Through the interest and cooperation of Kent District Co-operators, Roy Rinard and Wil-liam Schreur of Lowell, over 70,000 pine and spruce seedlings will be planted in the area this spring. William Schreur suggested to his neighbor, Gordon Hill, that it would be a good idea to plant pines on his land. Then William persuaded Fred Dabakey, a lo-col area tree groups to plant cal area tree grower to plant seedlings for Schreur and other neighbors this spring. Another Lowell land owner, Roy Rin-ard, who has begun to reforest, agreed to pick up seedlings at the nursery for his neighbors. "So through the efforts of these three conservation minded cothree conservation minded cooperators, reforestation of what has been a large acreage of abandoned farm land will now begin to produce a new crop of trees," says Mark. Time's running out. You've got less than a month to file your income tax-deadline is April 17 this year-and if you still have the onerous task before you, here are some tips that may make your job easier and less costly:

If you're an investor, you can deduct the fees you've paid for advice, whether or not it involves the management of your portfolio; state transfer taxes on the sale of stock; the cost of keeping a safe deposit box, and travel expenses to inspect out-of-town property invest ments. Brokers' commissions and costs related to tax-exempt bonds are not deductible.

If you run a sideline business for profit, even if it's a hobby like raising pets or flowers. you can deduct business losses and expenses. You must prove, though, that the business is run for profit. If you've changed moved without company reimbursement, you can claim cost of the moving van, pack ing, in-transit storage, insur ance, the shipping expense for your car, and even family transportation. You cannot d duct the cost of the hotel living quarters while you're waiting for your new residence to be ready. Nor may you claim, under revised lay loss on the sale of the home you leave. If you're a widower or divorced, regardless of income which assists the Kent Soil Con-servation Districts, provides in-formation and the technical know how as to what species of trees to plant on the differ-hired a baby sitter so you could work.

Great Lakes Victory

over the Great Lakes the greatest story of fisheries success ever told. Its chapters tell of how chemical treatment of streams to kill sea lampreys has spelled victory in Lakes Superior and Michigan. Winning the same battle in Lake Huron appears to be only a matter of time. Also part of this success story is the restocking of lake trout in Lakes Superior and Michigan which shows that planted fish are taking hold. A more recent chapter headlines the introduction of coho salmon in Lakes Superior and Michigan which seem destined to be one of Michigan's most outstanding fish. Coming up next will be the Conservation Department's efforts to establish the jumbosized chinook (king) salmon in Great Lakes waters, starting in 1967. Fishing for both trout and salmon promises to make increasingly spectacular sport in the years ahead. Michigan's Department of Conservation, with continued federal and Canadian cooperation, is mounting bold programs to stretch this breakthrough even further. --Mich. Dept. of Conservation

Everyone Welcome

Mabel Arehart to return home

Mabel Archart, whose hus-band, John Archart, died recently, is returning from a trip she took shortly after his death. "I went first to Nebraska," said Mrs. Arehart, "My step-mother is in her late 80's and had decided she would like to live in a new rest home just completed near our childhood home. The place is half hospital and half rest home so those who live there have access to doctor or nurse care, or both, if they need it. It is an entirely new idea and my step-mother is happy there."

"Then I went on to Long Beach, California, where my sister, Laura Stilson, is ill. She has often visited in Lowell and has friends here."

"After two weeks there I felt it was time to come back home even though the thought of home without John made my heart ache. We were happy to-gether. But I know it will be good to see my Lowell friends again and I'll be happy to be back with the 'best neighbors in the world'."

Just as I finished writing this, word came from California that my sister there is critically ill so I am flying back there at once. Of course, that delays my ng, however, I am
