Police Department complaints on the rise

The Lowell City Council heard some disturbing figures from Chief of Police Barry Emmons Monday evening. Emmons reported at the regular City Council meeting that total complaints received by the Lowell Police Department are rising at an alarming rate.

Total arrests as of June 30 are down slightly from 1986, but are still well above 1985 figures. Lowell Police have made 86 arrests as of June 30 this year compared to 97 in 1986 and 60 in 1985.

The number of citations issued is well above 1985 and 1986. As of June 30, 322 tickets had been issued compared with 232 in 1986 and 132 in 1985. Accidents are also on the rise. 153 had been investigated by Lowell Police by the end of June compared with 128 at the same time in 1986 and 131 in 1985.

Complaints regarding disorderly persons and loitering were also highlighted in Emmons' report. These complaints generally stem from those persons that gather in the downtown area, especially in the evening hours. Emmons said 42 loitering complaints were received as of June 30 this year compared with nine in 1986 and 48 in 1985. Disorderly Person complaints rose to 73 by June 30 of this year compared with 62 in 1986 and 54 in 1985.

Total complaints received by the department as of June 30 reached 2,654 compared with 2,185 in 1986 and 1,058 during the same period in 1985.

Emmons says the department is handling the complaints, but admits the workload is continually increasing. Selective enforcement using specially trained reserve officers has eased the load, especially the complaints originating from the downtown area.

Emmons lays the blame on the increase in complaints simply on numbers. "There are more people in the area, more cars on the road, and complaints are rising right along with the other numbers".

Emmons also reported to the council that a West Main Street traffic study conducted by the State Highway Department has been completed, and a copy has been received at city hall. The report is a lot of numbers and statistics for the layman, but Emmons says the Highway Department will use the figures to determine if traffic signals or other devices are necessary in the area.

In other council business a transfer of a class C and SDM liquor license for 211 W. Main St. was approved. The license was transferred from William Gardner to Marion J. and Winthrop C. Setchfield of Belding.

The business where the license is held is known as Gardner's Village Inn.

A $12,000 plus tree trimming, removal and transplanting program was tabled by the council because Councilman Charles Doyle and Mayor James Maatman were not present.

New hardware to open soon!

There is a lot of activity in and around 1601 West Main Street in Lowell where everyone is busy preparing for the opening on July 18 of Bernard's True Value Hardware Store.

Charles Bernard, or "Charlie" as he prefers to be called, is interested in bringing to Lowell a full-service hardware, emphasizing the general hardware line, electrical and plumbing supplies, tools and paint. The store will also feature housewares and sporting goods and advertising regular specials.

A Grand Opening will be scheduled for a later date with many specials and extras offered. Besides Charlie, those on hand to serve the customers will be Karl Fry and Tate Thomas, both of Lowell, and Bernard's children, Matthew and Kirstin.

Charlie has been located in the Grand Rapids area for the past 25 years, serving as a quality control supervisor for Georgia Pacific for 11 years and for the past 10 years worked in the automotive after market area. He has three children, a daughter, Collyn in California, daughter Kirstin and son Matthew, who will be assisting their father in the business. The Bernard family plans to move to the nearby area at an early date.

Residents are looking forward to welcoming this new and attractive business to our town with good wishes for a successful venture.

First local wheat arrives at King Milling

The 1987 wheat harvest is underway in Michigan, and that means busy, busy times for the King Milling Co. Over the next two to three weeks about 2.5 million bushels of wheat will be unloaded at King's three unloading facilities. Brian Doyle, a spokesman for the company says, "we hope to fill up, but last fall's wet weather prohibited many farmers from getting their crop in". Doyle says this year's crop is very high in protein because of this season's unusually dry weather.

Most Lowellites can remember days when semis loaded with wheat clogged the city streets as they lined up waiting to unload. Due to increased capability, those days have gone by the wayside. Doyle says a 1,000 bushel semi load can be unloaded every seven minutes at each of the mill's three unloading stations. "Even when the harvest is at its peak, the longest wait truckers have to endure is about one hour, compared to twelve hours in the old days" Doyle said.

The first local load of wheat was brought to King Milling on Friday, July 3.

HUGE CROWD ENJOYS FIREWORKS!

A huge crowd of spectators enjoyed the warm summer evening as they viewed the $3,000.00 fireworks display staged by the Lowell Area Chamber of Commerce. The annual Fourth of July event attracted one of the largest crowds yet. Chamber spokesman Bob Pfaller said, "the cars were parked along Bowes Rd. further to the west than I can remember seeing them".

The Chamber of Commerce sponsors the event each year, and pays the expenses from their general fund and from private donations.

The Fourth Annual Fourth of July Silver Lake Sail-In Pig Roast is history! Now that this tumultuous affair is behind me, I feel like the rest of the year can go on normally. This party has developed into proportions that are getting to be a bit scary for the originators.

The event started four years ago when two of my sailing buddies and I decided a Hawaiian style luau on the beach at Silver Lake would be a great idea. We wanted to roast a pig in the ground like the Hawaiians do, so we began a search for someone who knew how to go about it. We discovered that there just aren't many people in these parts who are schooled in the art of roasting a pig in the ground. We found a lot of people who had an idea as to how it should be done, but we never ran across anyone who could emphatically say, "this is how you do it". That should have told us something, but we were determined.

We took all the ideas we had accumulated, and began sorting through them. Some of the suggestions, such as hunting down a boar with a spear, were obviously not given serious consideration. I'm afraid a local hog farmer would head for his shotgun if he saw three idiots running around his barnyard wearing loin cloths and chucking spears at his pigs. We wanted to be traditional, but not extreme.

We bought a pig (already slaughtered and quartered), tons of charcoal and several rolls of heavy duty tin foil. By rights we should have built the fire from driftwood, and wrapped the pig in leaves. But when we considered our geographical location, we determined that we were a long way from any driftwood, and oak leaves would probably not suffice as a good wrapping material. The event was getting less and less traditional as it progressed.

One idea that had been given to us made a lot of sense. We were told that if we lined the bottom of the pit with granite rocks, they would retain the heat throughout the cooking procedure. Trouble was, there just aren't many granite rocks on the Silver Lake sand dunes. In fact, there aren't any granite rocks in that whole neck of the woods. We raided a local stone pile, and transported several boxes of stones from Lowell to Silver Lake. Then we hauled them by boat to our roasting site on the sand dunes. We leave the stones buried and re-excavate the site each year, so the stone transporting was a one time pain in the back. I can't help but wonder what some future archeologist is going to think about that misplaced pile of stones. He'll probably credit them to some heathen ritual. Of course, he wouldn't be too far off base.

Once the pit was dug, the fire started and the pig was in the ground, there wasn't much left to do, but keep an all night vigil. We drank a few beers, swapped lies, and down deep we all wondered what in heck we were going to feed about 75 hungry people the next day if our experiment didn't work out.

As luck would have it, the pig was actually done when we dug it up the next day. It was a little too done in places, but that was certainly better than the other alternative. That first year about 75 or 80 people showed up. The next year well over 100 came to the event. Last year we estimated the crowd at 150 or more. This year we probably had about the same number, even though a large contingent of regulars were unable to attend because of a death in the family. Most people come by sailboat, bring a dish to pass and toss a few bucks in the kitty to help cover the cost of the pig. The last two years we have even had commemorative tee-shirts made. This year we had 80 shirts made with four colors of ink. They sold for eight bucks apiece, and went like hot cakes. Like I said, this thing has really developed into quite a party.

I don't dare throw out an open invitation, but if you happen to be in the neighborhood next Fourth of July, we could probably find a serving of pork for you. We might even sell you a tee-shirt.

Letter to the Editor

July 6, 1987

Dear Editor,
Having lived in the middle of Mackerville for over 10 years of the 13 years it was played in Lowell and with it being directly in front of our house for the last 4 years we feel that what we saw in Belding this past weekend was the main reason for the tournament to leave Lowell. GREEED!! The guy with the big head and little body (No not the Macker logo -- but Scott McNeal) said in an early June Grand Rapids Press story that Lowell had become "Greedy" and wanted a piece of the action. To capitalize on it so to speak. We take personal offense to this as the tournament usually cost us money. For example, I spent over $150 to replace the sod in front of our home after last year's tournament without so much as an offer from the Macker to reimburse us or even a thank-you.

What went on in Belding is a prime example that the local tournament was not run as a non-profit event. You could buy everything imaginable with the Macker logo on it: pens, pencils, shirts, hats, seat cushions, license plate frames, etc. and being a business owner this is understandable that the Macker people would want to capitalize on the situation. But at the expense of the neighbors -- Come On.

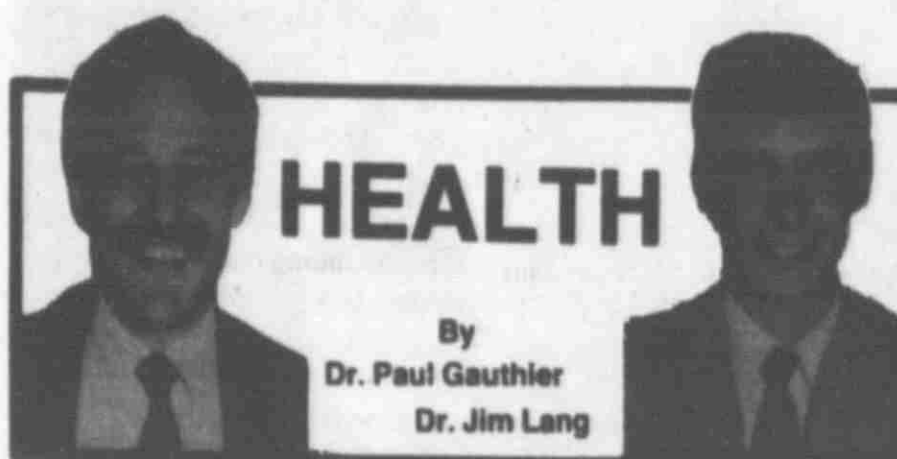

Another prime example of greed is what some of the Belding residents did during the tournament. In the 13 years this was in our neighborhood never was there a resident that set up a "For Profit" concession stand in their yard (maybe a five and ten cent Koolaid stand to occupy the kids) or even had a garage sale during the tournament. But while walking through this year's tournament we saw Belding residents (not service organizations) with small businesses set up in their yard. Gatorade stands, popcorn stands, Coke stands, garage sales including one with what appeared to be a total new inventory from a children's clothing store. There were even signs in driveways that said "Park here only $1.00 per car". Greed, greed, and more greed. That's why Scott took this tournament from Lowell and he had the audacity to call our town "Greedy". I hope he took off his narrow sighted Macker sun glasses long enough this weekend to see all of this and that what the City Council of Lowell did was in the best interest of the taxpayers of this town and only wanted to break even while he cashed in on a tournament that would have never grown to what it is today without the help and support of his "Non-Profit neighbors". After all these years we feel used and like we were slapped in the face by the Macker people.

Kevin & Jane Smith
P.S. There is talk of another tournament for Lowell called the 1st unoriginal, 3 on 3, slap your neighbor in the face, who needs you Gus Macker, yes you've ruined a neighborhood, basketball tournament.

Notices in the Ledger's "Coming Events" are free of charge to any non-profit organization in the Lowell, Ada, Alto, and Saranac area. We prefer such notices to be kept brief and to be submitted by mail, but will accept notices by phone at 897-9261.

SWIMMER'S ITCH

A common malady seen during the summer months in Michigan is swimmer's itch. This rash is seen in individuals who have been swimming in shallow inland lakes. The rash will usually be present a few hours to a day or so after swimming. It will appear as red splotchy patches over skin that was exposed to the water. Areas of the rash were covered by a bathing suit are usually spared. The rash usually lasts 3-5 days and can cause intense itching.

Swimmer's itch is due to invasion of the skin by a parasite fluke found in ducks, geese, muskrat and carried by snails. These parasites invade the human skin but are unable to penetrate further and complete their life cycle. An allergic reaction ensues and then the rash develops. In order for the allergic rash to develop, repeated exposures to the parasitic infested water is usually necessary.

Treatment of swimmer's itch consists of applying soothing lotion like Calamine or Caladryl. Oral antihistamines such as Benadryl will also reduce itching. This is available over-the-counter and should be taken as directed on the package label. Sometimes topical steroid creams will be prescribed in severe cases. A 1/2% hydrocortisone cream can be purchased over-the-counter and may be more effective than Calamine.

Swimmer's itch may be prevented or at least partially prevented by immediately drying the skin after swimming. This may not completely prevent the rash since some penetration of the skin by the parasite can take place during immersion.

In summary, swimmer's itch is usually a self-limited, itchy red rash caused by a parasite found commonly in Michigan waters. It can usually be treated with simple over-the-counter remedies. If the rash lasts longer than 3-5 days, or becomes secondarily infected, you should consult your doctor.

Wedding Planned

Kimberly Kay Grudzinkas and Charles John Payton

Kimberly Kay Grudzinkas and Charles John Payton are planning to be wed on August 15, 1987. Parents of the couple are Charles A. and Helen Grudzinkas of McCabe Ave. N.E. and Phyllis I. and the late Cyril Payton of Tallman S.E.

And the Lord God formed man... and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul (Genesis 2:7).

It was great fun modeling clay with our fingers when we were youngsters. Then, too, I remember some of the other things we made — baskets of burdock burs, imaginary play houses with piles of leaves to indicate the rooms, purses with compacts, combs, and mirrors created out of paper and crayons, and paper dolls, drawn by hand, then clothed with dresses cut from paper and carefully decorated. My brothers spent hours making rubber band guns out of scrap lumber and discarded inner tubes. Bits of boards and a rescued wheel or two became a cart or scooter. God is the source of all creative ability and activity. The heavens, the moon, the stars, and all the living creatures inhabiting the earth are products of His handiwork. He made man, and He is mindful of him. God is concerned with each affliction we must bear. He sympathizes and cares. Because we are His creation, He understands our frailties, and He knows how to comfort and strengthen us in our moments of weakness. He knows all about us because "He made us."

Prayer: O God, I am a product of Thy handiwork. Thou knowest my weaknesses. Thou sympathizest with me in my afflictions. When I am misunderstood, Thou understandest, for Thou hast made me. I am Thine. Amen. He brings me thro' affliction; He leaves me not alone; He's with me in temptation; He keeps me for His own. B.E. WARREN

25th Annual Wyoming Rodeo July 9-11

Such standout cowboy favorites as Ted Nuce, Kent Cooper, Bud Gjermundson and Jim Sharp, along with World bull riding champion, Tuff Hedeman, will be displaying their skills at the 25th annual Wyoming Championship Professional Rodeo, July 9-10-11 and Fort Wyoming in Lamar Park near Grand Rapids. It's expected 200 or more top cowboys and cowgirls from the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association (PRCA) circuit, will be competing for the $18,000 plus prize money in six rugged events starting nightly at 7:30. The gates open at 6 p.m. Events contested nightly are: bare-back riding, saddle bronc riding, calf roping, steer wrestling, ladies' barrel racing and the ever-popular bull riding, always the last and most exciting event on the rodeo agenda. Nuce, a steady contestant for Stock Contractor, Jim Sutton, starting his 16th year at the Wyoming event, has a flying start in the 1987 point and money winning totals. He's currently No. 2 in the bull riding competition and looking ahead to earning a spot in December's National Finals in Las Vegas. While a large number of World and National Champs are expected for the three nights of action, they all will be put to the supreme test as Sutton's well-trimmed and kept horses and bulls are highly-rated in the PRCA. Since 1959, Sutton has supplied stock for the National finals every year. His large ranch is located near Onida, S.D. Hedeman, crowned the World bull riding champion at the National Finals in Vegas last winter, finished second behind Sharp in the 1986 Wyoming Championship Rodeo and is looking for revenge in the local performance. Tickets purchased at Fort Wyoming gates are $8 reserved adults, $7 general admission and children (ages 5-12) $3.

Ledger Entries . . . of 75, 50 and 25 Years Ago

100 YEARS AGO IN THE JOURNAL - JULY 7, 1887
The Lowell Journal office is in Train's Hall Block. Clarendon, PA loses over 100 buildings in a fire started by fireworks. No fire department, and the first department to arrive didn't have enough hose.

The Rix Robinson monument is dedicated in Ada. Wool is a major crop in the area. 160,000 pounds came in this year, 40,000 less than in 1886.

75 YEARS AGO IN THE LEDGER - JULY 4, 1912
Woodrow Wilson, governor of New Jersey, is nominated to run against Republican Wm. Howard Taft. Special assessments are made for sewer lines on Kent, Jefferson and Bridge Streets.

The editor says payment on delinquent accounts will be most welcome.

50 YEARS AGO IN THE LEDGER - JULY 6, 1937
Ben Kerekes' corn was almost six feet tall by July 4. The weekly balloon ascension and parachute drop almost ends in tragedy when the rain-wat balloon rises only a few hundred feet and the jumper's chute opens 100 feet up. The Morlok Quadruplets will be featured on Showboat again.

25 YEARS AGO IN THE LEDGER - JULY 5, 1962
U.S. Naval Academy swim-team captain Peter VerMaire is lifeguarding at the pool this summer.

Don Mac Naughton prints the Showboat tickets for the 30th time in 31 years of the show.

Curly Howard's first Flat River Junior Rodeo of the season plays to a good crowd. Six more competitions will follow in this fourth year of the series.

A special section tells about the Y Flat River Day Camp, headed by Art Bieri.

Real police work for TV cop Waxman

By Evan Levine

Some actors go to the library to research characters they're going to play. Al Waxman, who portrays Lt. Samuels on CBS's "Cagney & Lacey," got himself involved in a situation involving the Toronto police, a handgun and a man wielding a knife instead.

Al Waxman

Waxman was with a friend - a member of the Toronto police force - in an unmarked police car. "We were parked by the curb when we saw this guy creating a public disturbance," the actor remembers. "We told him to stop, but he didn't listen. By this time, a crowd was gathering. Then the guy came over and stuck a knife through a window. My friend pulled his gun and turned to me and said, 'I needed this?' He calmly dealt with the guy while I called for backup. Throughout the whole situation, even though he was scared, my friend didn't shout, he didn't hurt anyone. He managed to subdue a potentially explosive situation. He handled it beautifully because he'd learned how to control his fear. I always remember that when I'm playing Samuels." Toronto-born Waxman, who starred in "The King of Kensington," one of Canada's biggest TV hits, has spent a lot of time with police, both on stakeouts and observing day-to-day work, and is an honorary New York police lieutenant.

"A lot of police work is just routine stuff," he observes. "One of the things that makes 'Cagney & Lacey' so good is that it's not just action-oriented. It focuses on behavior and relationships. "The cops I know love the show. I think it certainly merits respect," says the actor. He knows that it's primarily a show about the two female leads, and he doesn't mind. "I fight for what's right for my character," he claims. "I would like to see more of Samuels' personal life, but he's such a workaholic. The important thing is that the show overall doesn't settle for less than the best."

Waxman, who has directed many of the show's episodes, claims that television is his favorite medium. "It's the closest to now, to the pulse of what's happening," he explains, noting that Samuels has mellowed over the years. "It makes people aware of certain thoughts. In this case, I think there are a lot of men like Samuels, who maybe started out as chauvinists but need to know that women can be just as good cops as men. "Of course," he says thoughtfully, "for an actor, radio is good too. It's a medium where you don't have to shave and can come to work in your pajamas."

Area youngsters learn rules

Shown above are those youngsters who won prizes in the recent bike rodeo sponsored by the Lowell Police Department and the Cub Scouts organization. They entered in the contests and had great fun while learning all about bike safety rules, according to Lowell Officer Al Eckman. The picture of bicycle winners: Glenn Wilson, Nathan Zeeuw, Heather Stokes, Kris Stremier and Eric Sigler, appeared in last week's Ledger.

Krause at the House

Vic Krause 19th District State Representative

State Representative Vic Krause (R-Rockford) said today he voted against the key bill in the governor's tax shift package because it is part of an ill-adviced plan to increase taxes on many individuals and businesses to pay for token property tax credits for some homeowners. The Bill, House Bill 4613, would provide a maximum of $100 to homeowners with household income of less than $50,000. It would raise taxes on retirees, lottery winners, members of the armed forces, financial institutions, utilities and Michigan-based insurance companies. It was passed by the House Tuesday on a vote of 60 to 43. "This plan is a weak attempt to deceive Michigan property owners who are demanding significant relief. It also sends the wrong signal to job providers who will not be encouraged to bring capital and jobs to Michigan, nor to retain what is here now", Rep. Krause commented. There are several groups in the legislature and state government working on major plans to reduce the reliance on the property tax, he said. Some of those studies will also address the key issue of school finance, which the Governor's plan ignores, he noted. "We can do better, much better, than this," Rep. Krause explained. "My vote will be there when a genuine property tax relief measure is brought before the House. But, I cannot pass off a charade like this to my constituents as my answer to this serious problem."

Council Proceedings

OFFICIAL PROCEEDINGS of the CITY COUNCIL of the CITY OF LOWELL, MICHIGAN
Regular Meeting of Monday, June 15, 1987
The meeting was called to order at 8:00 p.m. by Mayor Maatman.
The Pledge of Allegiance was recited and the clerk called the Roll. Present: Councilmembers Thompson, Doyle, Collins and Mayor Maatman. Absent: Fonger.
IT WAS MOVED by Collins and supported by Doyle to excuse the absence of Fonger. YEA: All. NAY: None. ABSENT: Fonger. MOTION CARRIED.
IT WAS MOVED by Councilman Thompson that the Minutes of the June 1, 1987 meeting be approved as written, submitted by Councilman Doyle. YEA: All. NAY: None. ABSENT: Fonger. MOTION CARRIED.
Gary Love, attorney for Gus Macker, spoke next to address points brought up by the Mayor. He noted the December trial completion was the reason the Macker didn't approach the city until January regarding using Main Street and their recent decision to move was not an attempt to force the city council to change their decision regarding the 5% fee, but if the fee was retained it would not be economically possible to conduct the event in Lowell this year. Again, he stated the Macker was willing to pay all costs and follow through with the promised donation, $2,000, for park purposes.
Councilman Collins spoke up to say that the city cannot donate funds for any event, whether profit or nonprofit and the cost to the city this year already has exceeded $4,200.
Mitch McNeal took the floor and stated that no member of the Macker council receives any type of compensation and this year they had designated St. Mary's Hospital, West Michigan Kidney Dialysis Center, as the charity because they were donating money to sponsor the event and the 5% fee hinders them from an adequate donation. He noted no notice had been received for the June 1 council meeting. He stated the Macker was willing to absorb all costs of the event, but that they couldn't live with the 5% fee and that he understood the position of the Lowell citizens but the decision to move was based on the decision of the city council which made it too expensive to have the tournament in Lowell. Members of the Lowell Boosters, annual exclusive concessioners for the tournament, questioned Mr. McNeal as to whether they would be able to work in the City of Belding. Mr. McNeal replied he was uncertain and would get back with the organization.
Richard Wendt, City Attorney, stated the city council had adopted the Special Events Ordinance, which included provision to establish a fee for events of this nature, at a meeting on April 15, 1987, which Macker officials were in attendance. He also listed the costs to the city for the tournament this year: $2,459.32 signage, $1,386.00 police reserve, $582.26 administrative costs and in excess of $1,000 for legal fees.
Ivan Blough inquired whether there would be any chance for the Macker to stay in Lowell and if not, would there be a return of division sponsorship and the player's money. He said he felt the Macker had let the supporters down by not waiting until after the council meeting to hear input from the citizens before making their decision. Mr. McNeal replied no and that the purpose of coming to the meeting was not to change the minds of the city council.
After several more comments, at 9:50 p.m., IT WAS MOVED by Collins and supported by Doyle to adjourn the meeting to City Hall.

LAAC Sponsors Mime Performance and Workshops

Michael Lee

Lowell Area Arts Council is presenting Michael Lee of Ann Arbor, Michigan, in "This Art of Mime" at 8:00 p.m. on Friday, July 24 at the Lowell Area Arts Council Center, 149 S. Hudson Street.

Mr. Lee, a student of the master of mime, Marcel Marceau will give an evening performance for the first time in the Lowell area. A reception for Mr. Lee and musician, Valerie Amo, will follow the program. Tickets for this theatrical event are $4.00 per person and seating is limited to 100, so get your tickets early as this looks to be a sellout for the Center! Tickets are available at the Arts Council Center, the Great Lakes Federal Savings office, and the Flat River Antique Mall.

Mr. Lee will also be presenting a workshop in mime for dancers and a mime workshop for children, both being offered by the Lowell Area Arts Council.

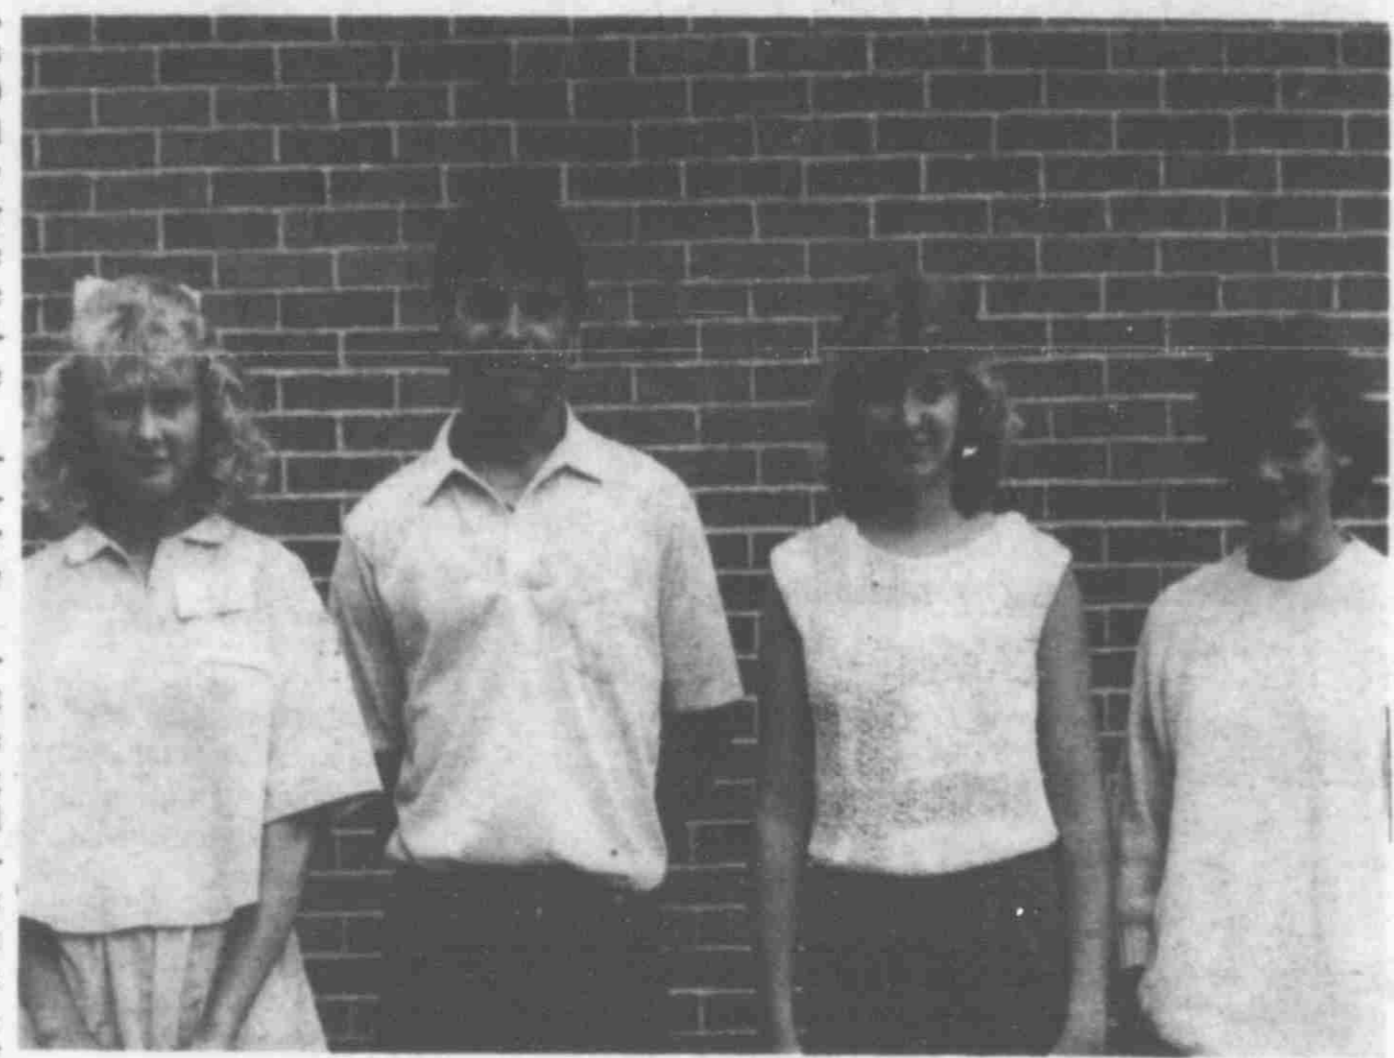

The Mime Workshop for children is scheduled for July 24 at 9:00 a.m. Would your child like to entertain friends by creating objects out of thin air? Would they enjoy climbing an imaginary rope, putting on magic shoes? Learn to "speak" without saying a single word? Here is their chance to learn about the challenging, and fun, world of mime. Mr. Lee will have just completed study with Marcel Marceau before coming to Lowell. Cost of the workshop for children is $5.00 per child and class size is limited so interested persons are asked to sign up early by coming to the Arts Council Center afternoons or by calling 897-8545.

A workshop in mime for dancers will be offered at 9:30 a.m. on Saturday, July 25, covering stage movement, body projection, and improvisation, as well as specific mime techniques of creating illusions. Michael Lee has studied ballet at Sylvia's Studio of Dance in Ann Arbor and mime with Marcel Marceau. This class limit is 20 students, aged 14 to adult. It is expected many will be interested in taking advantage of this great opportunity right here in our area. Make your plans now. The cost is $10.00 per student and those planning to attend may sign up at the Arts Council Center or by calling 897-8545.

Area Students Learn Citizenship Responsibilities at Seminar

Over 220 high school students from throughout the state participated in the 24th annual Young People's Citizenship Seminar, June 22-26 at Olivet College. Michigan Farm Bureau sponsors the event to help students prepare for their citizenship responsibilities, both as voters and possible politicians, and to help them appreciate the freedoms they enjoy by living in America.

During the seminar, students perform as political party delegates, candidates and voters. In addition to participating in political rallies and campaigns, the students learn about U.S. and world economics, cultures in other countries and the many freedoms Americans often take for granted.

Festivals crop up for Sesquicentennial

Travelers hungry for something different can spice up their summer by visiting the various fruit, vegetable and other palate-pleasing festivals cropping up around the state, reports AAA Michigan.

Michigan's savory smorgas-bord includes a full menu of delights, ranging from Traverse City's National Cherry Festival to the International Cherry Pit Spitting Championship at Eau Claire.

More than 350,000 visitors are expected for the 61st annual National Cherry Festival in Traverse City July 5-11. The seven-day event will provide more than 120 fun-filled activities, including cherry orchard tours, three colorfully staged parades, a milk carton boat race and fireworks.

Spectators can cheer the cherry pit spitters at Eau Claire's International Cherry Pit Spitting Championship at the Tree-Mendus Fruit Farm July 4. For more sedate activity, Chassell's 44th Strawberry Festival will offer Upper Peninsula travelers some of Michigan's largest fresh strawberries served on shortcake July 10-11.

South Haven, a leader in blueberry farming, presents its 24th annual Blueberry Festival, highlighted by a pie-eating contest, parades and farm tours July 15-19. Visitors can forget their diets as area restaurants will offer special blueberry danishes, tarts and sundae. A salute to blueberries at Montrose Aug. 14-16 will allow fruit lovers to sample blueberry pies, muffins, donuts, jelly and ice cream.

Locally grown peaches and gladiolus along with fireworks and a parade will brighten Coloma at the Glad-Peach Festival Aug. 7-9. Romeo's peach trees will ripen in time for a Sept. 3-7 festival, including three parades, hot-air balloon rides and a pie-eating contest.

More fun is brewing at Northport, where a full-course meal of state products will be served July 5, including Grand Traverse Bay whitefish and Michigan red potatoes as part of the July 3-5 Harbor Days and Fish Boil. Alpena's Ethnic Day will present a taste of Michigan with potatoes, sauerkraut and lake Huron whitefish and salmon July 18.

Spicy sausage aromas will tempt travelers to stop at New Buffalo's annual Corn and Sausage Roast Aug. 9. Central Lake farmers will provide their homegrown ears at the Old-Fashioned Corn Roast Aug. 30.

Excitement also will be cooking at Fairgrove's Bean Festival Sept. 4-7 with free samples of Michigan navy bean soup, baked beans, a parade and the crowning of a bean queen.

One of Northeast Lower Michigan's largest parades will feature a variety of potato floats as part of Posen's annual Potato Festival Sept. 11-13. Farmers will provide potatoes for Polish dinners and pancakes, served with polka band entertainment.

St. John's mint farms will provide tours while numerous food booths area restaurants present mint chocolate chip ice cream, mint milk shakes and mint jelly during the Mint Festival Aug. 9. Baked goods made with Michigan flour are featured at Kalamazoo's Flour Fest July 19.

As temperatures rise, travelers can cool off in Paw Paw at the Community Ice Cream Social Aug. 16 with a variety of Michigan fruits used for toppings. Trenton also will offer a Sesquicentennial Ice Cream Social July 10-11. Nearly every type of pie imaginable will be lined up at Caspian's annual pie social Sept. 13 at Iron County's Historical Museum Cultural Center.

AAA Michigan advises travelers to confirm dates and activities before visiting any of the 18 events described.

TEMPTING TASTES of Michigan will lure travelers to festivals throughout the state this Sesquicentennial summer. Delicious treats ranging from fruits, vegetables and Great Lakes fish to ice creams and pies should please the palates of even the most discriminating festival-goers. A sampling of Southwest Michigan blueberries, Northwest Michigan cherries and Saginaw Valley navy beans are among the homegrown Michigan products that will be highlighted. For those who want to go back in time, Kalamazoo's Flour Fest will feature an 1870 mill and antique farm implements while Paw Paw will re-create an authentic ice cream social similar to gatherings held in the 1830s. Parades, farm tours, fireworks and craft shows are some of the main ingredients making up the diverse festivals.

Bureau to collect data

"CLOSED?"

The Census Bureau will collect current employment and unemployment data for this area the week of July 20-25, according to Dwight Dean, acting director of the bureau's Detroit regional office.

The local data will contribute to July's national labor force picture to be released August 7th by the Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS). The May data, the most current, showed a national civilian unemployment rate of 6.3 percent. This means that 7.5 million workers out of a labor force of 112.4 million did not have jobs.

The Census Bureau's monthly Current Population Survey includes a national sample of some 58,000 households and is sponsored by BLS primarily to gather labor force data. Information supplied by individuals is kept confidential by law. Only statistical totals are published.

Shown below is a chart depicting national civilian noninstitutional population unemployment rates. The data are seasonally adjusted for 1984 through May of 1987.

John Heeringa of 12166 McPherson Rd. brought in a photo he snapped at 7:30 Saturday morning at Lowell's west city limits. The makeshift sign reads, "Lowell Closed Try Belding", an obvious reference to Gus Macker's move to Belding. Enough said.

Michigan 4-H Youth Programs are not just for rural children

4-H programs are open to all young people, regardless of who they are or where they live. Rural 4-H'ers enjoy participating in performing arts or computer science, and though many people may not realize it, urban youngsters may win recognition for horse or livestock projects.

The Michigan 4-H Youth Program offers a variety of activities in the animal science project areas that do not require ownership or even access to an animal for participation.

"The principal purpose is to make these activities available to all youths, whether they live in town, in the country, or in a distant part of the state," says 4-H program leader John Aylsworth.

State-level 4-H events are offered for rabbit, poultry, goat, sheep, swine, beef and dairy cattle, and horse enthusiasts.

Events are held year round, mostly on the expansive Michigan State University campus, which has facilities to accommodate groups of any size and house a ready supply of study specimens.

Besides the showmanship competitions that most people identify with animal projects, there are quiz bowls, demonstrations, public speaking contests, animal judging and other events that help 4-H'ers learn more about the species that interests them.

In a demonstration contest, 4-h'ers perform a skill related to their area of interest.

"Preparing for a demonstration helps young people develop skills in communication and organization," Aylsworth says, "and makes them better at presenting themselves in front of an audience."

Quiz bowls operate like the old "College Quiz Bowl" TV show. Two teams of four members attempt to outscore each other by answering questions about breeds, anatomy, nutrition, reproduction and a host of other topics that relate to their species.

Rabbit, goat and dairy members may also put their creative skills to the test in poster and exhibit design or recipe contests, and poultry members can compete in chicken and turkey barbecue competitions.

The trifecta competition, which takes place at the annual Livestock Expo in July, is a series of communication, showmanship and judging events.

For more information about any 4-H animal project, contact Ionia County Cooperative Extension Service office at 616-527-5357.
