop signs and signals mentally believe in the solution To be certain that ignorance of the law is not a factor in such antiper legislation. Once the need for social, illegal driving behavior, at tention is called to the following pertinent traffic regulations as de fined by law and interpreted by the courts. A complete stop is required a all "stop signs" and "red" traffic signals. A complete stop is one which entirely halts the forward progress of the car-not just a slowing down by shifting gears or complete stop, the driver should yield the right of way to any car which has entered the intersection or is so close to it that enterin might cause a collision,

A "flashing" red light calls for complete stop.

A "yellow" light always means caution-"prepare for a stop." The yellow light which follows the green light of a traffic signal is not a warning to speed through the in tersection. It is a warning to stop before entering the intersection.

The "flashing yellow" light means that the intersection marks is dangerous and requires a slower speed for safety and a complete stop if necessary.

The "yield" sign is another type of cautioning message. It is used where cross traffic is not heavy enough to warrant the stop sign but heavy enough to warrant extreme caution before entering If no traffic is present, the driver facing the yield sign may proceed ly close to present a conflict, the 'yielding" must become a "stop.

In many Michigan communitie flashing red arrow is used to ndicate a right turn is permiss able. But the red arrow first re quires a complete stop before the turn may be made,

If drivers will simply remember that the color red always means a complete stop, while the color yellow always means "slow down and be prepared for a complete stop" police are convinced that intersection collisions can be avoided, Last year such law observance would have saved the lives of over a hundred people in Michi-

If there ought to be a traffic law, all drivers ought to obey it.

OUR TOWN STANDS TALL ON THE MAP

They've mapped the anatomy of a nation.

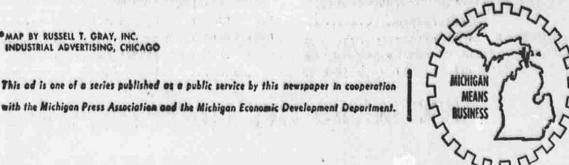

This is the map.* It shows the exact proportions of 48 states according to the value of their manufactured products, as determined by the latest U.S. census of all manufacturing.

Michigan stands proudly fifth among the states in value of manufacturing . . . and our town is part of Michigan.

So our town stands tall on the map. Keeping
