quality of the effluent entering the Flat River for some time. The beginning of construction on the new plant is the culmination of many years of studies, grant applications and working up priority lists. A court case filed against the city by the E.P.A. for violation of deadlines to put a new plant on line is still pending.

The dignitaries had lunch at Deer Run Golf Club following the ground breaking. Former Lowell City Manager Ray Quada served as master of ceremonies. Other speakers included Carl Huber from the city's engineering firm Fishbeck, Thompson, Huber and Carr, Dick Wendt from the city attorney firm of Clary, Nance, Wood, Hoffius, Rankin and Cooper, Ron Woods from The Department of Natural Resources, Lowell Township Supervisor Harry Yeiter, Lowell Mayor James Maatman and Lowell City Manager David M. Pasquale. The city attorneys' firm organized the ceremony and paid for the luncheon.

These dignitaries were on hand for the customary ground breaking ceremony to begin construction of Lowell's new $6.2 million sewage treatment plant. From left to right are Jim Townley and Peter Daukss from the city's engineering firm of Fishbeck, Thompson, Huber and Carr, Councilman Charlie Doyle, Mayor James Maatman, City Manager David M. Planners OK five separate issues

The Lowell Planning Commission gave the green light to five requests from various businesses Monday evening. The planners first approved a special use request from George Converse, owner of G&E Auto Repair. Converse asked to be allowed to move the body shop portion of his business to the rear of the large building at 508 W. Main. The building is owned by Jim McFall, and Blue Crocodile Ceramics operates out of the front of the building. The building is in a C-2 zone (commercial general business), and a body shop does not qualify.

However, the planners made the exception when Converse guaranteed that all work and storage would be confined to the inside of the building, and that no cars or parts would be kept outside. Converse currently operates both a body shop and mechanical repair business at 834 W. Main. That location is too small for his needs, and many cars are stored outside. Converse explained that splitting the business between two locations would improve the appearance of his operation, which he admitted is somewhat of an eyesore. The planners agreed, and granted the special use request.

The Lowell City Council approved a site plan for an addition to the Lowell Plaza mall at 505 W. Main during their regular meeting held September 21. At that meeting, several neighbors on Chatham St. complained about the lack of adequate screening along the north wall of the proposed building. These residents attended the site plan review Monday night, and again voiced their concerns. Art, Phil and Lyle Johnson, developers of the mall, said they had trimmed an existing hedge, and expected that to fill in nicely as a screen.

that the hedge wouldn't be adequate, and argued that an earthen berm with a row of plantings on top would be a better

The issue was bantered back and forth for about forty-five minutes before a compromise was reached. The Johnson brothers agreed to extend the hedge for the full length of the north wall, plant three seven foot blue spruce trees behind it and keep the hedge trimmed.

A site plan for Sam's Factory Outlet Automotive at 2400 W. Main was approved by the planners. Sam Lombardo, the owner of the facility, plans to build a large retail and repair building on the site. The plan had come before the commission at their last meeting and several amendments were requested by the planners. The changes made include a 25 foot green belt along Main St. right of way, a row of trees planted along the rear property line, rear yard paving, remove a row of parking along Main St. and increase parking to 55 spaces to meet ordinance requirements.

A site plan was submitted for approval by Henry VanderVennen, owner of Vennen Chrysler, Dodge and Plymouth, Inc. Vander Vennen owns the home at 930 W. Main St. and two parcels to the south. The lot the home sits on is already zoned commercial, and Vander Vennen requested rezoning of the other two lots from residential to commercial. His plans call for the demolition of the home, and the construction of a parking lot over the entire three parcels. VanderVennen explained that the lot would be used for his used car department, and that someday he may construct a used car office and cleanup facility on the site.

The planners discussed many Wayne Lemmen presented two site plans for approval by the planners. Both plans concern the development of the Shell gas station at the corner of Hudson and Main. In either plan, Lemmen intends to raze the existing structure, and construct a new Shell service station and convenience store. Initially his plans also called for a pull-through car wash, but that idea has been dropped for now.

In one plan the building would be constructed in the center of the property with canopies and gas pumps on both the east and Mike Tummino was present to represent the Lowell First Congregational Church. Tummino explained that the church has purchased two parcels to the west of their building. The parishioners want to raze the buildings on those parcels and construct a parking lot. A public hearing regarding the issue was slated for the Planning Commission meeting.

Everyone was a winner at the 19th Annual Fallasburg Festival this past weekend as sunny skies and warm weather blessed the festival with the nicest weekend in memory. Visitors to the park were winners as they enjoyed a festive celebration of fall amidst food booths, art displays, and beautiful fall colors. Nine nonprofit organizations from Lowell and Alto ultimately will profit from the good deeds of these organizations as they are able to expand their services due to the good sales. The 60 artists all seemed to leave the park with big smiles and "See you next year" partings. The sponsor organization, the Lowell Area Arts Council, is very happy at the results of their hard work.

Some individuals were winners in special ways. Kay Speerstra of Lowell is one of the big winners since she held the lasburg Quilt. Other raffle winners were Gene Snyder of Lowell, winner of a ceramic humming bird feeder by Jim Ardis; Phyllis Bowling of Greenville, winner of a ceramic vase from Fish Lake Pottery; Barb Davis of Lowell, winner of a trapunto wall hanging by Susan Winter; H.F. Petty of New York, winner of a basket by Barbara Caddick; Ann Kempker, winner of a shaker box by Joel Kammeraad with pot pourri from Laurel's Country Gardens; Mary Elderkin of Grand Rapids, winner of an etched glass hanging from Rainbow Stained Glass Studio; and Cindy Gillard of Grand Rapids, winner of a second etched glass

COMMON PARASITES: PART II

This week will conclude our 2 part article on common parasites and their treatment.

PINWORMS

Pinworms are small roundworms which are extremely common. In fact, current U.S. studies have concluded that pinworms may affect up to 50% of the children living in the United States! Transmission occurs through the ingestion of eggs. Symptoms are most often mild, usually limited to rectal itching caused by the female migrating to the peri-anal area to lay eggs. The diagnosis is made by identifying eggs adhering to tape applied to the peri-anal area. Treatment is readily available and the disease is preventable through good hygiene.

TRICHINOSIS

Trichinosis is primarily a disease of swine, but humans may become infected by eating raw or poorly cooked contaminated meat. In the human, the worm matures and eventually migrates to the muscles, where it is destroyed by the body. This reaction causes symptoms of muscle soreness, fever, and puffy eyes. More severe reactions and even death may occur with heavy infestations. Trichinosis is suspected on the basis of clinical symptoms but it must be diagnosed conclusively with a muscle biopsy. Treatment with Vermox (R) is effective and prevention is accomplished by properly cooking meat for human consumption as well as all food fed to pigs.

SCHISTOSOMASIS

This disease is caused by a blood fluke which has a complex life cycle involving fresh-water snails as an intermediate host. It is largely a tropical disease with only occasional U.S. cases being reported. Transmission is through exposure of the skin to water containing larvae released by infected snails. The acute phase of the disease may result in diarrhea and abdominal pain, with enlargement of the liver and spleen. Effective treatment is available, but major efforts should be directed toward improving sanitation and elimination of the snail as the intermediate host.

Some random tennis world notes . . .

Who is really number one? With her easy victory over Steffi Graf at the U.S. Open, Martina Navratilova once again made this the hottest topic of discussion on the womens' professional circuit. The complicated computer ranking system used by the USTA will probably keep Graf in the number one position despite the loss. Backing her claim are the eight tournaments that she has won in 1987, including finals victories over Navratilova at the Lipton Classic and the French Open.

Navratilova's claim is simple. She has won only two tournaments in 1987, but they were the two tournaments: Wimbledon and the U.S. Open. In the finals of both she was able to easily defeat Graf in straight sets. By Martina's thinking, these two championships are worth all of the other available titles

The series between the two in 1987 is 2-2. The losses to Navratilova are the only two suffered by Graf all year. From all indications, this controversy is going to rage on for some time .

The big story in men's tennis these days concerns the Davis Cup. Ivan Lendl, the undisputed number-one player in the world, is due to be granted United States citizenship soon. He has indicated that he would like to represent his new country in Davis Cup competition. This should come as welcome news to a U.S. team that will be forced to requalify for the competition next petition for many years. Despite many changes in the team, McEnroe has always been there. Teaming him with Lendl would surely put the U.S. back in contention for the Cup, except for one thing: they do not get along at all.

Davis Cup teammate, John McEnroe. McEnroe has almost single-handedly

A typical exchange between the two occurred at the U.S. Open. McEnroe was quoted as saying that he had no respect for Lendl and would have a hard time swallowing being on the same Davis Cup team with him. Lendl retorted that with the size of McEnroe's mouth, it was tough to believe that he would have a hard time swallowing any-

Isn't it wonderful to see the effect that a positive role model can have on a sibling? At the junior's competition of the U.S. Open, Patrick McEnroe, John's younger brother, was fined for misconduct during a break in one of his matches. His crime? Abusing tennis

And finally . . . tennis is a good sport to watch on television, but it is even better when you are playing it with a friend. Get out and hit a few today.

people can turn a leaky faucet repair into countless trips to the much more adept than most. Trying to get pictures of last Friday's Homecoming parade, game and halftime festivities is a good exam-

I started out just fine. I rounded up some film, loaded my camera and even remembered to buy extra batteries in case I needed them for the flash attachment. I took up my position at the corner of Main and Broadway in plenty of time to get lots of good shots of the parade. The parade went without a hitch. I even took some photos with a telephoto lens, and some with the regular lens. Boy,

My problems began at the football game. By this time I needed my flash. Sure enough, the batteries had about as much life left in them as the bugs on my windshield. I thought to myself, "Ah

I poured the old batteries out, and proceeded to put in the new the black and white film I was using was not DX coded. In case you aren't familiar with DX coding, it's a new miracle that tells your camera what ASA setting to select. It's basically fool proof,

I loaded it up anyway, and hoped the guys at Modern Photo back to the game, and shot up the rest of the roll. This camera had no telephoto capability, so I had to wait for plays to come

I was busy all day Saturday, and wasn't able to get the film

I explained the DX coding problem, and I was told to check the guy back with the information, and he said he should be able

There was a long silence on my end of the line, because I knew
