Traffic Survey Points To Improvements Needed In Lowell's Street System

(Editor's Note: This is the first in a series of two articles based on the findings of an AAA survey of Lowell's traffic problems.)

To block any possibility of an upward trend in accidents and to reduce Lowell-area traffic congestion, the Automobile Club of Michigan last Tuesday (November 27) recommended a six-point action program to Lowell city officials.

The program is outlined in a 22-page report resulting from a month of on-the-spot investigation of Lowell traffic conditions and a detailed study of a full year's accident reports by a team of Auto Club researchers.

The Club's $6,000 public service survey was requested by the Lowell city council last April and was conducted last July at no cost to the city. The report was presented by Charles E. Gordon, Club traffic research supervisor, and Arthur Gibson, of the Detroit traffic engineering firm of Gibson and Associates, retained by Auto Club as consultants on the survey.

Highlighting the report, presented at a dinner-meeting of 45 city officials and civic leaders, was a recommendation that one new officer be added to the police department, raising the department's strength to five, or that more use should be made of auxiliary policemen on weekends and during the summer months when tourist activity is at its peak.

The report also suggested that a close tally be kept on monthly accident occurrences so that auxiliary policemen could be utilized at any time it was felt necessary to do so.

Other major recommendations included: Sending every police officer to Michigan State University to attend special short courses in various phases of police activity; setting up a new accident filing system making it possible to immediately pinpoint high accident intersections, blocks or streets; utilizing accident statistics in a broad-scale informational and educational program designed for the specific needs of Lowell; repainting of the intersection of Main and Hudson to improve traffic flow at this location, and rebuilding the intersection of Hudson and Bowes to improve sight visibility.

The AAA team analyzed each of the 91 accidents (21 personal injury, 70 property damage) that occurred in Lowell during 1961, pinpointing high accident locations, peak accident months, days and hours, driver actions and other significant factors.

The survey revealed that almost 50 per cent of all accidents occurred during February, June, July and December. Furthermore, 12 of the 21 personal injury accidents happened during these same four months.

June and July are high accident periods, the report noted. Lowell experiences higher traffic volumes during the summer months because of tourist and resort activity in the area.

A study of weather and pavement conditions showed that 86 per cent of the accidents happened during reasonably good weather. In over 61 per cent of the cases, the pavement was dry. According to the report, "This emphasized the point that drivers must exercise due care and caution regardless of weather conditions."

The accident study indicated that Saturday is the most hazardous day of the week with nearly one-fourth of the year's total accidents occurring on that day. Thursday and Tuesday are the next most hazardous, in that order.

The peak accident hour falls between 3 and 4 p. m. The researchers traced this to the congestion caused by increased traffic movement at a time when industrial plants dismiss their workers and start toward their home destination.

Most of the accidents recorded in the city during the period studied took place on Main Street, with the bulk of them concentrated in the six-block section from Lincoln Lake Rd. to Washington and at the Grand River Bridge on M-91. The survey noted that this bridge is only wide enough for one lane of traffic and the ultimate solution to the problem lies in a complete realignment of the road as well as a widening of the bridge.

A study of accidents at this location revealed that most of them were caused by excessive speed, either on the bridge approaches or on the bridge itself. Sliding on the bridge floor also created a problem for several drivers, the survey showed.

In studying the ages of drivers involved, the team discovered that drivers in the age bracket between 16 and 19 accounted for almost 16 per cent of the accidents. This record was topped only by age groups 25 to 34, and 35 to 44.

Since car ownership and daily usage is usually much higher in the latter two age groups, "It would appear that the age group from 16 to 19 requires some special attention, not only in the field of enforcement, but in the field of education, through such youth groups as may be available," according to the survey.

The researchers urged that the report and its recommendations "become the outline of a community-wide action program." To continue to grow and prosper, Lowell must be cognizant of the need for providing safe and free movement for residents and visitors alike so that an ever increasing number of drivers can be attracted to this community."

At the conclusion of the meeting, the report was officially presented to Mayor G. Ralph Townsend by Clarence P. Nielsen, Auto Club area manager, who also acted as host at the meeting.

Issue Four Summons In Saturday Drive

The two police cars working together were surprised to take these youthful offenders by surprise; the police plan to stage periodic drives of this type to control careless driving in the community.

Answer Confusing Press Statement On County Library

To dispel the confusion resulting from the statement made in the Grand Rapids Press by Donald W. Kohlstedt, Director of the Grand Rapids Public Library concerning the new proposed state aid plan for libraries, Miss Genevieve Casey, Michigan State Librarian, issued a statement this week about the plan.

The proposal is to be the topic of discussion at the Regional Governor's Conference on Libraries to be held December 4 at the Grace Episcopal Church. Both the dinner and the meeting which follows at 7:30 are open to anyone interested.

Dinner reservations at $2.00 may be made by writing or calling Mrs. Chester A. Hall, 636 Hoyt Street, S. E., Grand Rapids.

Kohlstedt was quoted in the November 15 issue as saying that "Grand Rapids public library gets about $10,000 annually from the state. This would be raised to about $78,000 annually under the new formula but only if the city and county library systems combine to form a city-county system. The county library system gets no state aid except $4,800 toward the salary of Miss Joyce Pleune, Kent County librarian, and would receive no more under the new proposal."

Correcting the statement, Miss Casey explains: "The Grand Rapids public library, which now serves about 200,000 persons, get $11,000 under the present state aid law. Under the new formula, if it qualified as a system, it could receive about $60,000."

"The Kent county library, now serving over 152,000, receives $4,800 state funds. As a system, it could receive over $28,000. "If all Kent county libraries were to form a cooperative system, the total state aid would approximate $78,000."

"Sparta, Rockford and Cedar Springs, now operating as independent libraries, receiving state aid in 1962-63 of $296, $117 and $99, respectively, could elect to remain unaffiliated, at their present level of state aid, or could join with a larger system for increased benefits."

Miss Casey added, "The proposed new state aid formula would provide realistic library service because it encourages larger units of service while retaining local support and autonomy. Because it will take time for libraries to form their own patterns of cooperation, the program is gradual and guarantees that no library gives more than it receives."

"Which libraries choose to affiliate, and what patterns of cooperation they elect are, according to the proposed legislation, a matter of local initiative and judgment."

"In order to qualify for benefits, however, a system would have to submit a plan for improved service to the State Board for Libraries. The system would be managed by a local governing body selected from trustees of member libraries."

Miss Casey defines a system as "one or more public libraries, maintained by one or more governmental units, serving a population of at least 100,000 or an area of 4,000 square miles."

The new formula was drafted by a committee composed of representatives of various library groups, specialists in state aid and municipal finance and members of the state controllers and Executive offices.

Representatives from every area, in which a county branch library is located, are urged to attend the December 4 meeting.

Quality...

It's unwise to pay too much... but it's worse to pay too little. When you pay too much, you lose a little money... that is all. When you pay too little, you sometimes lose everything, because the thing you bought was incapable of doing the thing it was bought to do. The common law of business balance prohibits paying a little and getting a lot... it can't be done. If you deal with the lowest bidder, it is well to add something for the risk you run. And if you do that, you will have enough to pay for something better.—John Ruskin

Attention To All Who Are In Receipt of V. A. Pensions

If you are a veteran, a widow or a child of a deceased veteran in receipt of "Pension" or "Death Pension" from the Veterans Administration you will receive an annual income questionnaire from them.

This year you will receive that form with your November check due on November 30-December 1. The absolute deadline for filing this form will be January 31, 1963, and if it is not returned by that date your pension will be stopped immediately.

Each and every year thousands of veterans or their dependants have their pension cut off because they do not return the form, it is made out incorrectly or there is something else wrong with it.

This year why don't you make sure that yours is correct by contacting a recognized VFW Service Officer?

This does not pertain to veterans who are in receipt of "Compensation" or those widows who are in receipt of "Death compensation" and who do not have to file a questionnaire.

You may contact the writer of this article—F. W. Stewart, Assistant Department Service Officer, Department of Michigan VFW, at the Michigan Veterans Facility each Thursday between the hours of 9:00 and 11:30 a. m., telephone EM 1-6623 Ext. 84, or Jesse Knapp, Service Officer—Lowell Pos. number 8303 FVW, telephone TW 7-7448 11 to 12 a. m. Wildlife Animals Are Beneficial

Predatory animals like hawks, owls and foxes really earn their keep in forest plantations. Unfortunately, many people shoot them "just for the fun of it."

"Destructive rodents make up the bulk of such predators' diets," points out R. Keith Hudson, Michigan State University forester. "One fox will eat a surprising number of rabbits in a year. What's more, he'll help keep the rabbit population down, too."

Mice and rabbits injure many trees, especially young ones. Such animals gnaw the bark, often completely girdling a seedling and causing the tree to die. Rabbits also like to eat small branches and stems. Rabbit and rodent damage is usually worse in winter when food gets scarce.

Hudson emphasizes that predators should not be regarded as vermin. "They are a natural part of the forest," he says. "They are protected by law in Michigan—which may come as a surprise to many people."

Am I A Soldier of The Cross?

Am I a soldier of the cross, a follower of the Lamb?
And shall I fear to own His cause, or blush to speak His Name?
Must I be carried to the skies, on flowery beds of ease,
While others fought to win the prize and sailed through bloody seas?
Are there no foes for me to face? Must I not stem the flood?
Is this vile world a friend to grace to help me on to God?
Since I must fight if I would reign, increase my courage, Lord!
I'll bear the toil, endure the pain, supported by Thy word.
—Rev. Isaac Watts, 1724

Michigan Succumbs to Glamour of Skiing

What is there about skiing that makes it so attractive?
There are at least two good reasons why this question hasn't been thoroughly explored. First, the sociologists who would be expected to delve into such an inquiry have been concerning themselves with weightier matters; and second, skiers are too busy enjoying themselves to examine the reasons why.
However, at Michigan's 83 winter sports centers—most in the nation—the consensus is that the appeal of skiing can be wrapped up in one word—"glamour."
There is an aura of glamour composed of many ingredients that clings to the sport of skiing. Any of the elements in this compound may be habit-forming, but when the uninitiated are subjected to a full-strength dose the chances of addiction are enormous.
Four of the most important ingredients are: the excitement of the sport itself, the picturesque qualities of ski areas, the appealing design of colorful ski-wear, and the alluring social aspects of skiing.
This combination of ingredients proves to be quite a lure, and thousands of new devotees join the skiing throng each year in Michigan.
New techniques in ski instruction enable beginners to learn faster and better. And once the novice experiences the exhilaration of sweeping down slopes covered with newly fallen "powder," he usually joins the band of enthusiasts for whom the "year" is encompassed by the first and last ski runs of the season.
Those who have enjoyed both sports: compare skiing to soaring in a glider. The same sensation of solitary exuberance is felt when beginning a long downhill run as the pilot feels when he noses his silent craft into a swooping descent. A sense of elation at being in command of a natural force sweeps through you as yours kis swish sibilantly through the snow.
Contributing heavily to the glamour of skiing are the surroundings of the sport. Snow can camouflage the most unsightly area but the effect is magical when it enhances the natural beauty of Michigan's pine-covered slopes. The result is a glistening cover that brings the skier to a halt in admiring silence before pushing off to inscribe his twin-tracked signature on the surface.
Attractive lodges and chalets with inviting fireplaces provide pleasant haven for flush-checked skiers between runs. The popularity boom in skiing has caused a parallel expansion in facilities, with the result that accommodations now are available to fit any pocketbook.
According to the Michigan Tourist Council, one of the biggest bargains offered the tourist-skier is now offered by many of the state's winter sports centers. Prices range from fifty to ninety dollars per period per person, depending on the type of accommodations desired.
The week generally starts at dinner-time on Sunday and continues through lunch on the following Friday. Prices include lodging, meals, tow fees, and daily instruction periods. With the additional advantages of less-crowded facilities and top condition of the slopes, the "Ski Week" package is an appealing buy for the winter vacationer.
Another glamorous facet of skiing is the attractive and colorful clothing that is popular with both men and women skiers. Parkas, sweaters, stretch pants, special after-ski clothing and multi-hued accessories are both flattering and functional.
European and American designers are creating styles both for the slopes and after-ski relaxation that are attracting the attention of persons who might otherwise never attempt this wintry sport.
The social aspects of skiing exert a powerful attraction for newcomers. Skiers, like fliers or sports car drivers, tend to form a loose fraternity which has as its
