Three headliners stamp the 1990 Showboat with success Showboat crowds weather the wet and cold for fun and entertainment

Ricky Skaggs picked with the best of them Saturday night on the Showboat.

Lowell's Showboat gala may not have been blessed with the best weather, during its three summer nights in June, but Exile, Myron Floren - Bobby & Elaine, and Ricky Skaggs transcended all of that.

The three headliners did so by not just performing, but instead entertained the Showboat crowds. In turn, the general public exhibited a high degree of appreciation for their talents.

"I did not have high expectations for Exile nor am I a big fan of country music, but those four young men were entertaining, and whether their music is to a person's liking or not, people respect talent and the ability to entertain," Dick Korb said.

With music from its first album for Arista Records, "Still Standing," a mix of the old, including "It'll Be Me" and multimillion selling hit "Kiss You All Over," it did not take Exile long to get the attention, admiration and respect of the roughly 1,200 in attendance.

With the dancing fluidity of Bobby Burgess and Elaine Balden, and the quiet mannered and fast-fingered grace of accordionist Myron Floren, and the stirring amount of audience participation, one can understand why Floren travels over 150,000 air miles each year for personal appearances in communities throughout the country.

Without any encouragement from Floren, the venerable crowd on Thursday evening joined in at every available opportunity. Floren did a rousing rendition of "My Wild Irish Rose." A person would of had to be emotionally inanimate to not have been moved when Floren quit playing his accordion and the audience, with the enthusiasm of their youth, sang the final two verses of the song, invoking this response from Floren, "I must have the Phil Harmonic Tabernacle Choir with me tonight."

A second memorable moment from the show came

The young dance group "Selections from Annie" was a sentimental crowd favorite.

An art exhibit celebrating the 100th anniversary (1890-1990) of the King Milling Company was opened to customers, suppliers, employees and other City dignitaries last Tuesday evening at the Lowell Area Arts Council.

A crowd of between 150-175 people viewed the exhibit. It was the largest exhibit reception this year, according to Gallery Director, David Davis.

1990 Lowell Showboat memories . . .

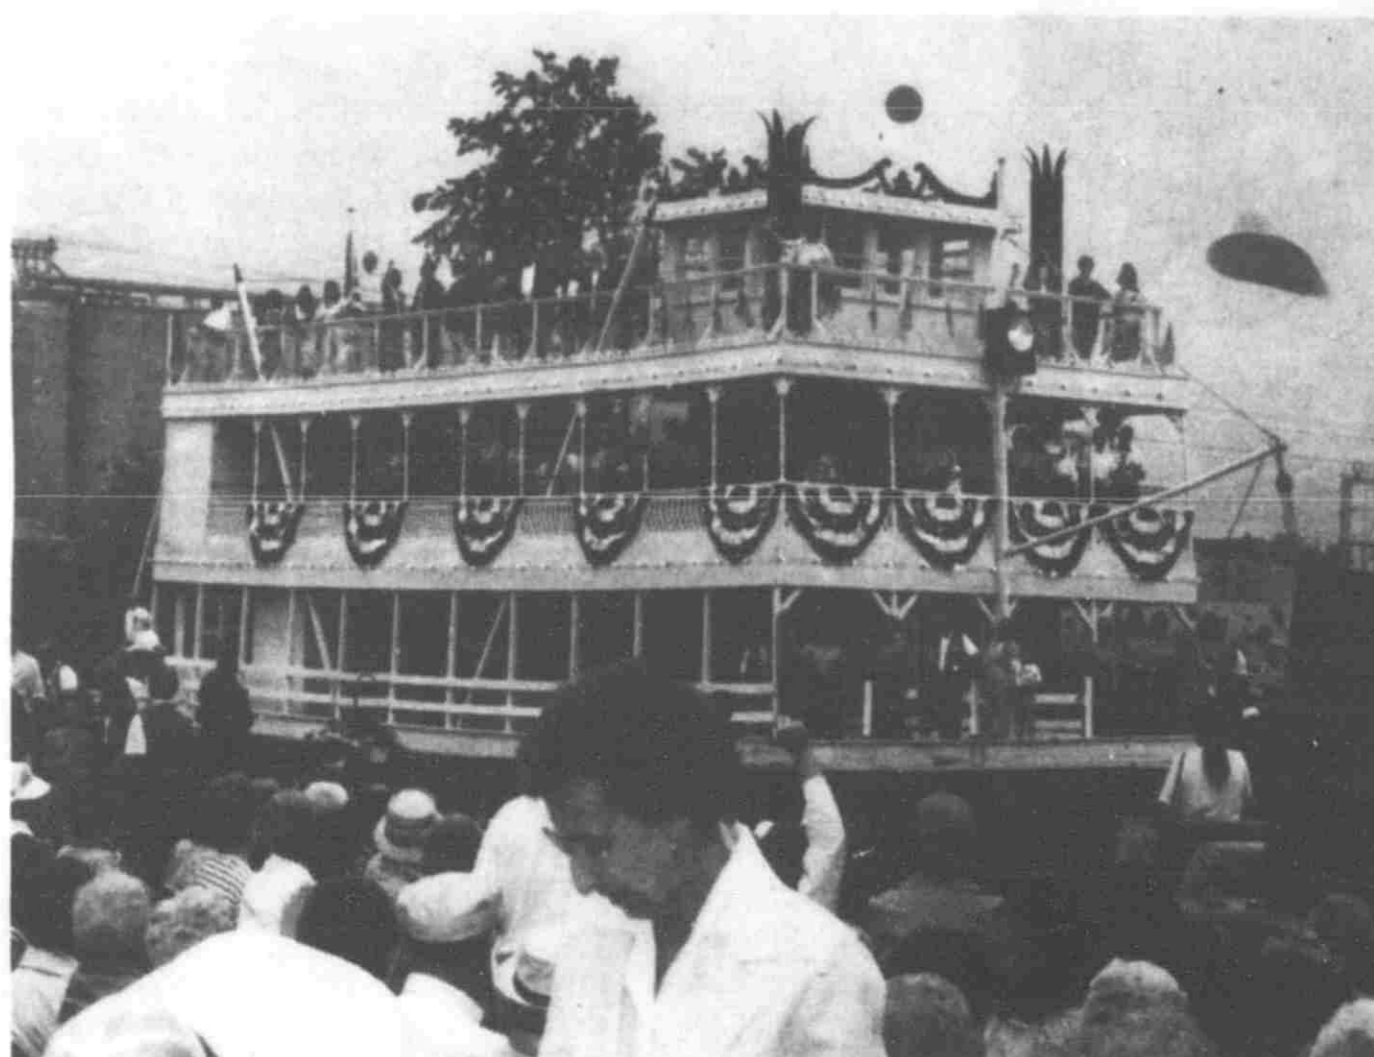

This young lady is a member of the dance group, Jingo. The local amateur act shared the stage with country group, Exile Thursday night on the Lowell Showboat.

Jimmy "The Spoon Man" Krews was a crowd favorite amongst all the amateur acts.

All eyes up hear. All eyes were, as the Pacific Island dancers shook their way into the hearts of many onlookers.

A lot of helping hands made this year's Showboat parade a success.

Jimmy "The Spoon Man" Krews had plenty of fun with his Hillbilly Band. Has anyone seen Billy Bob?

Ricky Skaggs kept his fingers nimble despite the cold.

Exile's Thursday night performance left a lot of smiling faces in its audience.

The ease and fluidity with which Myron Floren played the accordion was quite a sight.

The Saturday night crowd gave this fiddling player his due.

when Floren asked Lew Guernsey, an amateur talent winner from Ioia, to join him on stage for a number and play his musical instrument the "Bones."

Ricky Skaggs, a Nashville boy, must have thought he was playing in Alaska with the wind chill that was blowing off the Flat River and across the Showboat stage Saturday night. "I have goose bumps on my legs big enough to hang my hat on," Skaggs laughed.

Skaggs intertwined his great musical talents with some country boy charm and wit. Blending a mixture of cuts from his "Kentucky Thunder" album and songs from his traditional-steeped country music past, the country star did not disappoint the large throng of Skaggs enthusiasts.

The quietest point of Skaggs performance came during a heartwarming a cappella performance of "Amazing Grace."

"I think there will always be a hunger for music that touches your heart. It has traditional value and wholesomeness that other music doesn't have," Skaggs said.

Prior to the headliners, the three Showboat audiences were entertained by Jimmy

"The Spoonman" Krews and the Great Lake Chorus. Both acts were warmly received by the Showboat audiences. Krews' audience participation routine begged for and received laughter.

The Great Lakes Barbershop Chorus mixed professionalism and harmony as its sound was enveloped by the Showboat crowds.

Other amateur Showboat talent act to grace the stage were Selections from Annie, Pacific Island Dancers, Jingo, Mary Shook, Twist, Boo Hoo, Oh Boy and Heidi Kulas.

Myron Floren and bones player, Lew Guernsey were quite the team Friday night.

The Great Lakes Barbershop Chorus brought some harmony to the Showboat stage.

Fishing Club announces recent contest winners

Some boys never miss an opportunity to get in some fishing, as these two young men prove at the recent Lowell Area Fishing Club's Kids' Fishing Day. Mom had made them quit the lake and so they fished in the bait bucket.

Some 55 youngsters were fishing at the recent Lowell Area Fishing Club's Kids' Fishing Day. The event is supported by donations from area businesses and merchants, and was held on Saturday, June 9, for the 4th Annual Kids' Fishing Day.

The kids enjoyed themselves fishing with their Moms, Dads, Grandmas and Grandpas. "We very much enjoy doing this for the kids every year, as much as they enjoy being here," said Fred Dabakey, Vice-President of L.A.F.C. "We couldn't have gotten a nicer day nor more cooperation from the fish. They registered over 625 fish which is an astounding number for this small a body of water."

products. Keep the poison control center number where you can find it. Before an emergency, pick up some ipecac syrup and activated charcoal from the pharmacy. These are used to treat certain poisonings and should only be used after contacting your physician or poison control center.

If a poisoning should occur try to remain calm and follow these steps:

1. Identify the material that has been ingested. Estimate how much has been taken. Read the label to see if there are any instructions regarding treatment of overdosage.
2. If the suspected poison is a corrosion chemical have the victim drink one glass of milk if they are conscious.
3. Call the poison control center at 1-800-442-4571 or your physician. Tell them who, what, when, and how. Who was poisoned? What is the suspected poison? When did it occur? How much was taken, and how the victim is feeling. Is there any nausea, vomiting, pain or sleepiness? Is the victim conscious? Give your name and phone number to the poison control center so they can follow-up. Avoid using the phone after you contact the center so they can contact you.
4. Follow the poison control center's instructions. If you don't understand, ask them to repeat it. Use ipecac or activated charcoal only if instructed to do so.
5. Transport the victim to the emergency room or call an ambulance if the victim's condition deteriorates.

Remember, most poisonings can be prevented by keeping potential poisons away from curious children. Most apparent poisonings involve such small quantities that little harm is done, and close observation will be all that is needed.

Everyone attending was treated to a hotdog, chips, soda pop and ice cream lunch after the official end of the contest, with the awarding of prizes following lunch. The winners in the various age categories are as follows:

In the 3 1/2 to 6 year old category Eddie Howey took first; Danny Miller, second; and Stacy Onan third.

In the 7 to 9 year old category Josh Comp took first; Justin Dykhuus second and Matt Lynema third.

Sean Ellison took first in the 10 to 13 year old category with Becky Comp finishing second and John Wujcujowski with third.

Brian Wierenga had the first limit of 25 fish for the boys and Tami Sherman for the girls. The biggest fish was taken again this year by McKenzie Plummer, this time with a 14 inch large mouth bass.

"All the kids received a prize of some sort thanks to the generous support of the area merchants and businesses," said L.A.F.C. President Len Hamp. "All the kids that competed are winners in their minds and in ours. There is an old proverb that states, 'Give a man a fish and you feed him for a day, but teach that same man how to fish and he'll feed himself forever.' We hope that we helped in this manner and also to get the kids HOOKED ON FISHING INSTEAD OF HOOKED ON DRUGS and to let them have fun while doing so," said Hamp.

Members of the Lowell Area Fishing Club will once again be assisting at the Rogers' Handicapper Fishing Day at Ada Park on July 7 (rain date July 14). "We urge all who can, to get involved in this worthy project," said Vice President Dabakey. Rogers is expecting 1,500 participants this year and help is really needed.

TOWN TALK

Should people be allowed to take their own lives through the use of a suicide machine? If so, why? If not, why not?

Lori Ryan
 No. It's wrong, it's no different than shooting someone, and that is wrong. My mother-in-law died from cancer, and I think she may have used the machine, but I would not encourage anyone to. People should not make the decision on life and death.

Jenny Duke
 No. I don't think a person should be able to take their own life with a suicide machine. I don't believe that is the way God intended us to die. God will take us when he's ready. However, I am not against being taken off a life-support machine.

Dave Guy
 I'm not that religious, but the Bible says taking your own life is wrong, and that's good enough for me. Today, I believe modern science can make terminal illness relatively painless. However, if I'm lying in bed and unable to move or talk, I'm not so sure I'd say no. If a person is being kept alive by a life-support machine, I have no problem if they want to be disconnected.

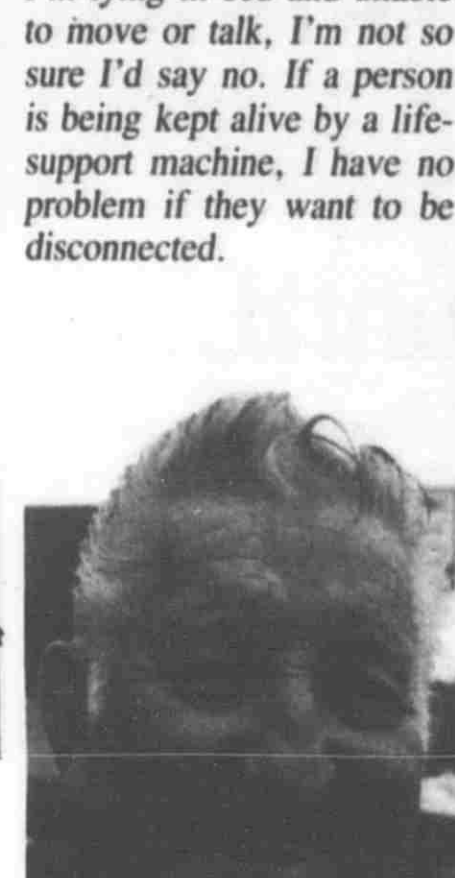

Don Dilly
 A person who is terminally ill should definitely be allowed to take their own life if so desired. I watched my Dad die from cancer and that is no fun at all. If a person's wish at that point is to take their own life, then it should be allowed to happen.

Jay VandenBrink
 Yes, I believe it is alright to use a suicide machine if a person is diagnosed as being terminally ill. There is no need to prolong a person's suffering. I would use the machine in that situation.

Monica Heicher
 I personally don't like the concept of the suicide machine. But, if a person who is terminally ill wishes that no extreme measure be taken to keep them alive, that's okay. To me, the machine thing though, is spooky.

Hugh Linkfield
 Yes. If a person is totally paralyzed or has a terminal disease, that's like being in jail with no end, and then a person should have a choice. They should not have to wait until their family is broke and their life savings is spent for a needless and unwanted situation.

Alice Felling
 I believe the decision should be left up to the individual. I also believe it should only be an option for the terminally ill.

Snoopy and Rodney the Reindeer shared a backseat as they road along the parade route.

The Bruce Early Band jazzed it up along Main Street, as the parade rolled along.

The Showboat Calliope and "Toot Sweet" the Tugboat Calliope Clown Combo tooted some festive musical notes along the parade route.

A lot of helping hands made this year's Showboat parade a huge success.

New reading curriculum adopted by Lowell Board of Education

Reading is the process of constructing meaning from the written word using the reader's existing knowledge. That will be the focal point of the Lowell Schools' reading curriculum starting with the 1990-91 school year. The new reading curriculum was adopted by the Lowell Board of Education meeting on Monday, June 18.

Instead of teaching reading as a series of isolated skills, it will be taught from a literature base approach which will encompass all the skills with the focus on comprehension. "Many students can read fluently, but some don't know what they've read when they're done," said Lowell Schools' Director of Curriculum, Jim White. The literature based approach will be taught from library type trade books. The new approach will give students experiences to help them gain enjoyment through reading.

White said the new reading approach will give teachers the flexibility to use different materials. Companies providing material at the elementary level for the Basal Series, a controlled lesson format and guideline situation, includes Heath, Harcourt Brace Javanovich and Macmillan. All the materials provided by these companies in the first year of the program will be free. White said, Lowell will then choose one company.

"The approach is more than just teaching reading, it will help children to understand and to apply principles," White said. This change will coincide with the change in the MEAP reading format. The MEAP is changing the focal point of its test from skills to comprehension. Instead of students reading 2-3 paragraphs and answering some question, they will be asked to read a page or two and then tested on their understanding and ability to apply some principles (based on what you've read, tell me...).

Grades six, seven and eight will also begin use of the Basal pilot Series. The ideas will be the same but the approach will differ.

Each grade level picked out books, none of which will be repeated at different grade levels.

"The Basal Series is nothing new. It enables Lowell to remain current with what's appropriate," White said. "The program was tried out in a few classrooms during the 1989-90 school year."

White said the new reading program offers four valuable assets, reading freedom, a comprehension focus, encourages students to read for enjoyment and it offers a more literary approach.

THE FIELD

What will you find across the field?
a tractor wheel imprint filled with Spring's bath water a footprint, wet and large an apple branch trying to burst life
A pussy willow, yellow-seeded

What will you find upon the field?
the sprouting of green
the heifers prancing or sleeping the sun drying the hair of earth field mice nesting a family

What will you find within the field?
touches of the season's change touches of death
touches of life
touches of God

Across, upon and within the field.

Leisure to sit and think--to see quietly something quite ordinary and often taken for granted, and to see it in a fresh way--takes time, like when I looked at the field.

Life with its people and philosophy of "You must keep busy, you must achieve, you must be somebody, (and no matter what)--you must keep on keeping on" crowds into our lives daily, and we listen to its advice and run its race, until one day we find ourselves weary of it all.

Years begin to criss-cross off our calendars and we find that we have more time to welcome leisure into our lives. And after experimenting with that escape from responsibility and labor and strain, we find another monster in our midst--boredom. That monster hovers over us with names like: dull, humdrum, tiring, wearisome and stuffy. Once again we wish our lives were different.

Remember when we were younger, when the kids were little, when my husband was living, (or my wife), when our health was good?--and the list of "remembers" goes on and we settle frustrated in front of the television and watch somebody work out our "remembers." And something in us dies.

What I've seen and heard and somewhat experienced is that--WE HAVE A CHOICE. A choice to seize the day, if only for a moment--like the day I looked over the field. It made a difference then and even now as I write these words, the remembered fragrance of that time comes back in a refreshing way.

Have you found your moment of leisure? Do find it--it's waiting to be found.

Bovee leaves school lunch program after 27 years

The days are gone when the Director of Food Service at a school could offer students lunch for 35 cents, milk for 3 cents and at the end of the day could leave the job at school.

In part, that is why Marilyn Bovee will be absent from her Director of Food Service position when Lowell Schools start up again at the end of August.

Bovee, who was originally encouraged by Steve Nisbet (Superintendent-1963), to help out a couple days a week with the lunch program by Steve Nisbet, said she grew tired of the pressure that came with federal reports and regulations - the impurities of the job, if you will.

Those impurities were not there when Bovee started. Today, however, the food has remained healthy and nourishing. "When I started working 27 years ago, the food was wholesome. We served casseroles, macaroni and cheese, spaghetti, and baked bread (made at the school). They were all big menu items," Bovee recalls. "The school was able to sell milk for 3 cents because it was subsidized by the federal government." Bovee decided to help out with the lunch program because she was friends of the Nisbets through church and she wanted to keep busy, and frankly, just wanted to get out of the house. She did that for three years and enjoyed her work. Enjoyed it so much that in 1966 Bovee was named Director of Food Service for Lowell Schools. "It provided me an opportunity to be involved," she says.

Serving lunch 27 years ago was a little easier than today. "When I started in 1963 we had one lunch line in each school, and each school offered just one entree. Each individual school had its own kitchen and there was no satelliting (transporting) into other schools," Bovee explains.

During the 1989-90 school year, Bovee and her crew of 27 employees were in charge of feeding five schools and Marilyn Bovee will be missed as Food Service Director. Bovee retired following the 1989-90 school year after 27 years of service to Lowell Area Schools.

the New Dawn program. This included transporting food to Bushnell and Runciman.

"Satelliting is done pretty much throughout the state now," Bovee explains. "It is more cost effective to have a base kitchen and to transport food from there."

The students of this generation have had a choice of three entrees plus many more fruits and vegetables.

A good measurement of the food service's success is the participation level at all of the schools. "We have a high number of students who take part in our lunch program at all of the schools," Bovee said.

Lowell's Food Service Director of 27 years helped enhance the program's success through her meetings with the student council and her visits with students in the lunchroom. "We repeat the lunches that have the highest level of participation," she said. Lowell's lunch service program feeds roughly 2,000 students a day.

Bovee says her immediate plans for the future include traveling in the fall with her husband, Vercel to the New England states. Along with her interest in plants, Bovee speculates she'll start up her volunteer work at Butterworth Hospital again. "I won't be happy just sitting around the house," she quips.

Some things take longer than 27 years to change.

Fun for all at the St. Patrick's Festival

While the kids were playing games, adults sat down for a friendly game of cards.

Shiny antique cars served as a major focal point for some of the St. Patrick's Parnell Festival on Sunday.

Face painting was a youngster's favorite at the festival.

This is one happy bingo player. She just won $26 while playing Bingo at the Festival Sunday.

Look what I caught, Dad!

The sun was a little bright for this swing'n little girl.

There was plenty of barbecue chicken for everyone at the St. Patrick's Festival.

Nothing like a relaxing horseback ride on a pleasant Sunday afternoon.

C.J. Christoff & Sons changes its name to Chadalee Farms

C.J. Christoff & Sons has been producing top-of-the-line salad dressing, fruit juices, horseradish and condiments for 43 years. It will continue to produce these high quality food products, but under a new name - its flagship brand: Chadalee Farms.

"We've been thinking about the move for 2-3 years and finally made the decision at a May board meeting," Christoff and Sons President Wendell Christoff said. "We have not put a strong emphasis behind our brand. The change will allow us to do that."

It will also allow Christoff and Sons to change its plaque image. "Our plaque was originally designed to give us a 'down home' image. Going into the 90's we want to change the perception of how consumers view our products - from a product produced in a small down home setting to a producer of top of the line products."

Christoff said it was felt that since the company was changing its plaque, it would eliminate confusion of having different company and trademark names, if the company also changed its name to coincide with the trademark. Christoff believes that change will help enhance the company's image.

Christoff and Sons have produced 350 products and roughly 400 accounts that cover 35 states, Canada and Japan.

The hardest part about the decision to change the company's name for Wendell, was the fact it was started under his father's, Clinton's name. "For 43 years it's been under my dad's name. But, he's been extremely positive and thinks the change is for the better."

Wendell said the change will be a gradual one which will take place over the next 12 months. It will also be an expensive alteration. The project will cost between $25-$30,000. "That's why it took us 2-3 years to make the decision," Christoff laughs.

The president of the local company said Chadalee Farms line, stands for uncompromised quality at a competitive price. "It's a brand built, not by big corporate advertising budgets and promotional gimmicks, but by face to face selling and customer service, one customer at a time," Christoff said.

He added because of what Chadalee Farms stands for, it is with great pride that Christoff and Sons takes advantage of Chadalee Farms' heritage.

At a May board meeting a decision was made to change the name C.J. Christoff & Sons to Chadalee Farms.

Mark Doster

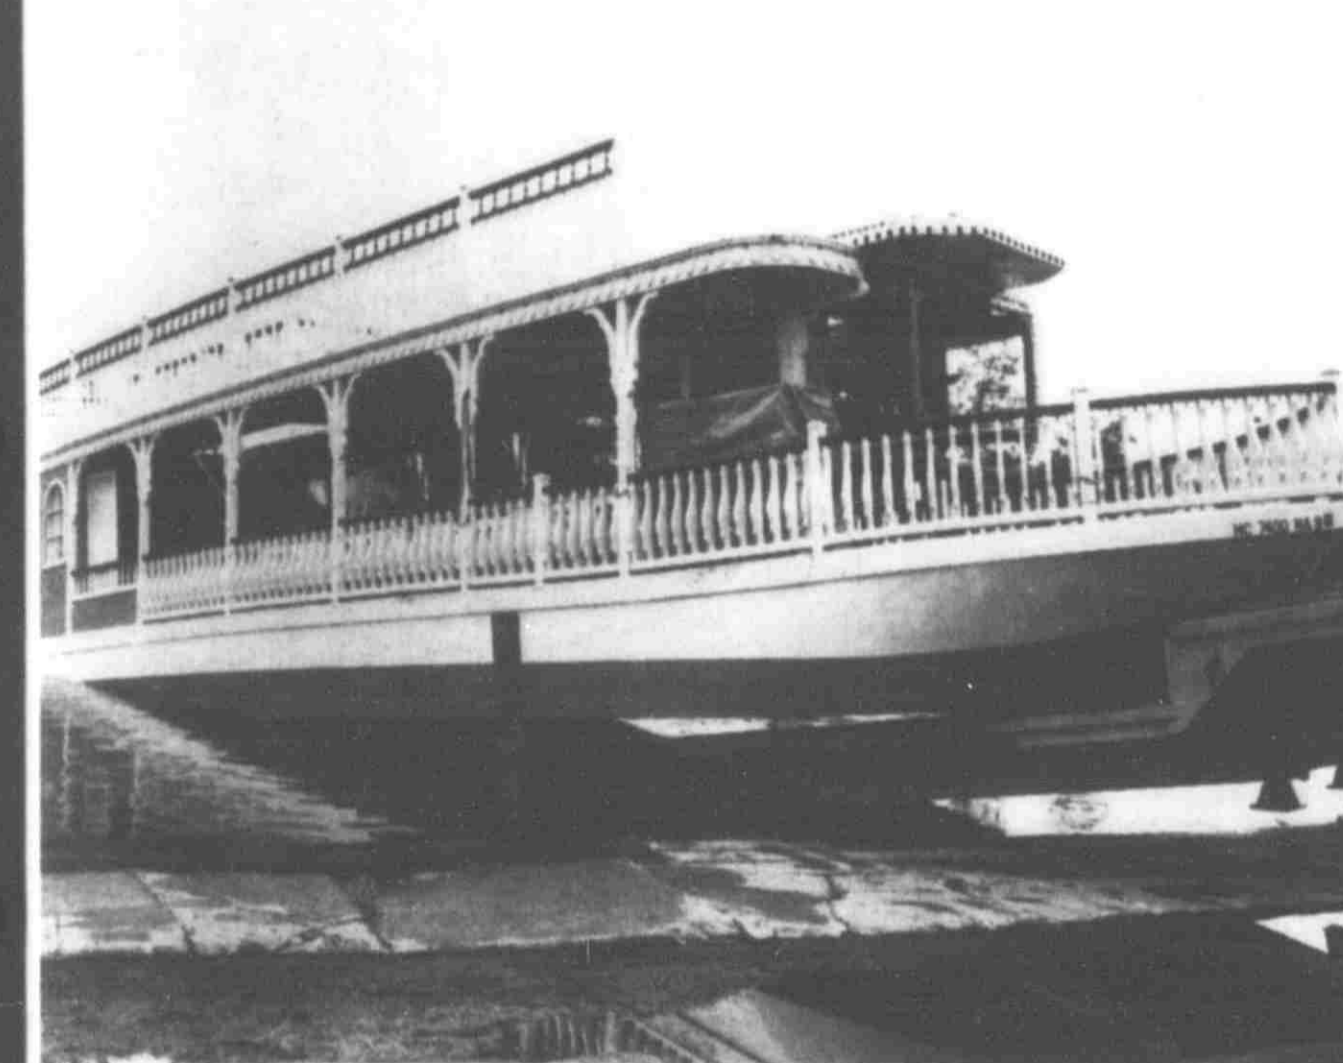

Doster announces State Rep. candidacy

Mark Doster has announced his candidacy for the office of State Representative for the 88th District.

The 27 year old bachelor graduated from Plainwell High School and was also an exchange student to Herrenburg, West Germany. He has a BA in Political Science from Kalamazoo College and also attended the University of CAEN in Caen, France. He is currently a student at the Thomas M. Cooley Law School in Lansing.

He is running as a Democrat in the August 7 primary. His ancestors came from Germany in 1835 and settled in Doster, MI, where his family has been active in the community ever since.

It took awhile, but "Princess Laura" did dock in Lowell

It took nearly three hours, but "Princess Laura," the steamboat, finally did reach the Flat River.

Lowering the "Princess Laura" into the water was quite the chore.

The move from Lansing to Lowell for the Princess Laura and Captain John Chamberlain and his crew of 30 was the hardest yet.

Then again, nothing has come easy for the four-year-old steamboat. Not even the steamboat's christening.

The naming of the 112 passenger steamboat came about through the birth of Chamberlain and wife, Karla's daughter, Laura, who came into the world two months premature. Her early entry caused enough concern that Laura had to spend some time in the Neo Natal Intensive Care Unit at Sparrow Hospital in Lansing.

At that time, Chamberlain and Karla were in the midst of adding a third boat to their J&K Steamboat line. The Lansing couple decided at the time they would name their third steamboat after their daughter. "There was some question as to whether she would make it," Chamberlain explains. "Either way we decided we wanted the steamboat named after our daughter, Laura." The boat was christened "Princess Laura." "I refer to her now as Laura the Rascal," chuckles Chamberlain.

As the "Gods of Showboat" week would have it, that all took place (four years ago) at roughly the same time the community of Lowell was putting the finishing touches on the resurrection of the 'Ol Robert E. Lee Showboat.

"The public's response to the Princess Laura has been phenomenal," Chamberlain stated. The same could be said of his daughter, Laura's recovery, and of Lowell's re-birth of the Showboat.

The same could be said of getting the big boat into the Flat River last Thursday.

"That move was the hardest one we've ever had to make," Chamberlain said.

The problem Chamberlain and his crew had, was the trailer bottomed out, and the ramp went down quickly into the Flat River. "In order to lift the tongue so it would match the incline of the ramp, a truck crane wrecker from the Ionia/Portland was called in. Once we got the tongue to match the incline, then the 'Princess Laura' eased right in," Chamberlain said.

Chamberlain and his crew ease right into towns throughout the summer for festivals, showboats and other celebrations, offering public, lunch, dinner and midnight cruises.

The Princess Laura is licensed for 112 passengers and for 90 passengers on the dinner cruises. The dinners are prepared in the J & K Kitchen - the back end (trailer) of an 12-wheeler truck. Not your ordinary truck trailer, this one contains a small walk-in cooler, ovens and other preparatory cooking needs.

"I've been a sailor all of my life," Chamberlain says. "I've been around water my entire life. Being a Captain beats working for a living."

Wyoming man injured in Cumberland crash

A two-car accident two-tenths of a mile off of M-21 on Cumberland, sent a Wyoming man to Butterworth Hospital.

Lowell's Clay VanderWarf and Karen Christin were not injured in the accident.

Jeffrey Koning, 20, of Wyoming, sustained injuries in a two-car accident two-tenths of a mile north of Cumberland Road Friday afternoon at approximately 3:25 p.m. Koning was southbound on Cumberland when the vehicle he was driving rounded a curve and slid on the wet pavement and crossed into the northbound lane where he struck a northbound vehicle driven by Clay VanderWarf, 18, of Lowell.

After impact, both vehicles slid into the guard rail on the southeast side of the road. Koning was transported to Butterworth Hospital where he was treated for pain in the right knee and his neck and a tingling in his arms. VanderWarf and his passenger, Karen Christin, 17, of Lowell incurred no injuries. Koning was cited for violation of the basic speed law.

Wallin running for Judge of 63rd District Court

Gary Allan Wallin announced his candidacy for Judge of the 63rd District Court, 2nd Division. The seat opened up upon the retirement of the Honorable Joseph White. Wallin is stressing his lengthy experience in the courtroom as a trial attorney, his knowledge gained as an administrator in the criminal justice system, and his personal adherence to traditional values.

For the last 17 years Wallin represented the people of Kent County as an Assistant Prosecuting Attorney. In 1984 he took over the management of District Court activity for the office. In 1986 he was chosen by Prosecutor William A. Forsyth to be his Chief Assistant; supervising the staff attorneys, overseeing the criminal caseload, and managing the daily operations of the office.

As Chief Assistant Prosecutor Wallin had many opportunities to observe the resources of the criminal justice system. He participated in meetings of the Jail Population Management Board, the 61st District Court Probation Advisory Board, and the Restitution Incentive Program (an incarceration alternative).

Gary Allan Wallin

"I have worked hard as an Assistant Prosecutor and Chief Assistant Prosecutor, and I pledge to work hard to effectively and efficiently manage the 63rd District Court if elected," Wallin said.
