Open football season here on Friday night

Friday night at 7:30 when they meet Ionia in the annual battle for the V. F. W. trophy.

Ionia has a strong defensive team, but Coach Chuck Kohloff reported that after their scrimmage with Portland high school last Saturday, he was dissatisfied with the offensive punch of the team. Ionia was still searching for the passing necessary for a well rounded attack. Lowell has a light team with only a few members of the team

Ray Engle, jr., and his wife, Ellen, have developed a thriving mail-order business from a hobby, that Bud enjoyed when he was a boy, stamp collecting.

They started dabbling mildly in the business of supplying mail-order customers about years ago, but didn't really get very serious about it until two years ago. They first purchased a small lot of stamps from a New York dealer, resold those, proceeded to buy more and more lots until a week ago when they returned from Pennsylvanian buying trip with literally a trunkload of stamps, covers, and albums. Buying mostly from dealers, but with several albums from private collections, this is the largest purchase Ray and Ellen have made to date.

As their business has grown in volumn, Ellen has spent more and more time helping her husband. With this new acquisition they are up to their ears in stamps, and Ray says that they have worked as many as 14 hours a day to get them cataloged.

They deal with all kinds of people, ranging from children with limited means to adult collectors with varying degrees of seriousness.

They have clients all over the continental United States and their mailing list is growing all the time help to make stamp collecting so interesting. For instance, a Most collectors are interested in adding stamps to their collections which range in price from a few cents apiece to two or three dollars. Many have advanced to a point where the stamps they need will cost several dollars or even in some cases several hundred dollars. Bud and Ellen handle all types of stamps from regular postage issue to revenue stamps with emphasis on the middle range in cost. Incidentally they only deal in

Police raid teen party

A group estimated at between 50 and 75 teenagers were raided by Sheriff's officers and the Lowell Police on Friday night on Foreman Road, between Cumberland and Parnell Roads,

The party was going strong with a big bon fire when the police arrived at midnight. Five cars were stopped by the police, but several other drivers and cars escaped when the four raiding officers were unable to round up the crowd.

One car driving away was ordered to halt by officers, and shots were fired into the air, but the car made a successful escape.

Five boys were taken to the Lowell Police headquarters and their parents called to come and get them. Three were members of the varsity football team and they were dropped from the Police said that they heard about the party shortly after 9 p. m. and checked the spot and saw several cars enter this impassable road that leads back to an unhabited area. The actual raid came several hours later, when Deputy Larry Flynn and a plain-clothes county officer came out and sought help from Lowell Police,

Some of the youths apprehended admitted to having been drinking, but no beer was found by the officers. Identification of several girls, who were at the party was made and they were questioned with their parentse on Monday.

A consultant in Vocational Education was added to the staff and he gave valuable assistance to the schools in new programs available under new federal and state laws. Increased state aid for the

the General Education consultants to a total of 5.

At the close of the 1964-65 school year on June 30, 1965, there were 37 school districts in the Kent Intermediate District. Of these 19 were districts offering a complete kindergarten through 12th grade, two 4th class districts were offering kindergarten through 8th grade programs and 16 primary districts were operating. As of the official count date, 81,756 children were enrolled in the public schools. There were about 2700 more children of school age than nandicapped children of Kent County.

The financial records of the Kent Intermediate District are audited by Sherk. DeVries and Krenz. Copies of the audits are on file in the office of the Kent Intermediate School District, 316 Ottawa, N. W., Grand Rapids, Michigan, and are available to those who wish to inspect them.
