HALLOWEEN COSTUME CONTEST IS OCTOBER 30

The Ledger's third annual Halloween costume contest will be staged on Friday, October 30 this year. An unofficial poll of several businesses indicated that the vast majority prefered Friday because more employees would be on hand to participate, and because some businesses aren't even open on Saturday.

Give us a call at 897-9261 if employees at your workplace will be in costume. A Ledger photographer and judges will make their rounds throughout the day. They will make every effort to get to all the businesses and to honor time requests when possible.

Yes! We do need judges and prizes. Give us a call if you can help out with either.

Nat'l. Guard chopper visits L.H.S.

The Michigan National Guard dropped in on Lowell Senior High School Tuesday morning. . . literally! Sergeant Rick Mis, a recruiter for the Michigan National Guard arranged for a UH-1 "Huey" helicopter to pay a visit to the school as a recruiting promotion. Mis is based in Ionia, but lives in Lowell.

The UH-1 has been a mainstay of the United States armed forces, especially the Army, for more than twenty years. Though the Hueys are rapidly being replaced by newer, more sophisticated helicopters in the Army, the UH-1 still serves an active role in National Guard aviation. Mis explained that Huey crews are trained in evacuation and medi-vac techniques that can be used during emergencies where the Guard's trucks are ineffective.

The Huey carried a crew of three, Mis, another recruiter and two National Guardsmen in combat fatigues. The group answered questions as curious throngs of students poured over the helicopter. The students were allowed to peer inside, and some even sat in the pilot's seat.

Jamie Cook is off to the Nat'l. FFA Convention

Jamie Cook, a junior at Lowell High School, has been selected to represent Lowell in Public Speaking at the 60th National FFA Convention in Kansas City, Missouri, during the week of November 9-14.

Cook and eight other students, including Stacy Beute, Mindy Kuyt, Chris Wieland, Jon Grieser, Joe Grieser, Ryan Brandt, and Matt Howard, (alternate Shawn Wenger) will join more than 22,000 FFA members, advisors, supporters, and guests who will be representing all fifty tates, the District of Columbia Puerto Rico and the Virgin Is lands at the world's largest annual student gathering.

All these students are members of the Lowell FFA Chapter The chapter advisor is Mr. Pete Siler, who along with Mrs. Sue Beute, will accompany the FFA members to Kansas City. The 60th anniversary convention will feature keynote addresses from V.P. George Bush, Chrysler Corporation Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Lee Iacocca, Secretary of Education William Bennett and former Dallas Cowquarterback Roger Staubach. Along with these speakers, the students will have the opportunity to hear FFA's finest during public speaking contests, which will include Jamie Cook's state-winning speech entitled, "A Future for Ag-

The FFA was founded in Kansas City in 1928 at the Old Baltimore Hotel, located just a few blocks from the Municipal Auditorium where the convention currently takes place. Since then, the gathering has grown from fewer than fifty attendants to the world's largest annual youth gathering.

"The convention is an excellent opportunity to motivate members and train them for their futures in the ever-changing agricultural industry," said Kevin Eblen, national FFA president from Creston, Iowa.

"The convention will introduce the national FFA theme for 1987-88, "FFA--Agriculture's New Spirit," which emphasizes FFA's contribution to the agricultural industry.

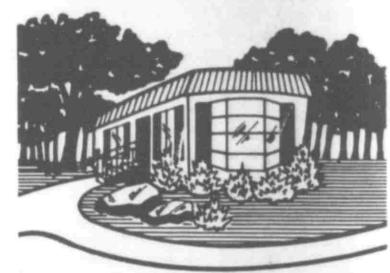

"There's no doubt agriculture is facing some major challenges today," said Dr. Larry Case, national advisor. "But if you're looking for the future of this industry, it will be found at the national FFA convention. These young people represent the new generation of leadership that will carry American agriculture into

Halloween safety tips

A bright light placed inside a carved pumpkin makes the face look eery and sinister. After all, that's what makes Halloween so much fun, right? Consumers Power Company says lighting in other areas can If residents turn their lights on ghosts and goblins in search of tricks and treats can find their way more easily.

A well-lit home will help youngsters avoid obstacles like uneven sidewalks and driveways, low-hanging tree limbs, dark steps and passing vehicles.

Dusk is perhaps the most difficult time for drivers to see pedestrians. So it is helpful if the ights are on during that transition from daylight to dark. It is worth the extra few cents they might cost and makes it safer for children and adults who want to make Halloween an evening of fun and excitement

APPLES, CARDS & MEMORIES

Getting mail, personal mail especially, is something most of us enjoy. There are times when a card or letter will just flavor our day. We tell people, "That letter made my day".

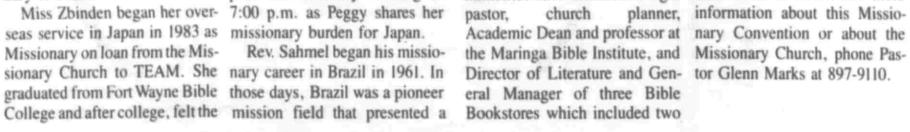

This Fall our daughter-in-law, Kim, brought her third grade students from Ada Christian School to visit our orchard. They walked around part of the orchard and then had their lunch under the trees. There is nothing quite so much fun as to eat your lunch under an apple tree. Before they left they took two or three apples a piece to share with their families. Kim's husband,

Ken, had some cider made up for them for the return trip. A week after the children had visited the orchard, my husband received a large envelope filled with thank you cards from those third graders. How we enjoyed reading them! Saying thank you is always fun and receiving the thank you is just as enjoyable. There were pictures of apples, cider jugs and apple trees and written memories from the children. It made our day. The cards? I just can't throw them away, at least for now. They are so full of life and beauty. Looking through the cards again, I do believe I hear giggles and laughter and the crunch of apples as children bite into them. The memories? Winter's coming and there will be time to look at the cards again and remember apples and cider and the visit from the children. Memories seem to be made up from such times as these. Would you like to share a memory? A letter to someone is a good way to give a memory.

It just might make someone's day.

CBS drama explores rights of grandparents

Robert Young takes role as loving grandfather

By Deborah Ferguson

Eighty-year-old Robert Young once again goes before the eyes of the tube in Conspiracy of Love, a new motion picture-for-television to be aired Sunday. Oct. 18, on the CBS Sunday Movie. Drew Barrymore, Glynnis O'Connor and Elizabeth Wilson also star in this sensitive drama revolving around the rights of grandparents.

Young plays Grampa Joe, an old-time barber living on past memories and dreams around the corner from Chicago's Wrigley Field. He is a grandparent faced with a restraining order to keep him away from his beloved grand-

"His love for his granddaughter is genuine," Young explains of his character. "He's afraid that if he doesn't make her believe he's a hero, he will lose her admiration and love. He keeps weaving tales, embellishing his past life, trying to hold onto her and bumbling it a bit. But he's very real, very believable." Barrymore, who reached stardom as the little sister in Steven Spielberg's 1982 blockbuster, E.T., is the tomboy granddaughter Jody. She lives for Grampa's grand tales of past greatness, but Jody is torn between the dreams and the reality that she must live without her idolized father who deserted her and her mother years before.

ROBERT YOUNG stars with Drew Barrymore in Conspiracy of Love, a drama about the rights of grandparents, to air Sunday, Oct. 18 on CBS.

Jody's hard-working mother, played by O'Connor, feels her ex-husband's father is a bad influence on her. So, she issues a restraining order to keep Grampa Joe from seeing Jody. Also caught up in this family friction is the grandmother portrayed by Elizabeth Wilson.

Young is probably best remembered for his role as the father in Father Knows Best for which he won two Emmy Awards. He won another Emmy for his portrayal of Marcus Welby, M.D., which ran for seven seasons. Young's acting career also includes mo-

COZY corner by Roger Brown

I called my dad last Thursday to tell him I had passed my flight exam for my private pilot's license. My exuberation apparently ranscended the phone lines. A few minutes into the conversation he said, "Gee, you are more excited about this than when you graduated from high school". I responded to that with, "Hey, I put more effort into this than I ever did into high school"

Getting my license was kind of like having a baby. It took just nine months. I've heard of people getting their private license in as little as seven weeks. All I can figure is, they must of had baby

Actually, I got off to a pretty good start in January, and progressed at a pace that would have finished me with the course in about four months. I had set Memorial Day as my goal. About the first of May we kicked off the East Kent Shopper's Guide, and my flight instruction flew out the window. Luckily, I had completed ground school and passed my written examination by then. I found that I couldn't juggle three businesses, the print shop, Ledger and Shopper, and still find the time for flight training. I shelved my flying for about three months while we worked at getting the business oiled and running smoothly. I guess the point I'm trying to make, is that I'm not quite as dumb as my snail's pace through this course might indicate.

I have to hand it to my instructor for sticking with me. I didn't make it easy for him. One of the first things they teach in flight training is stall recognition and recovery. Contrary to what many people think, a stall in flying is not an engine failure. A stall occurs when wing is pitched at too steep an angle for the air to flow over it and create lift. When an airplane is placed into a stall, it literally begins to fall out of the sky. Needless to say, it's important to be able to recognize a stall in its early stages, and know how to recover. After all, you aren't allowed too many chances to fall out of the sky. One is usually the maximum.

My first attempt at simulating a departure stall and recovering turned my instructor white. I'm not sure what color I turned. The proper recovery technique is to push the nose of the airplane down to gain air flow over the wings, then quickly, but gently, pull the yoke back and climb out of the stall. In my first try, I put the plane into a stall, jerked back on the yoke and kicked in left rudder. The plane rolled into a spin, and the instructor wrestled the controls away from me. Fortunately, we practice these maneuvers at about 3,000 feet rather than in an actual take off or departure situation.

My instructor stuck with me, even though there were other instances of student stupidity. One day he had me stop the plane at the end of the runway. He hopped out, and asked for my student license so that he could sign me off and send me solo. The only problem was, my license was in my file in the instructor's desk didn't know it at the time, but I had been busting FAA regulations by not carrying it with me.

Once during our pre-flight inspection, we forgot to untie the tail tie-down rope. It was one of those, "I thought you got it" deals. When I gave the plane some throttle to taxi, the nose came off the ground. The instructor jumped out and quickly untied the thing. As we taxied away, we both quietly hoped no one had seen that

There were other incidents, but the bottom line is I never crashed almost nailed a runway light once while practicing soft field take offs in a crosswind, but I was solo and a miss is as good as a mile if nobody sees you.

I've been taking a lot of ribbing from my friends and relatives over these past nine months. Some say they'll fly with me, others say no way, and still others say they won't even go outdoors if they know I'm flying. Well, a private license allows me to take passengers, so we'll see how many from that first group want to join the second group . . . or even the third group.

THE "FLU" VACCINE

The new influenza vaccine is now available for the 1987-1988 flu season. In today's column we are going to review some of the latest recommendations regarding the "flu shot".

The vaccination is recommended for anyone with chronic lung, heart or kidney disease. It is also recommended for anyone over the age of 65 regardless of their health status. Every year, thousands are hospitalized with complications that can be attributed to the flu. Immunizations will decrease the likelihood of getting the flu or its complications because it leads to production of protective

The vaccine is usually given in the upper arm after cleansing the skin with alcohol. You will experience a stinging sensation as the needle is injected. You may also notice local redness, some soreness, or swelling at the vaccination site for a day or two. Occasionally, you may experience a low grade fever, chills, muscle aches or fatigue for a few days. Allergic reactions to the immunizations are very rare, but anyone who has had a serious allergic reaction to eggs or egg products should probably not receive the Large flu outbreaks usually begin in December and can last into early spring. Protection from the vaccine will last about 6 months and begin about 2 weeks after receiving the immunization. We usually administer flu immunizations in late September through November. As stated previously any individual with chronic disease should be vaccinated. Anyone that provides medical care or home care to chronically ill patients should also be immunized. All those over age 65 should probably be immunized. Actually, anyone who wishes to reduce their chance of acquiring the flu can get the vaccine although it is usually not given to pregnant women.

Annual vaccination is the single most important measure used to prevent widespread flu epidemics. In past years only about 20% of the high risk population has been immunized. Until we increase the number of high risk patients immunized, we will continue to experience serious complications from the flu.

Ehler's legislation, Senate Bill 333, wouldn't change our state fish - just clarify a specific variety of trout. The bill was approved today by the Senate Natural Resources and Environmental Affairs Committee.

"The trout currently is our state fish, but because there are so many varieties of trout it's important that we know which one we're talking about," Ehlers, committee chairperson. "We specify that the state flower is the apple blossom and the state tree the white pine. I think it's time that we make the state fish a brook trout."

Ehlers said the brook trout is the logical choice since it is the only stream trout native to Michigan waters. Trout Unlimited, a statewide group comprised of several local chapters of trout fishing enthusiasts, originally brought the issue to Ehler's atten-

"Under current designations, it's difficult to promote our trout because the term could mean brook, rainbow, brown or even lake trout. My proposal is designed to clarify this matter once and for all, and would increase the visibility and promotional value of our state fish," he said.

Brook trout are said to be the easiest catch of Michigan's stream trout. They like deep holes, dark pockets under stream banks, secret little places behind logs or hiding under stumps and rock ledges. Anglers should gently drift their bait down into those areas, and keep changing their methods until successful.

"This bill isn't controversial; it has the support of the state Department of Natural Resources; and it won't cost local government or state taxpayers one cent," Ehlers concluded. "I urge the Legislature to approve SB 333 so it can become law, and so the brook trout can become our official state fish."
