Lowell Middle School receives computer

Eberhard/Food City presented the Lowell Middle School with a computer and printer on Wednesday, June 7.

The Middle School, with help from the community has been collecting cash register receipts from Eberhard/Food City since last October. On Wednesday the fruits of their labor were realized.

The "Apples for Students" program was launched in October of 1988 as a community service effort to provide Apple Computers and software to communities served by Eberhard/Food City Supermarkets. All the school had to do is save cash register receipt tapes from Eberhard's and turn them in to the Eberhard "Apples for Students" coordinator, and the equipment they earned is theirs to educate the children at no cost to the benefactors.

Presenting the computer to Lowell Middle School from Eberhard's was Bob VanHoven, District Manager; Fred Rathbun, Store Manager; and Jan Vredevoogd, Coordinator of the "Apples for Students" program.

Accepting the computer on behalf of Lowell Middle School was school coordinator, Sandy VanStee.

L.V. Eberhard, Chairman and CEO of Eberhard's added he was proud to make the contribution to the school, to the community and to the future of its children. "We look forward to making many more presentations to other schools that have participated in the program," he said.

Zaczek resigns from LCTK post

Although in the shadow of the Annual School Election results, other items were not forgotten at the June Board of Education meeting.

The Board said hello to a new face, Jim Fleet, who will fill the position of the new Math, Science and Computer Science teacher at the high school.

It also said a stubborn but a gracious goodbye with best wishes to Linda Zaczek as the Director of the LCTK Community Education Consortium after seven years, effective June 30.

Zaczek resigns from the post so that her husband can accept a new promotion in Chicago. "If anyone would have told me that I would be writing a letter of resignation this month, I would have laughed," she said. "I appreciate the opportunity I've had to grow and learn all during the past seven years. It has been the experience of a lifetime and I thank everyone."

The Board approved the purchase of 18 Model KX-E7000 Panasonic electronic typewriters at $665 each and two Model KX-E700M Panasonic electronic typewriters at $757.50 each from Smith's Business Equipment Company at a total cost of $13,485 and to be financed out of the current year capital outlay.

In other curriculum recommendations the board approved the purchase of 23 Model KX-E3008 Panasonic electronic typewriters at $534 each from Smith's Business Equipment Company at a total cost of $12,282 and to be financed out of the 1989-90 school curriculum account.

* Unofficial Results

Only eight percent of the approximately 10,000 registered electors of Lowell Area Schools Kent and Ionia Counties participated in the annual school election on Monday, June 12.

Roughly 600 voters took time to vote on the Headlee Amendment and the four-year board seat, currently held by Linda Beers - Board Vice President, whose seat was up for re-election.

However, with the blessings of Lowell Superintendent and Board officials, the Headlee Amendment was passed by an unofficial total of 310-290.

"We were lucky," said a relieved Esch. "What this means to the school district is that there will not be a cut of $120,000 out of next year's budget. The school will be able to maintain the level of programs and services that the voters approved in the March 21 millage election."

The approval of the waiver allows Lowell to maintain its authorized operational millage at 3.7. Under the Headlee Amendment of the State Constitution, voter approval is required to levy the full authorized millage when local taxes outstep the cost of living.

Lowell was not alone in facing a reduction of funds because of the amendment. Most schools in Kent County faced potential loss of funds due to the amendment for an approximate total of $2.5 million.

Beers, whose seat was up for re-election, outdistanced her two challengers, Dave Noonon and Dennis Brown. Beers collected an unofficial 299 votes, while Noonon garnered 162 and Brown received 144.

Athletic Boosters Club urges board to act

Lowell Area Schools Athletic Boosters President Fred Lenger and other members of the boosters club called on the Lowell Board of Education to remember and act on its commitment to making the necessary improvements in Lowell's athletic facilities which would bring the school up to par with the rest of the league affiliates.

This came in the wake of hearing the Board is about to begin deliberations concerning the future expansion of facilities for the Lowell School District.

"Since that time little has been accomplished," Lenger said. The glaring area where this is most noticeable is track. Members of both the girls and boys

Budget surplus - school financing?

By: Senator Dick Posthumus

A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush, the old saying goes. As the debate on school finance reform wears on, some are asking: Before we ask voters for more taxes to inject into Michigan's sickly public schools, isn't it smarter to spend money we already have first?

Smarter, yes, and a surer thing. State officials say $266.5 million will be left in the coffers after all the state's regular budget expenditures are met. That's extra grain at the bottom of the silo.

Senate Republicans believe the surplus would go a long way toward equalizing state aid to cash-starved school districts throughout Michigan. It would provide an immediate shot-in-the-arm to the 200 districts now teetering on the brink of insolvency.

And best of all, it's something we could all feel good about, because it commits money to our

Carmelite Nuns to build a monastery in Parnell

The information in this story is provided by the Carmelite Monastery

On a forty acre site in Parnell, 10010 Five Mile Road, construction of a new monastery for the city's Discalced Carmelite Nuns has begun.

This community of Carmelite Nuns first came to Grand Rapids in November of 1915, fleeing from the revolution in Mexico. The City of Grand Rapids opened its arms to the exiled Carmelites and various communities of Sisters came to their aid, especially the Sisters of Mercy, the Dominicans, the Good Shepherd Sisters, the Notre Dame Sisters and the Little Sisters of the Poor. Each of these religious communities supplied the nuns with what they needed and helped them to learn English.

On February 2nd, 1916, the first Mass was celebrated in the tiny chapel of the nuns new home on Lafayette Street, Bishop Henry Joseph Richter being the celebrant. This marked the founding of the Carmel of Grand Rapids, the Monastery of Our Lady of Guadalupe.

The smallness of the house on Lafayette and the absence of grounds where they could spend some time outdoors quickly brought illness to the nuns. Bishop Richter then proposed building a monastery for the community and opened a drive in the parishes of the diocese to that end. His death in December of 1917 together with the beginning of World War I made further plans for building impossible.

On the advice of Bishop Michael Gallagher, a larger frame house on Walker Street was purchased and became the nuns new monastery. With the increase of nuns through the years, building became necessary and additions on the frame house were made. In 1941 a new chapel was built and in 1948 the old house on Walker was torn down and the entrance to the monastery was changed to 1036 Valley Avenue, NW. Additions were again made to the existing monastery in 1951 and 1955. To this day the nuns are still living in the same house on Valley Avenue and are again faced with the necessity of building. Their crowded condition mainly necessitates their move to Parnell, the quiet atmosphere of the country likewise being more conducive to their life of prayer and contemplation. It has always been the dream of their hearts to have a monastery, especially one built according to the needs of their monastic life, in the quiet of the country where they might spend their lives in solitude, silence, prayer and penance for the world.

In 1985, Most Reverend Joseph M. Breitenbeck, gave the nuns his approval and support to look for a site for building a monastery to meet their needs. A beautiful piece of property in Parnell, ideal for their cloistered life of prayer and penance, was soon found and purchased. With plans for the new monastery completed, ground breaking took place October 23. Architect for the new monastery is Judson Jones & Associates. The construction is being done by John C. Carlson, Inc.

The present facility will become a charitable home for the elderly under the auspices of Love & Care, Inc. Built according to ancient monastic architecture, the new monastery will be in the form of a quadrangle with front and side wings connected in the back by an open cloister. It will include a basement, first and second floors and chapel with a choir for the nuns. The chapel will be open to the public and will hold approximately a hundred and twenty people. The monastery will be built to accommodate twenty-one cloistered nuns and the extern sisters and is expected to be completed by June of 1990.

Who are these nuns and what do they do? Their Order of Carmelites dates back to the time of the crusaders in the Holy Land who built hermitages near the cave of the Prophet Elias on Mount Carmel. Because of their devotion to the Mother of God and having been the first to build a chapel in her honor there, they were called "the brethren of the Blessed Mary of Mount Carmel." The distinctive title of the Order is "The Order of the Most Blessed Virgin Mary of Mount Carmel." In 1207, St. Albert, Patriarch of Jerusalem, arranged a rule for the hermits of Mount Carmel to live by. The religious of Mount Carmel left the Holy Land in the thirteenth century because of the Saracen invasion and came to the West. The organization of the nuns is attributed to Blessed John Soreth, Carmelite, in the fifteenth century. At that time the primitive rule was mitigated due to the series of plagues that had swept across Europe. The primitive rule was restored by St. Teresa of Avila in Spain in 1562 when she founded her first monastery of Discalced (meaning barefoot) Carmelite Nuns, and shortly after the Discalced Friars.

The purpose of the Order is union with God - to be as intimately united with Jesus Christ as possible, cleaving to Him until death in poverty, chastity and obedience - so that striving for perfection the religious may be more useful to the Church. Love of God and souls, expressed in prayer and penance, is the spirit of Carmel.

The life of the Carmelite nun is a life of prayer, not just the two daily hours of mental prayer, but prayer that permeates and activates all her thoughts, words and works of the day. As the celebrated Doctor Alexis Carrel has so beautifully stated, "True prayer is a way of life and the truest life is literally a way of prayer." This LIFE of prayer is not lived by the nuns for any selfish motive, but these little "living prayers" as they may be truly called, are there in their monastery to intercede before the throne of God for the whole Church, for the whole of humanity, to sacrifice themselves by a penitential life for all the world. "The whole world is ours." This is what the Carmelites claim as by their lives of prayer and sacrifice their hearts become more and more enlarged until they become large enough to contain within them every human being.

This tender love of humanity resolves itself into a constant loving intercourse with God on their behalf. Whether she be occupied in reciting the Divine Office, a privileged duty which calls her six times a day to the choir, in

...What aileth thee, Hagar? fear not; for God hath heard... (Genesis 21:17)

"What's the matter with you? Why don't you keep your mind on your business?" Children have to be jugged out of their lethargy. They have to be reminded to stay at their tasks until they have them finished. When their minds stray to things other than what they should be concern-trating upon, they have to be rebuked.

After Isaac's birth everything changed around Abraham's household. Peace and harmony no longer prevailed. At Sarah's insistence, Abraham was forced to send Hagar and their son, Ishmael, away. Wandering in the wilderness, suffering with thirst, they despaired for their lives. Then God spoke. "What aileth thee, Hagar? Fear not!" His rebuke opened her eyes, and she saw the well of water God had provided.

Christians, when we fail to keep our minds stayed on the Lord, we are apt to be overcome by our surroundings and fail to see the "well of water" God has supplied for us. The Lord often has to send a rude awakening to open our eyes, to bring us to our senses, and make us realize there is nothing to fear if we are trusting Him.

Unless we want to be rebuked, we had better "mind our own business."

Prayer: O Lord, I thank Thee for Thy rebuke. Forgive me for failing to see "the well of water" Thou hast provided. I have nothing to fear when I am trusting Thee to provide for my every need. Thou didst care for Hagar and Ishmael. I know Thou wilt watch over me, too. Amen.

Well, it's that time of year. Time for me to do battle with my arch enemy... the lawn sprinkler system. It's sort of a Batman vs. the Joker or Superman vs. Lex Luther thing. It's an ongoing struggle, and I usually feel like I'm on the losing end.

As I've said many times before, if it were up to me I'd let the lawn dry up. With a dry lawn you mow less, there are fewer mosquitoes around and you have more peace of mind because you simply adopt an attitude that you don't give a rip what your lawn looks like. That's the way it was at my old house, and I'm here to tell ya, I was a much happier man.

The sprinkler system was already installed in the home we live in now, so I didn't have an excuse for a brown lawn. The system is no Mickey Mouse setup. There is a 220 volt high pressure pump down by the river to pump that good old Flat River water. There is a control panel that operates the seven zone system by opening and closing solenoid valves for pre-set periods of time at any given time, on any given day, over a two week period. There are 75-100 sprinkler heads of various make, model, design, age and purpose. And, there must be a couple hundred miles of pipe buried under the sod. Tell me that doesn't sound like a maintenance headache to you. Maybe a retired master plumber with all kinds of time and knowledge would get a bang out of the thing, but not me.

This spring's fire-up went okay. We had trouble getting the pump primed. I replaced a couple dozen sprinkler heads and repaired a few line leaks where the pipe had frozen and burst last winter. That only took a couple trips to Grand Rapids after parts, four or five evenings after work and a pair of Saturdays. No big deal. It's been worse.

Since the initial fire-up things haven't been too bad. My kid breaks off sprinkler heads with his riding mower at the rate of two or three per mowing. I've got a big old box of spare parts, and about once a week I run all the zones and check for geysers where sprinkler heads have been knocked off. Then I get all wet and muddy in the repair process. Fun stuff. Just the kind of after work therapy a guy needs. To heck with this kicking your shoes off, propping your feet up, read the paper and watching the evening news. Not me man, let me at that sprinkler system.

Last night my neighbor called to tell me the dock had collapsed from the high water in the river. This isn't necessarily a sprinkler problem but it's related. The main reason the dock is there is to maintain the hose and strainer that goes in the river. When the dock collapsed it pinched off the hose, the pump lost it's prime and the strainer floated to the surface. My neighbor and I share the pump, and he managed to get the thing re-primed while I was gone over the weekend. But, the dock was still in a heap on Monday. To make things worse, my kid's old steel rowboat was chained to the dock and was dragged under when the dock went down. It was resting on the bottom complete with motor, oars, fuel tank, etc. Just the kind of challenge everybody looks forward to on a rainy Monday evening after working all day.

Casey and I managed to get the boat drained. It was a major salvage operation, but it's floating again. I couldn't believe it, but even after being submerged all weekend, the motor ran! Next it was time to put on shorts, old shoes and a grimace before tackling the dock. The water is cold, the bottom is muddy and hammering home six inch ring shank nails underwater is no treat. After a fair amount of shivering, grunting, groaning and a proportionate dose of cursing, the dock was standing again. I wouldn't say it's standing tall, straight or plumb, but it is standing.

I swear, my next home is going to be in the Florida Keys where everybody's lawn is nice white crushed coral. You don't have to mow it. You don't have to rake it. And most of all, you don't have to water it!!!

A NEAT ENCOUNTER

There is a time, at least for most of us, when Spring becomes less nostalgic and its practical side overwhelms us.

Practical things like -- washing windows, hauling out trash, mowing grass, planting flowers, and putting away winter clothes and bringing out summer ones. Winter leftovers of dust, cobwebs and dull smells surface. Spring's sunlight makes what we once thought was acceptable, into a major overhaul.

I thought housecleaning would get better and less time consuming when the kids left home. It hasn't changed -- I'm still here. I think that I might have been one of the problems all those years, and I thought it was them. I hope this confession is not too late.

A couple of springs ago, everything in the house was getting to me (and I was getting to everyone in the house). A good cure-all for that is for me to go to the library. It is a great place to lick one's wounds.

That escape didn't last for long. I bumped into a man who told me all I ever was and didn't want to admit to. It was frightening that he knew me so well. As he talked I put my head down in embarrassment. Often, I heard myself saying, "Oh, really?" or "That's right." and "Ah, come on now, I'm not that bad."

I finally had enough of his know-it-all attitude and I brought him home with me. As we left the library, I heard the librarian call out, "I hope your husband can handle this, Joanie."

As soon as we got to the farm, I sat him down in our kitchen and informed him I was going to prove what he said about me wasn't true -- at least a few things weren't. But it was no use. He was right -- I was a junkie. My cluttered house was the proof of what he had been telling me.

The man I met in the library was not a real person. He muttered and yelled at me in the pages of a book he wrote. His name is Don Aslett and he wrote "Clutter's Last Stand". My husband even agreed with what he said; at least he liked what he said, until he realized that to solve the problem was going to involve him.

So now, every Spring, I go to the library and bring "Clutter's Last Stand" home with me, grab a box of Cinch Saks and then watch my husband take off down to the barn. Odd, I thought he'd appreciate my getting clutter out of the house. I know I'll see him when I've thrown away something that he thinks is still good. It works every time.

Blue Cross/Blue Shield checks which go unclaimed and revert to the state would be used to increase funding for senior respite care programs under legislation introduced the end of April in the Michigan House.

Under the three-bill package, the money would be held by the state for seven years and if unclaimed, go into the senior care fund. It then would be divided between Michigan's 14 Area Agencies on Aging and spent on senior daycare or other respite care programs.

The legislation stems in part from a recent Supreme Court ruling which said Blue Cross/Blue making scapulars or sewing garments for the Infant Jesus statues, in cooking meals or doing the laundry, in making or mending the clothing and habits or doing any of the necessary household chores, in her two daily hours of mental prayer or at recreation with her sisters one hour before dinner and again after supper, all is done with the greatest possible love for God and for souls, all souls the world over. Far from feeling themselves "cut off" from the world by their hidden lives of prayer, they are, on the contrary, more than ever a part of it. Their hearts being totally free, are able to rise unhindered to their Creator. And, although television, radio, entertainments of the world and games are barred from their doors, they feel no lack. Rather, they are the happiest people in existence, and have no desire for such things. For them, in the words of St. Teresa of Avila, their foundress, "God alone suffices." Jesus is their answer for everything and the ALL of their lives.

Kristine Roth graduates Magna Cum Laude

Kristine Roth, 1978 graduate of Lowell High School, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Maynard Roth of Clarksville, graduated Magna Cum Laude on Sunday, June 11, from Davenport College. She received a Bachelors degree in Business Administration and Management. She is shown here accepting an award for academic excellence from Dr. Donald Maine, President of Davenport College.

Although this is not a complete description of what they are and what they do and why they do it. And to each person in the world, to each one individually, they would say: "it is for you; our lives are for you, our dear people, and we love you all!"

That their life of prayer may be facilitated for them through their new monastery, the nuns now appeal to the dear people of Grand Rapids who have always been so good to them in the past. As they live on alms, they greatly depend on the generosity of the people of the city to help them now to realize that dream of their hearts for a monastery in the quiet of the country where they may give themselves up completely to their life of prayer and penance for everyone. Each benefactor who contributes to the building of the new Carmelite Monastery will be forever in the hearts and prayers and sacrifices of the nuns, and will have a continual sharing in the merits of their lives. Tours of the Bowen House, a Civil War Encampment, Arts and Crafts, Flea Market, Costumed Craftsmen at work, a Knife Show, a Whittling Display, Old Time Music and Good Food along with tours of the Mill Museum with water power demonstrations are just some of the features on the first "Old Fashion Day Festival" of the season. It will be held June 17, 1989. The fun will start at 10 a.m. and continue until 4 p.m.

The main event of the day will be the once a year opening and guided tours of the large Victorian 1860's "Bowen House". It was added to the historic park in 1984, it joined the mill property on two sides and was the only house the Bowens ever built. Over the years it has been remodeled and redone. Some of the "updating" included: removal of all the old Victorian moldings etc. Rubber back carpet was laid over the hardwood floors. Many projects had been started and never finished. Every year Neal and Marion Cook (owners) and Owen and Carleen Sabin (caretakers and daughter and son of the owners) take on new renovation projects. As the restoration transpires, the original beauty of the home is coming back. The parlor (15'x15') living room (17'x27'), kitchen (17'x27') teams had to practice for field events inside the school. This was compared to having the football team practice inside until game-time on Friday night.

Lenger announced that last week the boosters voted to release $18,000 from its budget to replace outdated and damaged items --e.g. high jump and pole vault landing pits, pole vault standards, starting blocks, hurdles, and all-weather sweats. "This is only a first step in upgrading our program," Lenger said. "Additionally, we have received assurances from the administration that measures are being taken to improve the track's running surfaces so that it will be a safer place for our kids to practice."

He warned though, that this is merely putting bandages on a broken leg. "It is imperative that inclusive in the boards' plans to expand the facilities of our school district will be the construction of an all-weather asphalt track," Lenger said. He added, also necessary are enlargement of the weight room, construction of a soccer field, renovations to the gymnasium, including expanding the boys and girls locker rooms, renovation of the Burch Field locker rooms, press box, and concession stand, and the construction of permanent restrooms at the football field.

Lenger says the Boosters are willing to work with the board and would heavily support a bond issue brought before the voters of the school district.

the study, 2 bedrooms, the upstairs foyer and 2 baths will be open for visitors to enjoy. Folks can also take a peek at the bedroom (15'x15') which will be restored in 1990. Plaster is falling, ancient wallpaper is peeling, it is almost unbelievable that at next year's open house it will be transformed into the lovely, bright, comfortable room it once was many years ago. This room will be known as the "Adaline Room" in honor of Mrs. Bowen who was the home's first mistress.

Everyone enjoys the colorful Civil War Encampment which meets regularly at the Mill. First Michigan Light Artillery, Battery A, always has an authentic living history camp of the 1860's era. Tents, furniture, clothing, guns, cannons and gating guns are researched and appropriate for the occasion. The troops will be showing off a new cannon. The 3/4 scale 6 pounder field piece has just been completed by Russ Patterson, of Irving; Gladie Lewis of Middleville and Neal Cook, Bowens Mills owner. The cannon will be a permanent exhibit at the Mill. The sounds of the black powder weapons can be heard every hour on the hour starting at noon. They will also be making their plans for the upcoming annual Civil War Reenactment which will be held on the Mill grounds October 14 & 15. Many troops from all over Michigan and neighboring states will join this local group and a battle will be fought each day.

Costumed people will set up their arts and crafts along the edge of the Old Mill stream and be selling and demonstrating their wares. There is always a great assortment of all kinds of interesting items for folks to see and buy. In the Market Square there will be a great assortment of a little of everything. More crafts along with bric-a-brac and antiques. Almost anything goes in this area. Vendors may call for reservations. Civic groups may set up free.

The fellows around the Mill have become interested in reproducing old time knives. One wall of the Mill Museum floor has been devoted to old knives of all kinds; household, military, folding, hunting and the Bowie Knife. The original Bowie knife was made in the 1830's, the same time the first old wood dam was put in at Bowens Mills. At 2 p.m., anyone who has a knife or knives they would like to share, along with collectors and knife makers are invited to come and bring some of their knives to show, share, sell or swap. Anyone with knives that are unusual or keepsakes are especially urged to come.

There have been big changes around the Old Mill Museum this year. Many new displays and artifacts of the late Leander W. Hulett. He was the father of Hazel McCaul of Caledonia. Hulett, was an active whittler approximately 50 years ago. He was watchman for the railroad in Middleville and had a small "Watch House" in which he would spend his time waiting for the six or seven trains to pass through the village. When a train did come, he would go out and stop traffic until it passed. To fill in his free time he took up the pastime of whittling. Many articles will be on display including: balls that roll around inside their wood frame, chains, scissors, pliers, all carved from one piece of wood. In 1925, his daughter, Hazel was a teacher at the Moe School, so he whittled her a picture of the school with the date on it. She was very instrumental in having the old Moe School donated to the Mill in 1988 so this piece will hold a special place in the display.

There are many things happening on every Old Fashion Day. Tours of the Mill's main floor museum with area history and corn grinding is always popular. One can learn about many things that happened in the old days. Also in this area is the huge water powered cider press and the Mill's antique and gift shops. The lower level of the Mill is open with its working Blacksmith, Cooper and Machine Shops. Visitors may also visit "The Plank House", an 1830's unique two story house built of 3 inch planks (log cabin style). This type of structure is very rare. It was restored and furnished to its original quaintness in 1987. A covered bridge crosses the Mill Stream to where the huge water wheel is being constructed. It is a great place to take pictures, and folks can't seem to leave the grounds until they have strolled across it. It will be the backdrop for a wedding in July. "The Chuck Wagon" will again be grilling good food for the guests and all sorts of apple related dessert items will be available at the "Cider Mill Cafe". A ride on a wagon pulled by Belgian horses and a historic boat trip on the Mill Pond round out the day.

Lowell Rotarians "take to the skies" during first

This passenger plans on taking a few pictures while up in the air.

Lowell Superintendent and Rotary member Fritz Esch prepares for takeoff during Lowell Rotary Club's first-ever aviation day held at the Lowell Airport.

Roughly 150 people got to see Lowell from a different vantage point - 1,500 feet.

Roger Brown gets set to take off in the Champion 7-AC.

Two things became apparent to the roughly 150 individuals who showed up for airplane rides at the Rotary Club's first-ever aviation day held at the Lowell Airport Wednesday, June 7.

1. There is a whole new world to see at 1,500 feet.

2. When can I go up again?

Aviation day served to elevate the community's awareness of the effort being put forth to enhance the local airport. It also dished up potato salad, baked beans, hot dogs and soft drinks, creating a picnic type atmosphere for people wanting to spend an afternoon.

"The Rotary Club heard many positive comments from its 64 members and their guests throughout the afternoon," Lowell Rotary member and aviation day organizer Tom Speerstra said. "This type of community event is good for the city."

Speerstra was helped by the efforts of many local pilots including Rotary President, Roger Brown; airline pilot, Roger Odell; and other pilots Mike Swayze; Randy Seaman; Leonard Jackson; Pete Tolley and Bob Van Strien.

Rotarian Leonard Jackson who flew his Cessna 172 Skyhawk during the day's activities had an interesting observation "45 years ago today I was flying a P-51 Mustang over the English Channel", Jackson said. Jackson was a fighter pilot during WWII and has been a pilot and aviation buff ever since. His comment was in reference to flying in support of the D-Day invasion of Europe which began on June 6.

There were not any P-51s flown on Wednesday, June 7 but a squadron of six aircraft gave approximately 200 rides to about 150 people. Roger Odell flew a classic 1940 Piper J-3 Cub. The Cub is a tandem seat two place aircraft with stick controls and a 65 horsepower Continental engine. This particular aircraft was first owned by the U.S. Navy. Peter Tolley, a Grand Rapids attorney and member of the Lowell Airport Board currently owns this restored classic.

Rotarians Bob VanStiren and Roger Brown flew another two place tandem seat classic, a 1946 Aeronca Champion 7-AC. The "Champ" is owned by a three member club and is hangared at VanStiren's private strip south of Lowell.

Randy Seaman flew another Cessna 172 Skyhawk. Seaman is part of a five member club that owns this four place high wing aircraft. The Skyhawk was probably one of the best selling aircraft ever introduced, with approximately 30,000 built over 30 year production span.

Mike Swayze, a friend of Brown's was "tapped on the shoulder" to help fly hops when three aircraft owned by Rotarians were scrubbed for various reasons. Bob VanStiren's Cessna 182 was trapped at a flooded field, Bob Kyser's Cessna 172 was in the shop for its annual inspection and Wendell Christoff was unable to fly his Cessna 210 because he was out of town on business. Swayze, who resides in Grand Ledge, came to the rescue in a Piper Archer II rented from Ayotte Aircraft Services located at the Grand Ledge airport. Swayze flew the powerful four place aircraft nearly non-stop for over three hours, and the waiting lines certainly would have been much longer without his volunteer help.

Peter Tolley also flew nearly non-stop for several hours in his H295 Helio Courier. This unique six place 295 horsepower aircraft was designed to do one thing very well, and that is to fly in and out of very short fields with extremely large loads. Perfect for the day's activities. Again, the waiting lines would have been much longer without Tolley's services.

John Clore, owner L&A Rental, donated tables and chairs for the event and the food and drinks were provided by Larry Coleman, Family Fare Manager. "We had a positive turnout. Everybody had a good time and we hope to do this again next year," Speerstra said.

Randy Seaman logged over 3 hours in old "79921", a Cessna 172 Skyhawk owned by Seaman and four other club members.

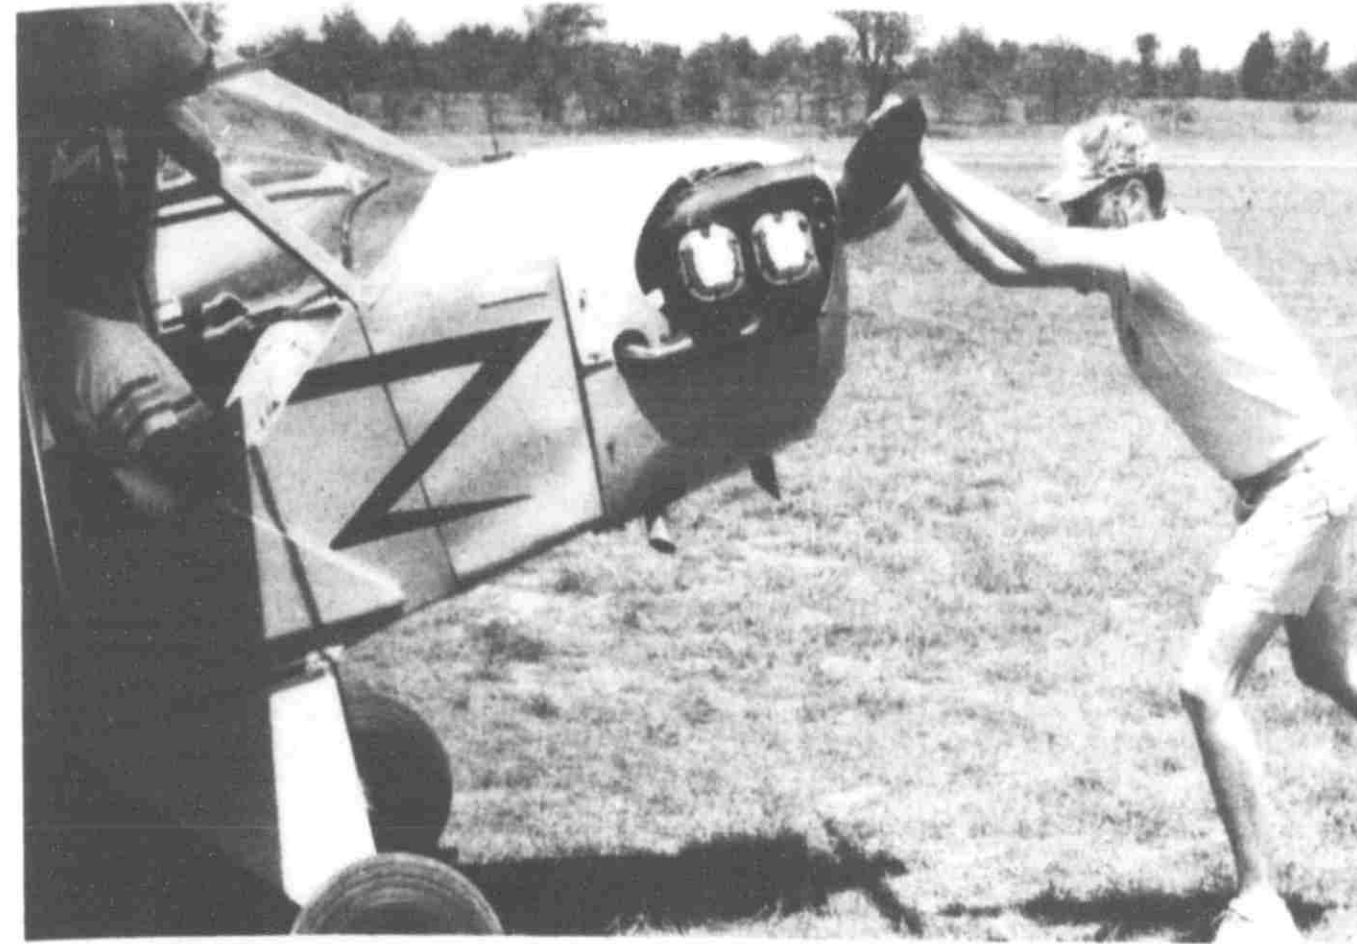

Burch Field is a little less crowded on a spring afternoon in June.

aviation day at Lowell Airport

Tom Speerstra, right, got a nice workout trying to start the Classic Piper J-3. Roger Odell, airline pilot, sits and waits.

Not long ago, Lowell's baseball team celebrated a district championship on this diamond.

The Lowell Showboat from a different perspective. In a little less than two weeks the amphitheatre will be buzzing with the sounds of B.J. Thomas.

The water level was up after the deluge of rain the Lowell area received a week ago.

The Champion 7-AC is airborne.

TOWNSHIP OF LOWELL NOTICE

Dear Lowell Township Taxpayer:

Every township and city is required by Michigan Compiled Law (M.C.L. - 211.721) to maintain an adequate property assessment card system. This letter to the property owners of Lowell Township is to inform them that Lowell Township is in the process of upgrading their appraisal card system to conform to state statute.

Many of the complaints voiced by township residents were centered around two themes: "Am I paying more than my fair share of the property taxes"; and "Am I being treated on an equal basis with other people within the township". To answer these two questions and bring Lowell Township into compliance with state law, the following program is being implemented:

STEP 1. Representatives of the township (usually college students) will measure or review the outside of all residential and farm buildings. The representatives will interview the property owner/tenant and complete a questionnaire concerning each home. In the absence of the owner/tenant, a form will be left for completion to be returned to the township. If this form is not returned, the information will be estimated.

Further, the representative will:

- A. Take pictures of the buildings.
- B. Verify sales information
- C. Classify (or grade) your home (overall quality)
- D. Place the home in an economic category or neighborhood.

The representatives will NOT conduct an interior inspection at this time.

STEP 2: This information will then be computerized. The software package being used by the township has been approved by the State Tax Commission for residential and agricultural use.

Upon completion of this project, these records will be made available at the Township Hall and may be inspected by contacting the assessors' office.

Thank you for your cooperation.

Sincerely,
John Timpson
Supervisor

Red Arrows lose to Lakers at regionals, 9-3

Something happened to Lowell's baseball team at the regionals in Alma Saturday that hasn't happened in 10 years.

"We committed five errors and we probably haven't committed that many errors in our last 10 games," Lowell coach Kris Kropf said. "We did not give ourselves a chance to win the contest.

Errors, a few key plays and some clutch hits by Spring Lake all added up to a Red Arrow 9-3 setback.

The loss ended Lowell's season at 13-15, which should not take away from the outstanding run the Red Arrows had at season's end. Lowell ended its regular season with a sweep over Zealand. It then knocked off Caledonia in the pre-district qualifier. The Red Arrows followed up the win with a shutout over Northview in the pre-districts. The six-game winning streak was highlighted with upset wins over Forest Hills Central and Lakewood in the districts.

Saturday's regional contest got off to an auspicious beginning. After Ryan Malcolm set down the Lakers in the first, Lowell went to work on Spring Lake pitcher Peets. Probst leadoff the first with a double into left field. Ryan Holtz moved him up to third with a besehit. Toby Alderink then plated Probst and sent Holtz to third with a single to right. One out later Kirby Carpenter brought Alderink-home on a single into right-center.

Peets got out of the inning by striking out Steve Lenger and getting Pete Gerkin to ground out to short. "We had a chance to score 2-3 more runs," Kropf said. "Organeke (Dave) just missed a double down the line before striking out. Lenger also hit a ball just barely foul before striking out."

The Lakers rallied for four runs in the third. The inning was started on a controversial hit batsman call. "Their ninth batter was awarded first when the pitch hit him on the hand while he was swinging," Kropf explained. "When a batter swings at a pitch, the hands then become a part of the bat and it should be ruled a strike."

An error followed by two consecutive single opened the flood gates for four Spring Lake runs.

The Lakers added two more runs in the fifth on two singles an error and a walk.

Two walks, another hit batsman and two singles helped account for three more Laker runs in the sixth inning.

Lowell scored its third and final run in the bottom of the sixth when Kirby Carpenter was walked. Lenger was hit by a pitch, Gerkin walked and then Aaron Wester singled home Carpenter.

Lowell was held to five hits. Peets walked three Lowell batters and struck out 11 Red Arrows. "Peets was as good a pitcher as we've faced all season," Kropf said.

Despite the loss, Kropf was pleased with the season. "The boys made it fun and playing in the regionals provides us with good experience and gives us a nice boost for next year," he concluded.

Franciscan Rhythms offers classes

Franciscan Rythms in Ada is offering two sessions of training in music this summer.

The first, Choir Experiences for Children, is a program of voice training for young people ages 7 to 12, offered June 21-30.

Instruction will be provided in the basics of singing, such as posture, breath control, diction, phrasing, tone color, dynamics and part singing. The goal is to expand the present singing ability of each child, and to increase general musicianship.

Classes will meet from 11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., under the instruction of Sr. Mary Margaret Delaski, F.S.E., Director of Franciscan Rhythms.

The second session, Music for Tiny Tots, is a program of music and movement for two-year-olds, offered June 21-30 at Franciscan Rhythms in Ada.

"It's a program designed to help very young children develop motor skill coordination through rhythmic movement," says Sr. Mary Margaret Delaski.

F.S.E., Director of Franciscan Rhythms. "It also offers the potential for enhancing a child's self image, and making the child more alive to the environment."

The classes are held from 10:30 a.m. under the instruction of Mrs. Michael Distelrath.

The Franciscan Rhythms is a non-profit organization run by the Franciscan Sisters of the Eucharist. For more information on either class call 676-2010.

Legislator passes new statues

By: Representative Vic Krause

Many bills passed during the 1988 legislative session recently became law, and some will catch violators by surprise.

Some of the new statues will:

- impose stiff penalties on people who breed or sell pit bulls or other fighting dogs, as well as provide penalties to owners of dogs responsible for attacking humans.
- make it illegal to place harassing phone calls, or to engage in business solicitations by phone between 9 p.m. and 9 a.m.
- allow peace officers and certain private persons to arrest shoplifters without a warrant.
- prevent trucks from traveling in the left lane of divided highways with two or more lanes in each side, except when passing, turning left or avoiding a hazard.
- ban smoking in hospitals and all health professionals' offices, including doctors, dentists, chiropractors, psychologists and veterinarians
- provide felony penalties for people who turn back mileage odometers when selling cars.
- make crimes motivated by a person's race, religion, national origin, color or gender a felony.

Fifty-year-old blue whales have been known to reach a length of 100 feet.

History helps Lusmyer's vantage of the present

There was a period of time in Priscilla Lusmyer's past when history didn't do or mean a thing to her.

That all changed, when as a youth, she read a series of books on the Civil War. "It was a kids' series. The books really brought history alive for me," Lusmyer says. So much so that the thought of being an integral part of Lowell history 100 years from now is attractive to Lusmyer. "That is an appealing thought," she smiles.

The excitement with which she read the books may not even approach the passion in her efforts to restore Fallasburg Village.

"Fallasburg Village is the only one of its kind in Michigan that is still there and capable of being restored," Lusmyer said. With the support from the State of Michigan, Lusmyer sees the restoration becoming a reality.

Since being installed as president two years ago, Lusmyer has overseen the purchase of three properties in the Fallasburg Village, the tripling of the membership, the changing of exhibits in the museum and the lengthening of the museum season. To that end, Lusmyer has played a key role in the continued process of the preservation of the Village of Fallasburg. "Much of the groundwork was laid by Judy Baird before I became president. Through Baird, the society had already received a couple of grants," Lusmyer said.

The next move for the historical society will be the restoration of the Fallas House.

"I love what I do. It helps me see things and how they happened," she says. "Fallasburg Park is a great area with recreational potential."

Lusmyer, over the past three years, has informed the many readers of "Ledger Entries" (a weekly column in the Lowell Ledger) on Lowell's history, including what happened and how it happened.

"It has been a very enjoyable endeavor for me," Lusmyer said. "The idea for 'Ledger Entries' first came about when I heard the state was micro filming old copies of local newspapers, such as The Lowell Ledger. I had seen columns of this sort in other newspapers. Ledger Publisher Roger Brown gave it a big kickoff and it continues to be quite popular."

She finds the things totally different from today and the things that remain the same over the years the most amusing. "Good examples of this are reading about a person's buggy tipping over and then in the same paper reading about someone yelling about how the younger generation is going to the dogs."

It also continues to educate and inform people about its hometown's heritage. Maybe no other word has played a more important part in Lusmyer's life than education. She grew up in a stone house on Burroughs Road, being the third of four children (Portia, Dana and Humphrey being the other three). Lusmyer graduated from Lowell High School in 1944. She then attended Oberlin College in Ohio where she earned a Bachelor of Arts Degree in physical education. From Oberlin she moved on to Northwestern University where she earned her Masters Degree in Education.

Lusmyer spent 21 years teaching in Ashland, Ohio, Charlotte, Grandville and Saugatuck (12 years). "Over those 21 years I taught kindergarten through 12th-grade," she says. "I was most concerned with helping kids that had the least amount of coordination. Studies have shown the amount of early coordination affects a student's ability in learning how to read."

The Lowell graduate adds coordination basics affect a person's reading ability - e.g. eye-hand coordination and balance.

Lusmyer quit teaching when her youngest boy, John, graduated from high school in 1979.

It hasn't always been easy for the mother of four to organize and lead. "I was shy as a child, but having a lot of opportunities to be a leader helped me to overcome my shyness," Lusmyer said.

She divides her time among Lowell's First United Methodist Church Organizations, Lowell's Women's Club, the Garden Lore Club, the Vergennes Cooperative Club, the West Central Michigan Historical Society and the Grand Rapids Cantata Choir and, when time permits, Lusmyer still enjoys a good adventure book.

"I remain intense about things that interest me and about helping others," Lusmyer said.

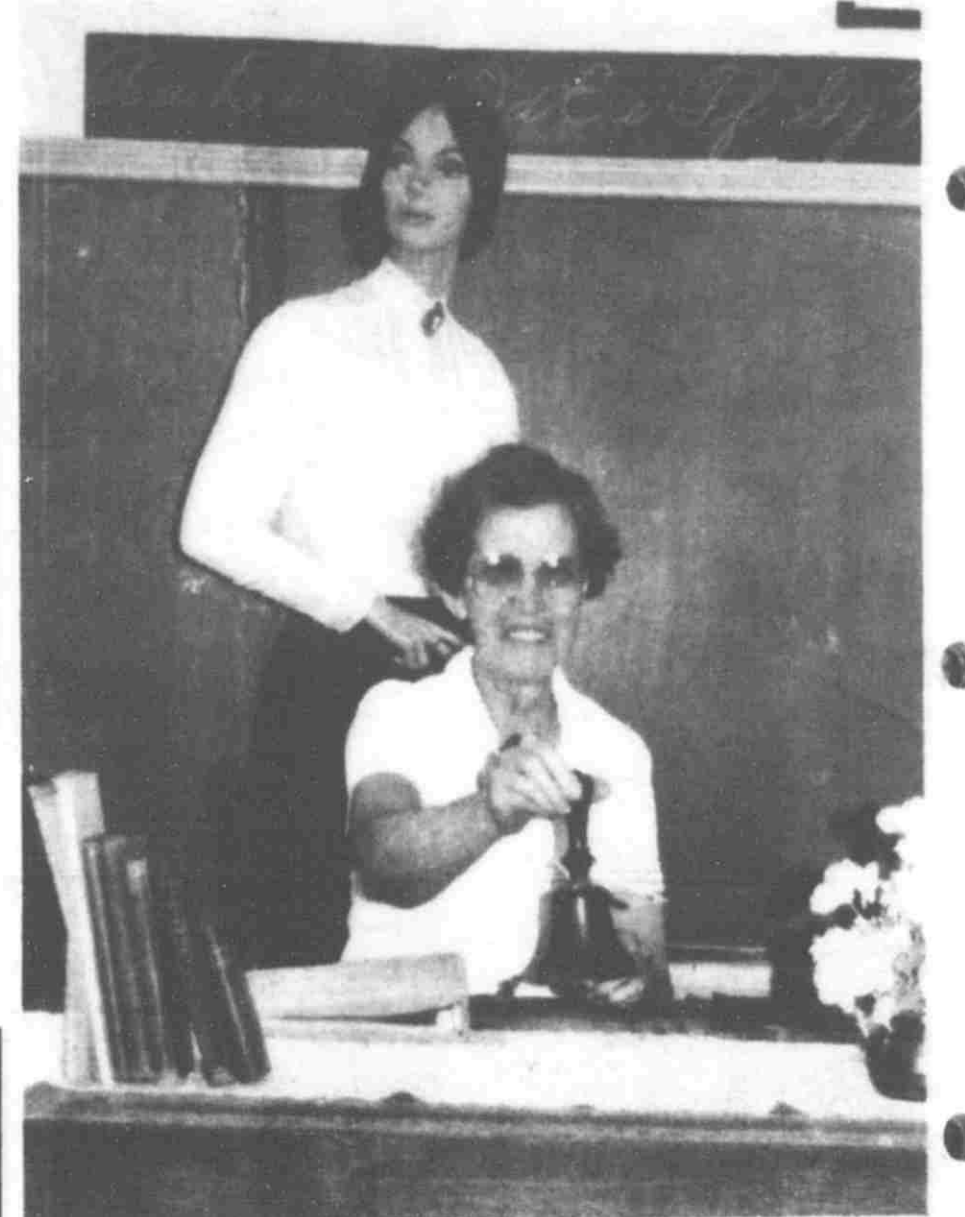

Being healthy and happy with life provides Lusmyer with a wealth that not everybody comes to realize.

Lusmyer has a strong yearning for learning music.
