David Fluger home from Viet Nam reveal's army's success in combat

Sp3 David Fluger, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Fluger of Lowell, was home from fighting with the 1st Calvary in Viet Nam to celebrate the New Year with his parents. He left Saigon on December 24 after completing his three year enlistment in the army.

Sgt. Fluger was a machine gunner on jeep patrol on the well known route 19 that runs across Viet Nam. He landed with the 1st Cavalry Air Mobile in September on a beach and had been in constant contact with the enemy for the past 4

In an interview with the Lowell Ledger this week, he reported that in his opinion "the war was going well for the U. S. and the men in his unit were doing a real job in winning the war." In daily contact with VC units in his patrols on route 19, across the small country, he said, "the enemy was smart and tough, but the Americans with fine help from the South

Viet Namese were winning." Fluger revealed that the spirits and morale of the men in his unit were high and they were satisfied with the way the war was being conducted. He also revealed that the casualties to his division were to a large extent from disease and accidents that occurred in combat with green troops. He pointed out that the clever Viet Cong took advantage of the fear the GI's had of mis-directed fire by U. S. artillary and dropped mortar rounds into the American troops to make them think that their own artillary were dropping short of their in-tended target.

Conditions Hard on Men

Living conditions were hard on the men. The mud and rain made finding a dry bed and comfort difficult, Fluger said, went through 3 pair boots and lost 20 pounds in the four months he was there. The food was mostly C rations and many men were sick from maleria and other tropic diseases; clothing and shoes rotted almost while you were wearing

"The ammunition and fighting supplies were plentiful," Fluger reported, but beyond that there was nothing extra. Men built their tents up as high above the ground as possible to get out of the mud and avoid the snakes. Boa constrictors 24 feet long and poisonous vipers were numerous. but most Americans were able to avoid them

The training of the 1st Cavalry was good and the men carried out their assignments in a professional manner. Working with the U.S. troops were members of the Viet Namese army who were tough and valuable aids to the Americans. All the Americans were warned against the natives who look a. Meals will be prepared in our present Senior High School kitchen and served from a small serving kitchen. This will cut the cost of another kitchen, and the location of this building will provide easy food service. b. Sectional trays, like those used at Alto (and will be purchased as replacements in the Runciman Elementary when needed) will be used for eating.
