"Lettermen" return to Showboat in 1988

About 100 supporters turned out for Saturday's Lowell Showboat Celebration held at Pockett's nightclub. Showboat Board President Ray Quada said nearly $1,000 was raised to support the campaign toward a 1988 Showboat production.

The highlight of the evening was the announcement of the headline act for next summer's Showboat. The ever-popular "Lettermen" will return to the Showboat stage for a three day engagement on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, June 23, 24 and 25. Quada said the Showboat Board has returned a signed contract to the "Lettermen", and says he is very confident that they will accept the terms of the contract.

The "Lettermen" appeared on Showboat in 1980 during a split week performance with Tammy Wynette, the famous country singer. Ticket sales for Wynette's performance sold miserably, and Showboat Board members braced themselves for a terrible loss. Fortunately, the "Lettermen" sang to a nearly packed house during their three day stint, and saved the Showboat from a dismal setback. Quada and the rest of the board are delighted to welcome back the "Lettermen" and hope they can work their magic on a 1988 Showboat audience.

The "Lettermen" arrived on the pop charts in the early "sixties" with "The Way You Look Tonight". That first hit was followed quickly by "Smile", "When I Fall In Love" and "A Theme From A Summer Place". Other big hits for the group include "Shangrila", "Put Your Head on My Shoulder", "Sherry Don't Go", "Hurt So Bad" and the classic medley "Going Out Of My Head/Can't Take My Eyes Off You". Their biograph in the 1980 Showboat program said that the "Lettermen" had cut 36 albums to date, nine of which had gone gold. Up to date biographical information will be published in the Ledger at a later date.

Quada emphasized that the resurrection of Showboat will require a tremendous amount of effort from a wide range of volunteer talents. Those interested in helping with Showboat in specific areas should contact one of the following people: Endmen, Chorus, costumes, etc. - Gordon Gould; advertising and ticket sales - Ray Quada; program and brochure - Jim Hodges; promotions - Bonnie Grooters; boat and amphitheatre maintenance - Ivan Blough.

A very enthusiastic group enjoyed the celebration dinner as guests of Pockett's. Pockett's owners, the members of the popular group "Alive & Well", also staged a special floorshow for the Showboat supporters. Quada offered a special thank you to "Alive & Well" for their generosity in providing their facility and the show free of charge.

Richard A. Bryan

Richard A. Bryan, 53 of 624 N. Hudson St, Lowell has been a resident of Lowell for 50 years and his wife Nola is a lifelong resident. He and his wife Nola (Bedell) have four sons, Bernie, Kenneth, Todd and Lance, all of whom graduated from Lowell High School and have gone on to college. Both Dick and his wife graduated from Lowell High School. Nola has been an employee of the Lowell Area Schools system for 17 years.

merly was associated with Fairchild Oil for 13 years. His hobbies are gardening, sailing and WORK!

Bryan's philosophy is that communication is the best possible solution for City government and citizens alike. "Everyone needs an open mind", he said, "and hopefully avoid making any rash decisions."

Bryan is the only non-incumbent in the race for the three seats available on the Council.

Dean E. Collins

Dean E. Collins, 45 of 901 N. Jefferson St., Lowell, has been a lifelong resident of Lowell and has been a City Council member for 12 years, having been Mayor for six of those years. He and his wife, Carol, have one daughter.

Dean says the City has seen a growth pattern over the past several years which he hopes continues at a pace where it can be managed for the best of all concerned. His special interests at present are the traffic control problem along M-21 in the City which also requires working with and waiting for the State Traffic Department since M-21 is a State highway. He is also very interested in the proposed new City Park and Community Center to be located on Bowes Road and also fronts on the Grand River. As City Council representative on the Parks Commission, Collins is actively involved in the planning phase of the project and thinks such a complex would be of great benefit to the residents of the city, especially the community building.

James D. Maatman

James D. Maatman, 38, of 126 N. Hudson, Lowell has been in business in Lowell for 12 years and a resident for 10. He and his wife, Kathy, have two sons, Mark in Kindergarten and Matthew in 2nd grade. He is presently a partner in Modern Photographics Studio at 104 W. Main St. but is working at Industrial Training, Inc. in Grand Rapids producing audio-visual training films. Maatman has been a Lowell City Council member for eight years and Mayor for the past four years. He says Lowell is entering a period of expansion and growth with new businesses already here and more in the process. There is new interest expressed in future businesses, industry and housing, which he is glad to see and feel we have to expect, by he also sees the need for some careful planning to be sure everyone benefits from the future growth.

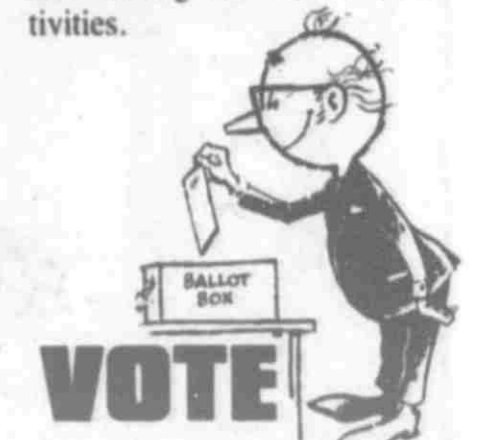

Mayor Maatman will be glad to see the end to the secondary sewage treatment problem which has had some ups and downs but will now see completion. It is good to know we are contributing our share to control our environment, realizing at the same time that there is a cost attached.

William F. Thompson

William F. Thompson, 33 of 720 Hillside Court, Lowell is a lifelong resident of Lowell. He graduated from Lowell High School, Aquinas College, and received his Masters Degree from Central Michigan University. He is employed as an Operations Manager for Amway of Ada. His wife, Helen is employed by the Rochester Products Division of General Motors in Grand Rapids. They are the proud parents of daughter, Megan, 2 years old.

HEADACHE II

Last week we discussed the most common headache, "muscle contraction headache." In today's column we will be reviewing the second most common type of headache - vascular headache, which is usually referred to as migraine.

Migraine headaches are due to a dysfunction of the blood vessels of the head. Excessive constriction of the blood vessels followed by dilation and inflammation is thought to be the cause of migraine headaches. There are three main types of migraine - classic migraine, common migraine, and cluster headaches.

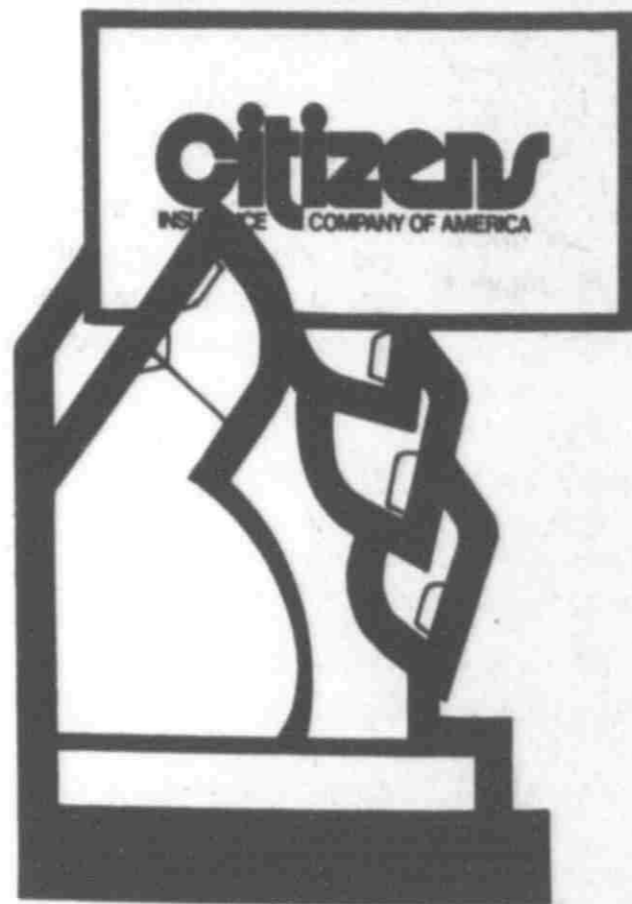

Classic migraine is usually preceded by clear cut warning symptoms which last for a few minutes to an hour and consists of visual disturbances such as flashing lights, blurring vision, bright spots or even one-sided transient blindness. Once the headache begins it is usually one-sided, severe and throbbing or pounding. Nausea and vomiting are often associated with classic migraines. Light or noise usually aggravate the headache.

Common migraine is usually not associated with warning symptoms like classic migraines. The headache is usually not as severe as those associated with classic migraines. Throbbing pain may not be present but the headache is usually one-sided. Nausea and vomiting can occur with common migraine. Very often common migraine will overlap with muscle contraction headaches and the pain associated with common migraines may lead to secondary muscle contractions.

Cluster headache is another form of migraine which almost always occurs in men. These headaches appear in bunches, with attacks occurring over several weeks, then disappearing for a year or so. There are no warning symptoms and attacks will usually last 30-60 minutes, although in some cases the headache can last for hours to days. Pain is one-sided and excruciating. It is described as a burning, throbbing pain located over the eye, temple or forehead. The headache may awaken one from a sound sleep. Occasionally nasal discharge or tearing of one eye may be seen.

Although migraine headaches are usually more persistent or disabling than muscle contraction headaches they are usually more amenable to treatment. Depending on the frequency of attacks, daily medication is sometimes prescribed which prevents the headaches from occurring. Once a headache has started the patient is usually advised to lie in a darkened room and to take a prescribed medication as soon as possible to prevent a full blown migraine from developing. Several medications are available that seem to stabilize blood vessel constriction/dilation which is the underlying cause of the headache. Sometimes several different medications are tried until a successful one is found.

Flat River Snowmobile Club News

The leaves are falling fast, the nights are cold and crisp, and we have seen some of the white stuff. All of these omens of coming winter are arousing those of us who enjoy the winters and snow and we are beginning to make plans for the coming season.

Don and Ginny Souser and their helpers have laid a new tile floor in the clubhouse, the place has been thoroughly cleaned, firewood is in and we are nearly ready. On Nov. 7th we are going to meet at 1:00 p.m. to finish up a few things including painting the groomer and replacing some ceiling tiles and then we are going to end the day with fun and games—maybe even a hay ride if the weather cooperates. The club will furnish the hot dogs and buns—members bring the rest.

We are planning ahead to be in the Annual Christmas Parade put on by the Lowell Chamber of Commerce. Gerry Bryant was named to chair the committee planning the float with Ginny Souser and Faith Marshall her designated helpers. All the members get together to actually build the float on the night before the parade.

A beautiful new Plaque was presented and hung commemorating the past Presidents of the club. There are more spaces for future presidents. Also a plaque in memory of a member that has passed away has been ordered by Ed and Faith Marshall in Special Memory of their daughter Laurie Ellen who passed away ten years ago on Nov. 19, 1977. It will be presented at our November meeting.

John Minges donated two fishing poles and reels to be raffled off by the club. Jane Anible will be in charge of this.

We want to thank our officers of the past two years for their fine leadership. Also to Bob Johnson and his workers for running the Bingo game on Sundays that has made most of the progress we are making on improvements a possibility. We have gained new members and are moving ahead. Officers that retired are Don Souser, Gerry Bryant, Brad Potter, Ed Marshall, and Ed Anible. They turned the leadership over to the new officers at the Sunday meeting. New officers are President Brad Potter; Vice President, Ed Anible; Secretary Margaret Howey; Treasurer Faith Marshall; and Trustees Jack Condon, David Bradford, and Don Souser.

The Flat River Snowmobile Club meets on the third Sunday of each month at the clubhouse on Potters Rd. There is a potluck dinner at 12:30 with the meeting following at 1:30. We welcome new members and visitors so come on out and look us over. The West Michigan Snowmobile Trail runs through our backyard and we are usually there when there is snowmobiling with a warm fire and hot drinks. Stop by and say Hi!

Ed Marshall and Brad Potter are starting work on the trail. A lot of paperwork is completed and they will soon be brushing out and marking the trail.

John Minges, David Bradford and Eddie Howey were the lucky winners.

Come join us and THINK SNOW!!!

Homespun Devotions

By Pauline Spray

...thou wilt hear me, O God... (Psalm 17:6).

"Just a minute" used to be my byword.

"Pauline, come set the table," Mom would call.

"Just a minute," I'd answer blithely and go on with my piano playing and hymn singing.

Mom's patience was a marvelous thing. When she was exhausted from a difficult day, how she must have chafed those times I turned aside her pleas with my "Just a minute!"

Another mother told me, "I tell Joan to hang up her clothes, and she answers, 'Just a minute.'"

Youth is unaware of the value of wasted minutes. They fail to realize their "just a minutes" add up to wasted hours.

Fellow Christians, we are stewards of our time as well as our talents and money. We can use our "just a minutes" to advantage. It takes "just a minute" to send a prayer heavenward. There are many kinds of prayers—long ones, brief ones, and hurried ones. Prayer may be uttered or unexpressed. God's ear is alert to the feeblest and the shortest cry of those who seek Him.

Prayer: O God, "Thou wilt hear." Enable me to use my minutes to advantage. Throughout this day I shall think of Thee and meditate on Thy goodness. Communion with Thee will be sweet. Amen.

Prayer is the soul's sincere desire. Unuttered or expressed: The motion of a hidden fire That trembles in the breast. James Montgomery

LHS-41, FHC-0 "The Dracula Kidds"

The powerful Lowell Red Arrows wrapped up their OK White conference season with an awesome display of offense and defense over the Rangers from Forest Hills Central Friday night. The offense racked up 41 points on 394 total yards and 24 first downs. The defense held the hapless rangers scoreless and allowed only 12 total yards and one first down.

With a home field advantage and a possible berth in the post season playoffs at stake, the Red Arrows pulled out all the stops for their most impressive victory of the season. The Arrows will know Saturday or possibly as late as Sunday, whether or not they will be among four teams in their region to go to the playoffs. Lowell Athletic Director Bob Perry says there's no way to tell if Lowell will make it to a number four position in the rankings. The weekly rankings are posted on Wednesday, and Perry expects Lowell to place fifth this week. "The formula is very, very complicated, and we could miss out by a hundredth of a point", Perry said.

Senior halfback Glen Rozich rambled for three touchdowns of 31, 20 and 10 yards in the second quarter. Rozich posted 109 yards in 11 carries. Other scores came from Rob Burritt, Ken Nelson and Brian Organek. Junior kicker Brian Bennett was 5 for 6 point after attempts.

Lowell's defense helped the cause with three turnovers. Senior linebacker Mike Rivers accounted for two of them with a fumble recovery and a pass interception. Senior linebacker Todd Noskey also picked off a pass. Noskey also led the tacklers with 5 unassisted tackles. In all, 15 Lowell defenders tallied at least one solo tackle.

The Arrows travel to Portland for a non-league match up with the Red Raiders Friday night. It's the last game of the season, so you may want to pack up the family and head east on I-96 for your last chance to see the 1987 Red Arrows in action.

On Monday, November 2, at 7:30 p.m., the eighth grade Drama Class will present the mystery farce, "The Dracula Kidds." The evening performance, which will be on the Middle School cafeteria stage, is open to the public and everyone is urged to attend a fun and free evening of entertainment.

Teamwork earns equestrian club trip to state competition

This Friday evening members of the Lowell Equestrian Team will travel to Mason to compete for the Class A State Championship which takes place Saturday morning at 8:00 a.m. Nine other district champions will be competing.

After its third year in existence, the Lowell team has won three District Championships. The team finished in 4th place the first year at the State Finals, second last year and is looking forward to this year's finals as the magic year.

Stressing team effort this year has really helped the cause and a massive effort by enthusiastic parents, team members, grandparents, brothers and sisters, friends and members of the community has all contributed to the overwhelming success of the team. The team members have arrived at meets as a team and have spent the day cheering on their teammates. All riders have helped each other get ready for classes and given last minute support. The team is now ready to tackle the final challenge.

Coach Carrie Pelon, a teacher at the Middle School stated, "The enthusiasm, competitiveness, cooperation and excellent riders and horses has made this a magic year. I expect the magic to flow into the finals."

Seniors Rob Huver, Rick Wingeier and Kirsten Hawk will be in their final meet at the State Finals and hope to finish their fine three years with the State Championship.

Lowell Students tour MSU

Forty-three Lowell High School seniors traveled by bus to Michigan State University on Thursday, October 22, 1987. The day long trip sponsored by the Students Services Center featured a visit to Lyman Briggs School which is a residential school with the College of Natural Science. Students in this unique math and basic sciences program take core courses in Holmes Hall where they also live. Lowell students were given an overview of not only the Lyman Briggs program, but other MSU academic programs as well. A film was shown about residential life on campus and students then took a tour of the Holmes Hall dormitory.

This is the third bus trip that Lowell seniors have taken to explore college campuses. Trips were taken to Ferris State College and Western Michigan University last year. A trip to Central Michigan University is planned for the spring. These trips are not only fun for the students, but also educational, and promote future college attendance.

HOME IS WHERE THE HEART IS

Brr---rrr! It's getting that time of year once more. Time to get the house ready for the winter, adjust to the time change and the long, dark nights. Cold weather is just perfect for me, but I am grateful for the button that turns on the furnace when it gets cold. I noticed this week that I'm not the only one that likes to be in a warm home.

This afternoon, I joined the S.W.A.T. team and also got a gun (of sorts). Our living room was the battlefield that our uninvited guests chose to invade. By the end of the day, I counted forty yellow jacketed wasps that I had zapped with the fly swatter and my handy can of Raid. These wasps looked like they had just gotten up from a nap and didn't know where they were or had had just too many, of whatever wasps drink. It's getting too cold for all of our daddy-long-legged spiders—they must have curled up in our spooky basement for the winter. There are just enough cobwebs every few days to let me know that not everyone is sleeping in the basement yet. I suppose the field mice are next, unless they are already settled in, and I don't know it. It just seems I get things all tidied up and the 'evidences' are back. My husband walked through a low-hanging cobweb the other day and I cried out, "Good grief, I just dusted those walls, and the furniture, and vacuumed the rug and...and...and..." I sometimes wonder if city people have as much trouble with these things as country people do.

After I did some cleaning this afternoon, I sat down for a cup of tea. I got to thinking about the day this past summer when it was 97 degrees out of doors, and I escaped with a friend to a scenic restaurant on Clifford Lake in Montcalm County.

My friend and I hadn't seen each other in some time. There were a lot of things to get caught up on, plus I had brought along some books that I had just finished reading. She enjoys reading too, and I knew she'd enjoy looking at them. The afternoon whizzed by, laughing and sharing and nibbling on the food. At one time in the conversation, I heard her say something, kind of under her breath. I almost missed it. "What did you say?" I questioned. "You do what?" She looked at me, smiled gently and said, "I write poetry."

There are times in a friendship that certain moments take a delightful turn and a new appreciation of that person sparks the relationship. It never is the same—it has become richer, more understanding. We had been friends for several years, and I had never guessed that she might even be interested in poetry, far less write it. We talked for a few minutes more and then she asked if I would like to come back to her home and look at some of her journals.

My friend's home is quite large and has a welcoming air about it, that says, "I'm well taken care of and I'm ever so friendly—come on in." The inside seems to be dotted with rooms; there are so many. Each room makes me think of it as an individual person. It is colorful enough for my Hungarian blood to get excited, and yet it is tasteful and pleasing to look at.

She found her journals and told me to leaf through them. My reading them wasn't enough, so I asked her if she would please read some of the poems to me. I can't remember any time in my adult life that someone has read to me like she did during that next hour. The room we were sitting in was filled with sunlight, and the quietness so real that it seemed to tick away the minutes, just like a clock does. She sat in a big brown chair and her voice almost as quiet as the room, told me poem stories that at one time moved me to tears. It was about her home. She and her home are the best of friends; they know each other well. She looked up at me, smiled and read on—about this special place.

No matter where I sit—
You are beautiful.
Not because of anything
I have placed here but because you have a natural beauty all your own.

I loved you the first time I saw you.
You are made for parties and yet solitude.

Your graceful shape speaks of another time when life was slower—more purposefully lived.

You would be just as elegant in candlelight as in the sun's revealing light.
Every part of you some how strikes
a different cord in me;
a place for my every mood.

Perhaps, it's because you are so old that you stand out—different from any other I've seen.
Perhaps, it's because you are a reflection of me.

I only know that you are mine, and unless I should change greatly in the years to come,
You will always be what I need.

---Joyce London

My cup of tea has turned into two, as I thought about these things at my typewriter table, and supper is going to have to be fixed soon. I've picked up the remains of the last few of the afternoon's battle in the living room, and turned up the furnace, to get the evening chill out of the house. I'm remembering the words of Dorothy to her aunt in The Wizard of Oz, when she cried out, "Oh, Auntie Em, there's no place like home, there's no place like home."

Presidents of colleges in Mid-western and Western states have ranked Alma College and Indiana's Hanover College the third best liberal arts colleges in their region, according to the results of a U.S. News and World Report survey published in the news magazine's October 26, 1987 edition.

The ranking is for a region that includes the 23 states lying west of the Alleghenies and north of the Mason-Dixon Line. Ranked first and second in that region are, respectively, Alverno College in Wisconsin and Wittenberg University in Ohio.

Alma, one of 50 liberal arts colleges nationally producing the highest proportion of U.S. scientists and medical professionals, was first in the U.S. News rating of science programs among the 184 regional liberal arts colleges in the West and Mid-west.

State Senator
Dick Posthumus

Motorists in Michigan are being deprived of their right to drive a safe 65. The federal government has lifted the threat of economic sanctions and authorized states to raise speed limits to 65 mph on rural interstate highways. Many of our neighboring states have already done so. And now it's our turn to revise Michigan speed laws.

The Michigan Senate has approved and referred to the House legislation to increase the speed limit to 65 mph on some highways, and increasing the penalties for those who are caught exceeding the speed limit. The Legislature has debated the speed limit issue for months, ever since the federal government allowed states to raise their speed limits. Our highway system was originally designed to handle faster-traveling vehicles, and most motorists have been ignoring the 55 mph speed limit for quite some time. With that in mind, and the strong desire of the people of this state to drive 65, Senate Bill 135 was crafted to allow motorists to drive 65 on more than 700 miles of Michigan's rural interstate highways.

Previous legislative attempts to increase the speed limit have failed because the governor claimed they didn't carry enough enforcement measures such as prohibitions on the use of radar detectors. SB 135, however, addresses enforcement concerns expressed by many lawmakers by increasing the fines motorists could face if they are caught exceeding posted speed limits. Under our plan, we have suggested the following penalties: zero violation points and a $20 fine for one to five mph over the posted speed limit; one violation point and a $20 fine for six to 10 miles over; two violation points and a $40 fine for 11 to 15 mph over; three violation points and a $60 fine for 16 to 20 mph over; and four violation points and an $80 fine for more than 20 mph over the posted speed limit. Fines contained in SB 135 are suggested penalties. Judges would have some discretion in their decrees and could take into account a driver's past speed record.

As an added safeguard, our plan also includes a two-year expiration date -- April 1, 1989 -- to study the effects of faster driving. A Highway Safety Task Force would be appointed to examine whether higher speeds cause more traffic accidents, injuries and deaths. If the higher limits are determined to be safe, the Legislature would be able to retain the higher limits on rural interstates after the increased speed limit expires.

The driving habits of motorists in this state clearly indicate that it's time to raise our speed limit to 65 mph in appropriate places. Along with increasing our speed limits, however, comes the need to properly enforce our laws. SB 135 reflects that goal by increasing penalties for speeders. We hope the House will work with us to develop a plan that allows motorists to drive faster, as well as increases enforcement of our new speed laws. That's a goal that everyone in Michigan can live with.

Here's a hint for cooks: there are three teaspoons in a tablespoon.

Winter driving tip "Be Oil Loyal!!!"

Along with a good battery and recent tuneup, the correct engine oil can help ensure quick vehicle starts this winter, reports AAA Michigan.

The Big Three U.S. automakers now recommend SAE 5W-30 oil for winter use in most models to improve starting, cold-weather performance and fuel economy.

Most owner's manuals state that 5W-30 can be used if the outside temperature does not exceed 60 degrees and should be used if the temperature is below zero degrees. Because SAE 5W-30 has a lower viscosity level than SAE 10W-30, the oil is thinner and less likely to become thick and gluey when temperatures drop, thus ensuring that engine parts can move freely.

To prepare for the height of winter, drivers should change oil in November or December.

The owner's manual or marks on the engine oil-filler cap should state which oil the manufacturer recommends.

'LIQUID DIET' ESSENTIAL FOR WINTERIZING CARS

Throughout the year and especially in winter, vehicles need special attention and a "liquid diet" to keep them operating efficiently. By checking the six fluid levels listed below before winter arrives, motorists can help ensure their vehicles will be prepared properly for cold-weather operation. Check owner's manual for fluid-level inspection directions. The key fluids include:

- Antifreeze—Use hydrometer to check strength of antifreeze in radiator. Proper mix is 50 percent water and 50 percent antifreeze. Mixture should be good for up to 37 degrees below zero.
- Motor Oil—Use dipstick to check oil and add when fluid reaches the add mark. Use SAE 5W-30 oil to improve fuel economy and cold-weather performance.
- Brake Fluid—Fluid level should be within one-quarter inch of the top of the reservoir.
- Power Steering Fluid—Check indicator stick and, if needed, add slowly to avoid overfilling.
- Automatic Transmission Fluid—Check with indicator stick generally located behind engine on passenger side. The car should be parked on a level grade with the engine running.
- Windshield Washer Solvent—Keep the reservoir filled with solvent.

Most of you have likely been involved in a handyman plumbing project of one kind or another. You wouldn't necessarily have to have been the plumber to appreciate this story. You could have been the parts chaser, flashlight holder or the person with the little hand to reach in behind the bathtub where a stray elbow had fallen.

We spent all last weekend plumbing my mother-in-law's cottage located way up on the Leelanau Peninsula several miles north of Northport. The entire family of eight adults, six kids and two dogs was there. The only missing parties were my sister-in-law's horses.

Early Saturday morning we had a team meeting to determine what we needed. One of the decisions made during the meeting was that the used hot water heater given to my late father-in-law twelve years ago was not worth the powder to blow it up, so a new one was added to the parts list. Following the breakfast meeting, my two brothers-in-law, Casey and I headed for the Northport hardware store. We were able to find most of what we needed, but hot water heater dealers in Northport are few and far between. I headed for the Suttons Bay Hardware, fifteen miles down the road, while my brother's-in-law worked on filling the seemingly endless list of elbows, tees, supply tubes, shut off valves, traps, etc.

By the time Casey and I reached Suttons Bay, my brothers-in-law had already called in a list of items that couldn't be found in Northport. I bought those, but there was no hot water heater in Suttons Bay either. I was told the Lake Leelanau hardware might have one, otherwise I had to go to Traverse City. I took a chance on Lake Leelanau.

Much to my surprise I found just what we wanted; a low profile 30 gallon quick recovery electric hot water heater. I bought it, threw it in the van, and headed back for Northport. I figured the guys were done at the hardware, so I saved myself a stop and checked the bar. I had the right idea, but the wrong bar. I finally tracked them down at the bar across the street. It was well after noon before we ever turned a wrench, so we went at it like killing snakes. (Whatever that means. It's an old saying my father uses.)

I wired the hot water heater, set the kitchen cabinets, installed the kitchen sink and a few other odd jobs while the rest of the guys ran pipe all over the place. As is always the case with such projects, we started to run into dead ends because of wrong or missing parts. The most serious was a set of faucets for the tub and shower. We sent my mother-in-law back along the same trail of hardware stores that we had followed in the morning. The only difference was, she struck out, and ended up in Traverse City, an hour's drive away.

We finally bagged it at about nine o'clock that evening, confident that we were within easy striking distance of having everything plumbed in with hot and cold running water the next day. I don't know what made me check it, but along toward quitting time, I discovered that someone had flipped the circuit breaker that controlled the water heater. With no water in it, the heating elements were fried. I didn't have the heart to tell my mother-in-law she was going to Traverse City again the next day for new elements.

We went at it again in the morning, my mother-in-law made her trip to Traverse City and things started to come together in general. By 4:00 in the afternoon, one of my brothers-in-law was taking a nice hot water shower and some of the gals were washing dishes in a new sink with hot and cold running water.

The cottage was built about 14 years ago, and up until now has only had a toilet and bathroom sink with cold water only. The way everyone got excited when they tested the running hot water, you'd think we'd just checked into the Hilton.

The first twenty-five cent pieces were minted by the U.S. government in 1796.
