Santa Claus will ride into Lowell Saturday

The children of Lowell will get their first visit from Santa Claus on Saturday, Dec. 5.

Santa will be at Lambert Variety from 12:30 to 2:30 p.m. following the Christmas Parade.

The parade route will start at the First United Methodist Church and conclude at Keiser's Kitchen.

Lowell received its first significant snowfall on Dec. 1 and as coincidence would have it the city was stringing Christmas lights.

December and snowfall both serve as little reminders to help you realize that the Lowell Area Chamber of Commerce lighting and decorating contest will be taking place on the week of Dec. 14.

This year's contest will have two divisions; residential and commercial.

All homes in the Lowell city limits, Eastgate and on Vergennes east of Lincoln Lake Road will be judged.

Criteria for judging both the residents and commercial contests will be based on creativity, originality, design and overall effect. Judges will be chosen from Lowell citizens.

Prizes and recognition will be printed in the Ledger on Dec. 23. The Chamber of Commerce urges people not to delay and get those lights and decorations up soon.

Sewer rehab is underway

by: Thad Kraus

In your trips in and around town you've probably seen a truck with Nagel Construction written on its side.

Well, Nagel Construction is part of the $4.7 million sanitary sewer system rehabilitation program and the waste water treatment plant projects.

Nagel Construction (contract 1) was contracted out to test for leaks, televise, clean and grout cracks and joints in the sewage lines. The cost for this is $59,084.55.

Nagel Construction and T. A. Forsberg are working on three contracts to update and rehabilitate the sewage lines.

The cost will be shared by the city and the Environmental Protection Agency. The money allotted for the projects was $5.4 million with $2.9 million coming from the federal government.

Michelle Lazaar of the Fishbeck, Thompson, Carr and Huber engineering firm reports that Nagel is halfway done, providing Nagel doesn't have to shut down due to weather, it is expected that his work will be completed by the end of January. If a shutdown does occur then Nagel will have until July 21 of 1988 to finish the project.

T. A. Forsberg is being paid $83,579 (contract two) to repair and replace broken and failed pieces. Forsberg is also being contracted to do the slipling (contract three). This is the insertion of a smaller polyethylene pipes into the pipe already there. Where necessary, some homes will have their service leads re-connected. The cost for the slipling is $149,205.

Forsberg will also have until July of '88 to complete the work. Forsberg's work on contract two is nearly completed and the work on contract three has just been started.

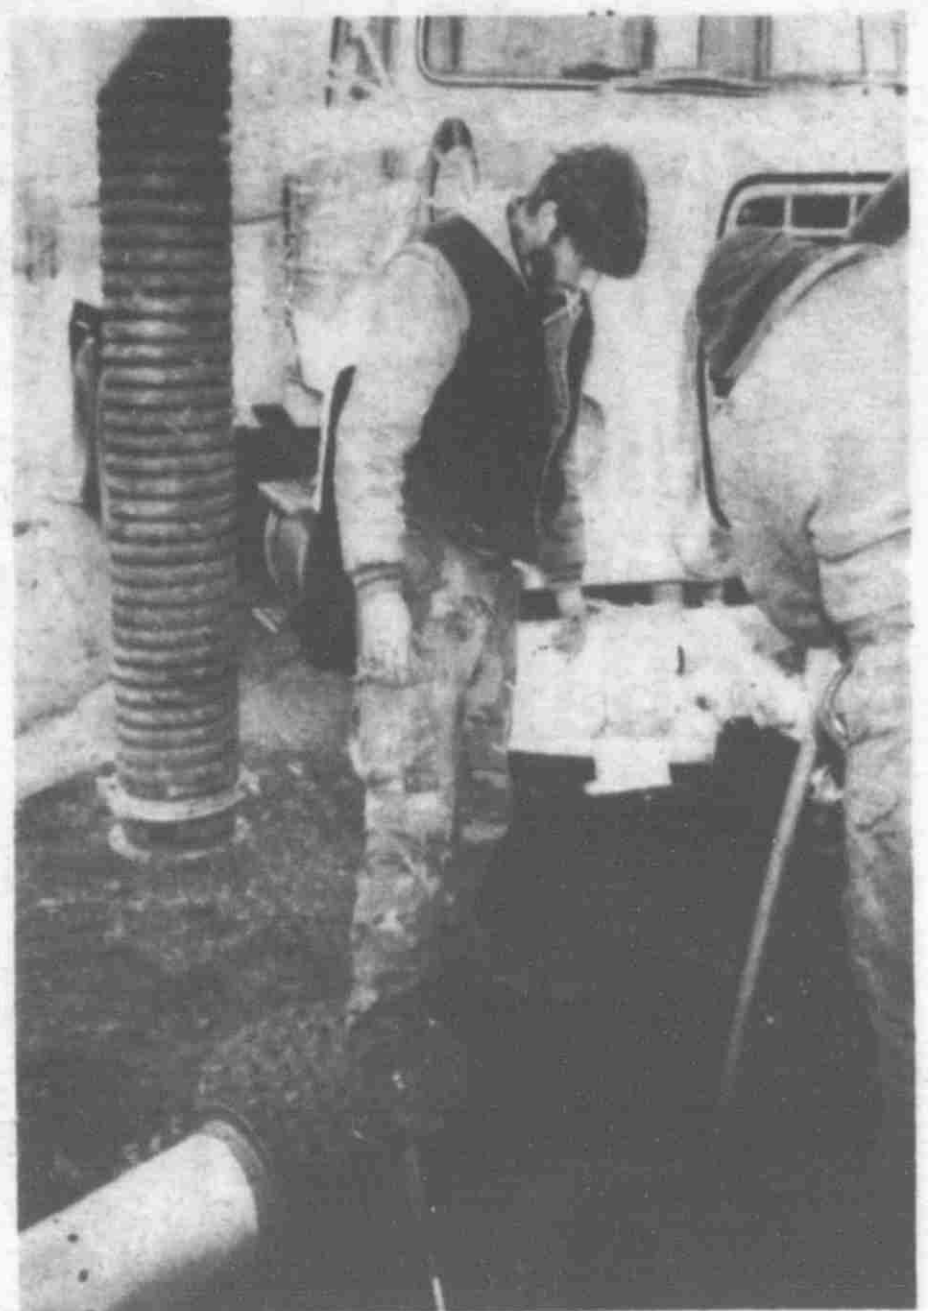

The total costs for the three contracts will be $291,868.55.

The Fishbeck, Thompson, Carr and Huber firm prepared the plans and contract specifications. It also formulated and prepared plans as to what streets to work on.

"These plans have been ongoing for a number of years, and were based on a study done by another firm," Lazaar said. "We have people out in the field watching in case a decision on an unforeseen problem arises."

The work in the streets is being done throughout the city of Lowell.

The expansion of the waste water treatment plant is being contracted out to Triangle Associates at a cost of $4,365,000.

Lemac Inc. has been subcontracted by the City of Lowell to clean the sewers out. This works hand in hand with the sanitary sewer system rehabilitation project that the city has undertaken.

The Lowell Red Arrow Varsity Basketball team begins the 1987-88 season Friday, Dec. 4 away at Delton

Civil Air Patrol's 46th anniversary

"The Roger B. Chaffee Memorial Group Eight, local group of Civil Air Patrol (CAP), will be joining more than 1,900 other CAP units throughout the nation in celebrating the organization's 46th anniversary," Maj. David W. Johnson, commander of the group announced last week.

Civil Air Patrol was founded Dec. 1, 1941, by a group of light aviation enthusiasts and private pilots as a means of donating their time and aircraft for the nation's civilian defense efforts. The organization won fame during World War II for its extensive civilian defense operations which included a submarine patrol along the Atlantic and Gulf Coasts.

Today, Civil Air Patrol conducts Air Force-authorized air search and rescue missions; assists with relief activities in periods of disaster; cooperates with civil defense agencies; and conducts a comprehensive program of aerospace education as well as a youth motivation and leadership training program.

So far this year, CAP has flown 11,750 hours on 1,571 emergency missions and has saved the lives of 54 persons.

Civil Air Patrol was chartered in its present form in 1946 by Act of Congress and made a civilian auxiliary of the U.S. Air Force in 1948. CAP has local units in all 50 states, the National Capital (Washington D.C. area) and in Puerto Rico. National Headquarters is located at Maxwell AFB, Ala.

"Incidentally, the local CAP group has 250 members" Maj. Johnson said, "but we can always use more. Look us up!"

Red Arrow Hoopsters to "Light it Up" in 1987-88 season

Red Arrows open season with Delton Friday

by: Thad Kraus

Quicker than you can say 19 feet 9 inches, this year's Lowell High School varsity basketball team will have already launched a three-pointer, in this the inaugural year of the high school long-distant shot.

"I like the three-point shot and this year's club will make use of it," Lowell varsity basketball coach Ken Akers said. "It gives teams like us a way to make up for our lack of height."

Akers has good reason to look favorably upon the new rule. In this, his seventh year, the Lowell mentor, coming off an 11-9 '86 season, has four starters returning, and feels three of his Red Arrows can fill it up from the outside.

At the top of that list is 1986-87 All-Conference forward Jeff Phillips. The 6-foot-3-inch senior averaged 15 points and five rebounds a game for the Red Arrows last season.

"Phillips runs the floor, rebounds well, is a fine shooter and will be a team leader," Akers said.

Paul Stroosnyder will provide some offensive punch from the Red Arrows three-man backcourt. The senior, 5-foot-7-inch guard is the perfect compliment to Lowell's Ken Nelson, a 5-foot-10-inch playmaker who will serve as the team general.

"Stroosnyder came on strong in the final six games of the season last year. He averaged 10 points a game in those contests," Akers said.

Nelson, who served as a spot starter last year, will use his quickness and leadership abilities to run the Lowell offense.

"As Nelson goes, so will go Lowell. We will count on him to get the ball to the open guy," Akers said.

Seeing much of the playing time in that third guard position will be 5-foot-9-inch junior Tim Westrate.

"He's an excellent three-point shooter. Westrate and Stroosnyder can hit them pretty consistently," Akers explains. "It definitely will be incorporated into our offense."

The frontline will be anchored and heavily dependent on 6-foot-3-inch center Dan Byrne. Akers believes the center will rebound well and will show good defensive skills.

Also expected to help off the bench are 6-foot senior forward Joel Schrenk; 6 foot senior forward Rob Burritt; 5-11 senior guard Matt Quada; and 5-foot-6-inch junior guard Pete Kemp.

Schrenk a senior, although not very tall, Akers expects to be effective with his bulk on the boards.

Burritt will be used to relieve Byrne and Phillips if there is foul trouble. Akers says that Burritt possesses good quickness and jumping ability.

Quada will give Lowell some quality backup experience at the guard position, a spot he filled off and on in '86.

Kemp, coming up from the junior varsity, provides Akers with depth at the wing position. The junior has shown the ability to score and is quick.

Other Red Arrows expected to contribute include 5-foot-11-inch senior guard Mats Oberg; 6-foot-3-inch junior center Ben Richmond; 5-foot-10-inch junior guards Jeff Gourney, Brian Gabron, Jason Douma and Tony Nauta.

Serving as team managers this season will be Angie Brown and Renee Nugent.

"I suspect we will be in the thick of the conference race. East Grand Rapids returns all of their starters from a year ago, and it was first in the OK White last season," Akers said. "I think we will be one of four teams that are capable of challenging."

Akers added he expects to be very competitive and looks forward to a good season.

The coach also invites fans to come and watch the team practice after the conclusion of "Meet the Team Night" on Dec. 1.

Lowell opens its season on the road against Delton on Dec. 4.

Top job for Bob

Bob Rodenhouse

For Bob Rodenhouse, Lowell physical education teacher, it was his first trip to the Pontiac Silverdome. And unlike many he didn't have to look for his seat.

Rodenhouse was appointed by the State Athletic Association to referee the Class A football championship (Ann Arbor Pioneer 3, Detroit Catholic Central 0).

Rodenhouse has been a high school referee for 18 years, his first game coming in 1969.

No doubt that the crowd back then was nowhere near the 20,000 fans that were on hand for the Class A title tilt.

"Walking onto the field was very exciting. I wasn't real nervous. There was about a 1-2 minute span when I was on the field before the game started that I gave thought to where I was,"

"The state then sends out availability forms. Then in October the athletic directors and state officials get together and select the officials," Rodenhouse said.

The Lowell physical education teacher refereed four tournament games this year. Rodenhouse was involved in a pre-regional game, a regional contest, a semi final game and a title game.

"With the score being 3-0, the game only lasted 90 minutes. It went much too fast," Rodenhouse said.

A GIFT - OF LIFE

Thirty-seven years ago, I started doing something that has been exciting, enriching and fun.

I started doing it, just because I had to do it. Since that time, I've met hundreds of people that I would have never met because of it. I've gone on for extra schooling because of it. I now feel comfortable about holding seminars about it. I have laughed with people about it, and encouraged them to do it. There have been times we have cried together over it.

The 'it' is journal writing. Some call it "keeping a diary." Years ago, I would have never thought that it was a gift that I was giving to myself, and to others. But it is that -- a gift-of life. It is a gift of time and people. Re-reading some of the entries, I also think, it is giving oneself the gift of maturity.

There are times when we all look inwardly and are distressed to see ourselves as we really are. We wonder if we are ever going to grow up. A journal is a keeper of the heart. In looking back I have been encouraged to go on.

There was enough to say to a new endeavor, "I think I can do this." There were times I found myself absolutely horrible, and immature. But there were the times that the horrors turned the corner, and I began to grow and experience some of the graces of life.

Journal keeping has encouraged me to keep faith with God, and with people. I need to be reminded that life is gift. My memory fails me at times, so I need to keep a gift list.

Before each of our grandchildren is born, I go on a search for just the right journal gift. I keep it in my study and whenever I see something I want them to have as a memory gift, I write that down, as only I can--their grandmother. In a few months, there will be a new journal, for a new baby.

What a good time of year to buy a journal as a gift. Perhaps, you might like one for yourself, one of the children, husband or friend.

Looking around the delightful book store, The Book Tree, in Cascade, I found a unique gift idea. For young girls that like The Anne of Green Gables book series, The Anne of Green Gables Diary, is a happy experience. The artwork, photos, quotes and excerpts from the books are a perfect compliment to the person of Anne.

The other day, I cut out something for Christmas for my journal. I put at the top of the page, Merry Christmas World! The entry read: "...behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day in the city of David, a Savior, which is Christ the Lord." The mother of this Child didn't have a journal on hand at the time, but someone else recorded her reaction to what she was seeing. "...But Mary quietly treasured these things in her heart and often thought about them." That day was truly a Gift of Life.

A Merry Christmas season to all of you.

Antique Mall represents long and storied history

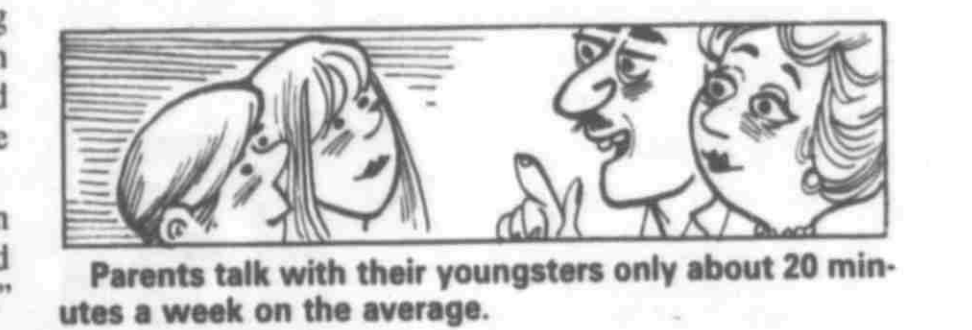

Ron and Laura McCollum, owners of the Flat River Antique Mall, rent out over 15,000 square feet of space to 65 antique dealers, and the need for more space is in demand. The 65 dealers account for approximately 125 booths.

ing through town, an empty building on West Main Street caught his eye. And after seeing the building, he was sure he wanted it. After dealing heavy into renovation, with an interest in antiques already tucked away, the McCollums opened up the Flat River Antique Mall two years ago come March. In October the Sure Transplanting business was moved into Lowell also. Laura McCollum adds that the consolidation has made things much easier. McCollums rent out their 15,000 square feet of space to antique dealers. There are 65 dealers represented right now in the antique mall (completely full), with approximately 125 booths distributed throughout four floors. "Many rent more than one booth," Ron McCollum said. "I guess we would be considered a shopping center leasor." He adds that all they ask is that the antique dealers pay their rent, keep their booths clean and keep their inventory up. "We will take care of the advertising and sales," Ron McCollum said. The McCollums also take care of any hunger and/or resting needs that might arise through Huckleberry's, a small soup and sandwich cafe located inside the Flat River Antique Mall. "There's no involvement on our part as far as working and management is concerned."

Ritzema receives degree

Michigan Technological University awarded more than 408 degrees at Fall Commencement ceremonies on Nov. 21. Among those receiving degrees were: Steven E. Bliss, cum laude, a B.S. in Computer Sciences; and Evan L. Ritzema, a B.S. in Computer Sciences.

Parents talk with their youngsters only about 20 minutes a week on average.

A true antique is 100 years old. All the primitives, furniture, collectibles and antiques in the Flat River Antique Mall are a minimum of 25 years old, which stirs up a lot of memorable history.

The seventh and eighth grade girls' basketball teams both ended their season the way they started them, by posting victories. Both Middle School squads turned in impressive and perfect 9-0 marks this year. Though teams have gone undefeated in the past, it is rare for both teams to accomplish the feat in the same year. The seventh grade club was coached by Ken Akers and the eighth grade squad was coached by Julie Niemela.

Krause is against new transportation legislation

A transportation funding package passed recently by the State House will penalize the taxpayers of Michigan, said an area lawmaker who voted against the legislation.

State Representative Vic Krause (R-Rockford) said the funding plan will raise approximately $90 million by increases in registrations, transaction costs, service fees and driver's licenses. The cost of a four-year renewal for a driver's license will climb from $6 to $12.

"Those who use the roads should pay to keep them up. Instead, we've passed an unfair plan that burdens everyone, particularly senior citizens," Krause said. "Why should an older individual, who travels a few thousand miles a year, pay as much as someone who travels extensively?"

Krause said that under this plan out-of-state truckers and tourists pay nothing for using Michigan roads.

"Tourists from other states travel more than 4 billion miles every year on our highways. Last year out-of-state truckers bought 88 million gallons of diesel fuel. Millions of dollars could have been raised for highway construction and maintenance by imposing fees on these road users."

"Instead we've added yet another tax increase on the people of Michigan. The plan is poorly conceived and I voted against it," Krause concluded.

Wildlife greeting cards

Christmas in Michigan. 'Tis the season for brightly decorated Christmas trees, festive gatherings of family and friends, and sending greetings of the season with traditional Christmas cards.

Although there are many types and styles of cards to choose from, none truly exemplify the spirit of Michigan and its rich outdoor heritage better than Wildlife Christmas Cards published by the state's largest conservation association—Michigan United Conservation Clubs (MUCC).

The MUCC Wildlife Christmas Cards feature beautiful scenes of winter in Michigan's out-of-doors highlighted by artist's renditions of white tailed deer, ruffed grouse, Canada geese, red fox, and America's song birds. The cards include a traditional holiday greeting, along with a paragraph on the back offering a brief description of the animal or bird on the cover. Each box of 15 wildlife Christmas cards includes plain white envelopes for mailing.

And if you still searching for that little "something" to get the sportsman or woman or wildlife enthusiast on your Christmas gift list?

You might consider the 1988 Michigan Out-of-Doors® magazine wildlife calendar which features beautiful reproductions of wildlife paintings by top wildlife artists from Michigan, Pennsylvania, and Ontario, Canada.

Published by Michigan United

Conservation Clubs (MUCC), the 21" x 8" calendar highlights artist's renditions of a variety of wild mammals, birds, and fish found in North America. Each page lists important holidays, opening and closing days for all state hunting and fishing seasons and a brief description of each animal and bird.

Some of the artists featured include Susan Gunther Siegrist, Gijbert van Frankenhuyzen, Bruce Matteson, Dan Waltz,

Celebrate the Christmas spirit at Charlton Park

Celebrate the spirit... "Of Christmas Past" at Historical Charlton Park Village & Museum. Experience Christmas as it was nearly 100 years ago when the family decorated the tree with handmade ornaments and popcorn and cranberries that they had strung. On December 5 and 6 and again on December 12 and 13, visitors will be able to participate directly in this look at another era by "hands-on" activities such as candle making, stenciling cards, making homemade gift wrap and weaving. The holiday activities begin at noon and end at 5:00 p.m. each afternoon, with admission $2.00 for adults 16 and over, children are free. Homemade cookies warm from the woodstove, coffee and hot chocolate will be served in the town's residences. Special attractions this year include a special postage cancellation honoring the 100th Anniversary of the CKS Depot to be reconstructed at the park. Visitors are encouraged to bring their Christmas cards and have them cancelled at the Charlton Park Station post office. A toy train exhibit will also be on display.

Youngsters of all ages can visit with St. Nick or join the carolers in the village streets. Many crafts people will be demonstrating their crafts and selling their wares, such as quilting, painted sweatshirts, baskets, potpourri, victorian angels and quilting. The Charlton Park Museum gift shop will be offering ornaments, stocking stuffers, books and country store candy.

I'm not sure how in the world I'm going to make a column out of this, but something very interesting happened yesterday, and I feel compelled to write about it. When I went home last night I noticed something dark sticking out from between one of the cracks in the big overhead garage door. A closer examination revealed that the dark spot was the front half of a mouse. True, it's pretty morbid column material, but you have to agree, it's also very interesting. Imagine, a 24 foot by 7 foot, motorized, chain-driven mouse trap!

I'm not Sherlock Holmes, but I surmised that the mouse hid atop the open door when Terese and the kids got in the car that morning. The mouse probably watched as the car backed out, and could hardly wait to get back at my sack of bird seed. Unfortunately for the mouse, Terese hit the remote control and the door started down. The little guy must have panicked, and tried to hide in one of the cracks between the panels when it opened up as it passed by the bend in the tracks. When the crack in the panels got around the curve, it closed back up, and that was the end for my little bird seed thief.

I suppose the "Mousy Heaven" stories concerning one's death are all pretty typical. Cats, hawks, owls, spring traps and "D-Con" probably account for most of the obituaries. But, there are certainly a few oddballs up there with a real story to tell, and I know at least one of them.

I told you I was going to have trouble stretching my mouse story into a column. Since we're on the subject of death, I guess I'll tell you how I want to go.

Nobody wants to die of cancer, or old age, or any number of lingering illnesses that prolong the inevitable. Everyone has a fantasy as to how they would like to depart the here and now. I've heard golfers say they'd like to be hit by lightning after sinking a 50 foot putt on the 18th green. I've heard pilots say they'd like to spin in with a grin. There are those who think being shot by a jealous husband is the way to go. I've heard all kinds of wierd ideas, but mine is still the wierdest.

It's not original, but it's definitely different. Several years ago, a short page six news item caught my eye. The dateline was from a small California town. A small circus had set up shop in a supermarket parking lot. Sometime during the circus' stay, one of the elephants became spooked for some reason. It broke loose, and stampeded through the parking lot. A man, heading back to his car with a sack of groceries, was trampled and killed.

I can picture it vividly. I'm in my retirement years, it's a pretty Saturday morning in early October. Terese is making cookies for the grandkids, and sends me to the store for milk and eggs. While at the store, I notice a small circus in operation off in the corner of the parking lot, but don't pay much attention. I buy the milk and eggs, plus some Stroh's and peanuts for a treat during an afternoon college football game on TV. I'm on my way back to the car with the sack of groceries in one hand, and fumbling for my keys with the other. All of a sudden, out of the corner of my eye, I see a wild-eyed elephant on a dead run! He's coming right at me. Then, that's it. The lights go out, and that's it.

They'd splatter the story all over the front page of the Ledger. "Former Ledger publisher killed by runaway elephant". Meanwhile, I'd be in the hereafter, telling anyone who'd listen, about the elephant.

INFANT COLIC - PART I

The screaming, writhing infant that many of us have experienced seems to be the exact opposite of what we expected when we had our babies. We wonder how our child can be so miserable and we feel helpless, depressed and inadequate. Such are the experiences of those who have had infants with colic. In the next few columns we are going to discuss the causes of colic and how to cope with it.

Crying is an important development function in all infants. It allows the infant to release tensions. This is the only way the newborn can communicate hunger, pain, feeling cold, or a need for physical contact. Crying usually reaches its peak at 6 weeks of age. Colic is ill-defined and often overused. Most doctors define colic as continuous crying or extreme fussiness for more than 3 hours a day. All babies are fussy at one time or another, but colicky babies prolonged bouts are repeated daily, often at the same time. Most infants will stop crying and remain calm after feeding, while colicky babies seem to experience their most difficult times shortly after feeding. Rocking or holding the infant does not seem to comfort the colicky baby for more than a few minutes.

Colic affects approximately 10-15% of all babies regardless of sex, type of birth, breast fed or bottle fed. It usually begins during the 2nd or 3rd week of life and gradually resolves after 3 months. Colicky babies are generally healthy. They gain weight at normal rates and are usually alert and active. As one doctor stated, "Colic is not serious unless you are the parents of the baby that's affected."

Very few parents are prepared for the tremendous changes that come with parenting. There are often periods of physical exhaustion, depression, and doubts about parenting abilities. Never are changes more profound and sudden than that which occurs when you bring your new baby home. These difficulties are magnified for those with colicky babies. They are faced with an infant they cannot seem to comfort. They often consider themselves failures as parents. They are confused by the contradictory information they are receiving from friends, family and medical personnel regarding the causes of colic and how to deal with it. Breast feeding mothers may feel their milk is inadequate and bottle feeding moms may feel that colic would not occur if only she would breast feed. It is normal to feel anger towards this colicky infant. These feelings of resentment and anger may frighten the parents. They feel they must have something wrong with them to feel this way towards their baby. Colicky babies definitely place a strain on the parents' relationship with their spouse and other children in the family.

Next week we'll discuss the cause of colic and how to deal with it.

Residents against increased taxes

If constituent mail is any indication, Michigan residents are overwhelmingly against any increase in insurance premiums.

Senate Finance Committee Chair Norm Shinkle (R-Lambertville) and Senate Commerce Committee Chair Richard Posthumus (R-Lowell) say a survey of Republican senators revealed that all received an unusually large volume of mail regarding Governor Blanchard's proposed tax hike on insurance companies. Both Shinkle and Posthumus have received many letters, all urging them not to raise insurance taxes further. Other senate offices also report receiving large amounts of mail on the issue, with almost all writers demanding senators not raise insurance taxes, Shinkle said.

"Governor Blanchard blames the Senate for refusing to raise taxes on insurance companies, but judging from the mail in the Senate, constituents overwhelmingly do not want us to raise insurance taxes. They have expressed the fear that any tax increase will undoubtedly be passed on to them in the form of higher insurance rates," Shinkle said.

Posthumus also noted that many of the letters have been from senior citizens who claim they simply can't afford to pay higher rates.

"The governor may insist that we raise insurance taxes, but the people clearly don't want us to. I think it's time for the governor to start reading his mail and realize what the citizens really want, instead of blaming the Senate for carrying out the wishes of the people," Posthumus added.

GVSC to set up fund

A $233,000 final gift from the estate of Leon W. Hall has enabled Grand Valley State to set up a loan fund to help students pay for college. The principal amount has been set up as an endowment fund, allowing the interest earned to provide loans to students. Payments will begin six months after a student leaves college, at 6 percent interest.

Hall was a Grand Rapids furniture designer and a frequent lecturer on furniture history and design. He died in 1965 at the age of 83. The college has received approximately $10,000 from his estate annually for the past 22 years, under a trust established at the time of his death because of his humanitarian concerns and interest in higher education. According to GVS Financial Aid Director Kenneth Fridsma, the monies were used for general scholarship purposes. The final $233,000 gift comes from the liquidation of the trust fund, following the death of the last individual beneficiary of his estate. Fridsma said, "This large lump sum gift makes it possible for Grand Valley State to establish the Leon W. Hall Endowed Student Loan Fund. This is a special fund for those who have difficulty obtaining a student loan from other sources. Awards will be based on both the student's academic record and demonstrated financial need."

Haggai finds reward in friendships with youth

by: Thad Kraus

"I grew up in a home without a father. I had no one to fall back on. Mom had to go out and make a living," Kevin Porter said. "There wasn't anyone to play games with or to take me fishing."

Porter and his brother Kirk's upbringing is representative of an estimated 8,000 children in Kent County alone that are in need of a Big Brother, Big Sister friendship.

That special friendship found the Porter brothers back in 1974.

Having worked with the orphans in the Korean War, after coming stateside, John Haggai looked into foster parenting through the D.A. Blodgett agency. A year after learning of the Big Brother, Big Sister program, Haggai decided to do something, to get involved.

"A lot of young people in the world need help and understanding, and by giving a little bit of my time I can help provide this," Haggai said.

Haggai's help and understanding has meant the world of difference to the two brothers from Cascade.

"Haggai's been a real good guy, he's been there for us," Kevin Porter said. "He's done a great deal with and for my younger brother Kirk."

Kevin, now 27, has been married eight years to his wife Gabriele. The couple has three children Leanne, Jacob and Joshua.

Haggai represents a break, something good in Kirk Porter's life. Porter, 24, hasn't been dealt too many breaks.

"He doesn't know the meaning of a break. Kirk has gone through open heart surgery, is legally blind, has a hearing problem and has been treated for a brain tumor," says Haggai, as he points to Kirk's drawings on his office wall at the Amway Corporation. "Kirk and I have become pretty close."

Haggai adds that the joy and reward he gets from the Big Brother, Big Sister program is "astronomical."

"The only right thing I did was make a phone call," Haggai said.

And he's made that call a couple of times. With Kevin grown, married and living on his own now, Haggai decided to become a Big Brother to a local boy, Danny Schumaker.

Schumaker, 13, attends Lowell Middle School.

The Lowell school board president adds that he could not have done it alone. "You must have help and cooperation from family and friends."

Haggai's son T.J., 20, has been very cooperative, he helps pick up and takes home the boys on the weekend when needed.

"I never let the balance (T.J.

being my son) get out of hand, I'm fair with everybody," Haggai said.

Haggai received a plaque last year commemorating his 12 years of dedicated service in the Big Brother, Big Sister program.

The mission of D.A. Blodgett and other services similar, is to enhance the well-being of a child.

"The Chinese have an old philosophy, if you're planning for a year, plant rice. If you're planning for a decade, plant trees. If you're planning for a lifetime, educate a young person," Haggai concludes.

Needed: Friends for kids

by: Thad Kraus

The aim of the Big Brother-Big Sister program is to provide role models, guidance and adult companionship for thousands of single parent families in a community.

There's an estimated 8,000 children in single-parent families in Kent County. D.A. Blodgett started the Kent County Chapter of the Big Brother-Big Sister program in 1965.

The children range in age from 7 to 14 years. Who the child is matched up with is based on geography, interests, age, race, and type of problem.

There are 50 little brothers and 18 little sisters in need of volunteers in the Kent County area. And there are 70 little boys and 15 little girls that have been referred to the program.

Lowell has two children

(boys, ages 9 and 14) that have been referred and accepted into the program that are in need of volunteers.

Director of services at D.A. Blodgett, Nick Koster reports that there are far more children in need of volunteers than there are volunteers.

"People don't become involved because of the commitment and the lack of interest," Big Brother-Big Sister coordinator Paul Miller said. "People are not willing to give a 3-5 hour commitment each week to a child. And the volunteer must commit to doing this for a minimum of a year."

Miller suggests that the need for volunteers is not unique to just the Kent County area.

All volunteers must go through a training program. First an application is filled out, then if accepted the volunteer must attend an orientation on the third Monday of each month.

After the orientation the volunteer is interviewed by a worker and then put through a training program. At this time there is also a reference and police check.

"We're looking for stable, mature adults with a genuine interest in sharing their interests and talents with a youth."

There is a greater need for Big Brothers than Big Sisters.

"Volunteers find the experience with the youths to be good. It's an opportunity to share life's skills, experiences, social skills, manners and to look out for the children and encourage them to make the right decisions," Miller said. "Those that volunteer help, take satisfaction in knowing they've helped in the betterment of a child's life."

Miller adds that being a special friend to a young boy or girl is the best description of what the Big Brother-Big Sister program is all about.
