Top Communication Part of Michigan's Pique To Industry

In our outstanding system of communication, Michigan has an advantage for industry. Our fifty-five daily and three hundred five weekly newspapers, with a total circulation of 2,833,124 lets industrial management and workers know what is going on everywhere in the world.

Newspapers have an innate sense of modesty. There are those who claim we carry this to extreme and that we should be more forward in letting our readers know more about ourselves. This is brought to mind by a public service advertisement carried in today's edition. The advertisement, prepared by the industry promotion committee of the Michigan Press Association and the Michigan Economic Development Department, sets forth in large black type—"Michigan is Communication." It is inspired, in part, by the fact that we have just concluded observance of Newspaper Week.

Michigan is communication—and good communication. Our newspapers are alert to let our readers know what is happening in our communities, our State, the nation and the world. In fact, we've gone another step now and we let them know what's going on in space, too.

It is an advantage to industry to know of all the latest scientific developments, the population trends, and it's good for all of us to know what our friends, our elective officials and our neighbors are doing.

Our Michigan newspapers have a sincere interest in the industrial development of our State. Over the last year, Michigan's newspapers have contributed upwards of a quarter million dollars in space for public service advertising, boosting Michigan, such as the advertisement that appears today.

Last this is considered blowing our own horn and recognizing the usual modesty of newspapers, let us just say we're proud to be a part of this campaign for progress and urge that every one of our readers help promote Michigan as a good place for industry.

ENOCH CARLSON PICKED TO HEAD KENT FARM BUREAU

Arrows Ready for 'Big One' at Comstock

Lowell Red Arrows spent all this week getting ready for the big game of the season with Comstock Park at their field Friday night at 7:30. This is the game that puts Lowell in a tie for first place in the Tri-River conference with Comstock or drops them into a three-way tie with Rockford and Cedar Springs for 2nd place, if these two teams win over underdogs Sparta and Belding, Friday.

Comstock with a passing ace, Joe Carpenter at quarterback will be throwing the ball to both ends and halfbacks. During the season Comstock has scored most of their points on their passing game. This week Pierce said he would be sharpening up his pass defense. Missing from the line-up for the final game will be John Kroopf who has been a top-notch linebacker on the defensive team. John suffered a head injury in the game with East and is not scheduled to play. Moving into his spot as linebacker will be Dan Huver who has worked at that position during the season.

A big turnout of Lowell fans are expected to turn out for the game. The best route to get to Comstock Park for Lowell followers, we are told, is to go north on Lincoln Lake Rd., then across on 5 Mile Rd. to Parnell and on to Camonsburg, from there follow Camonsburg Rd. across US-131 on West River Road right into Com-

Unbroken happiness is a bore: It should have ups and downs.

Shown above are a few of the stage crew working on the back drop for the play "Our Town" to be presented in the Runciman Building Auditorium Nov. 17 and 18 by the Senior Class. Although the play's set is a departure from the conventional sets usually seen, having chairs a step higher to indicate interiors, an enormous back drop with the silhouette of a town's skyline was designed for the play by Bill Doyle. The next problem facing the crew is suspending the giant "picture" from the ceiling of the auditorium. Climbing the ladder are left to right, Judy Vaughan, Gretchen Wessell, Mary Ann Hoover, Kitty Ellis and Marylyn Houseman. Doing construction work under the ladder are Chad Lamplin, Jerry Hale, Ron Potter and John Kroopf.

SUSPENDS DRIVERS LICENSE

The drivers license of Donald Lee Hewitt 21, 68 Dewitt St., Saranac, has been suspended for 30 days for an unsafe driving record, Michigan State Secretary of State James Hare revealed this week.

Charles Erickson, Algoma Twp., conservation farmer is shown after he had chopped a thickly drilled summer crop of corn and oats previous to plow-down. He then sowed a rye winter cover crop in late August. These 80-ft. wide field strips alternate with corn strips this year. They serve mainly as wind strips on Erickson's loamy sand to help cut down surface evaporation of soil moisture.

"The use of strip cropping, wind-breaks, minimum tillage and a conservation cropping rotation, all part of my conservation farm plan, have made the difference between poor crops and more profitable farming," says Erickson.

"My goal is to average 80-100 bushels of shelled corn per acre and to keep building up organic matter for increased fertility and for more moisture holding capacity."

Michigan's First Outdoorsmen

Down through the years, Michigan's Indians have been poorly portrayed as a war-loving people. Actually, few of them were in the warrior class, and even these were seldom on the warpath. It was food, not scalps, that drew the main attention of Michigan's first inhabitants. Without axes or saws, the Indians had to rely upon crude implements to clear land for planting. He "girdled" trees by cutting a strip of bark from the trunk, causing them to die. Later the trees were burned; and between the charred stumps, corn was planted. Fish and wild game were vitally important to the Indian because cultivated crops and wild rice provided only part of his food. Perhaps because they were often faced with starvation, Indians were more aware of the conservation of wildlife resources than any other group in the state's history. They did not hunt the same area every year, but alternated their sites to guarantee a continuous supply of game. In hunting beaver, Indians never killed a whole colony in any one pond or lake; they always left enough to insure a future supply.—Mich. Dept. of Conservation

Subsidizing Trichyulture to Give the Unemployed New Perspective, Insight

According to a recent newspaper account, barbers from two towns in New Mexico have come up with a cure for both juvenile delinquency and unemployment. This should not surprise anyone, for ours is the country of creative thinkers and pioneers. Often before, gifted amateurs have solved problems which defied the ingenuity of experts. The amateur is not inhibited by an overburden of knowledge; thus he may have a fresh outlook, a new perspective, a unique insight.

The barbers' plan was disclosed in a petition to their senator: "We feel that cleanliness and neatness of appearance can help a man's morale and help cut down on delinquency which is rising due to our economic unrest. We have many boys going to school, badly in need of haircuts, which they cannot afford. We feel it would be a big help to boys and the unemployed men if haircuts could be paid for... much the same as the school hot lunch system... It will not only help these unfortunate people but the barbers and their families as well..."

The plan has merit. Legislation could be proposed directing the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare to make grants to barbers for trichyectomies on bona fide juvenile delinquents. He would be authorized to prescribe such standards as he deems appropriate on length of sideburns, on duckback hairstyles, and on parting on the left side, to discourage delinquency.

Trichyectomies for unemployed persons 18 years and older will be financed by the Secretary of Labor, advised by a tripartite commission of barbers, labor unions and Sikhs. Persons who are either unemployed or threatened with possible unemployment, and who are bald, or potentially bald, and who might be reasonably expected to gain in self-assurance and employability thereby, will be provided with toupees, replaceable biennially. For this purpose, the Secretary of Labor will establish a Bureau of Trichyulture which, with the advice of the Secretary of Agriculture, will stockpile all hair cut under this program. Such hair as is not used for making wigs will be woven into hair-shirts to be supplied free of charge to the barbers of Clovis and Roswell, New Mexico. Although an uncomfortable realization, the barbers need to face the fact "that there is no such thing as a free lunch."
