Expedition '90 reacquaints voyagers with old friend - The Grand River

The Grand River twists and turns with logjams, riffles, and pools in a rich assemblage of aquatic invertebrates in and under the rocky stream bottom as it winds its way from Jackson to Grand Haven.

Rivers are the life-supporting arteries of mother earth, and yet, in times when there are other more viable and expedient modes of transportation, the importance of the river has been lost.

In an effort to restore its significance, a group of 100 to 130 expedites set out on a 13-day, 250-mile journey known as Expedition '90 to help give back to the Grand River some of the attention it so sorely has missed.

"The trip was made to help put the Grand River back into the River Fest and to help people become more aware of it. The trip will also provide a study of the river's water quality and habitat," said River Master, Verlen Kruger.

Kruger, who has been on many of the great rivers, still finds fun and excitement on the Grand River. "The Grand River has been bad-mouthed. The status of the river, however, is better than we anticipated," Kruger says. "The Grand River has been a friend to me. I live on its banks - just two cooler lengths away. I've been paddling rivers extensively for 27 years."

Not necessarily all the participants in the canoes were expert canoeists. "But all of us love the river," Kruger said.

There were Camp Fire girls spotting turtles, Boy Scouts testing the water quality. There were fathers and sons, mothers and daughters, environmentalists, natural resource personnel, and there were research experts. The ages were spread from 10 to 68.

Expedition '90 was not financed by the government, but, instead, funded through donations from various local businesses and organizations. "It was a grass roots voyage," Krueger said.

Kruger's wife, Valerie, also the trip's chairperson, was grateful and appreciative of her Expedition '90 cohorts. "Their enthusiasm and commitment has continued through capsizes, log jams, head winds and solid rain," she says. "We're all inclusive - there has been no blaming or fingerpointing. The trip has included individual and agency studies with the focal point being the Grand River."

Lowell's Charlie Doyle participated in Expedition '90. He paddled from Lowell to Ada.

Lowell and Pitsch landfill reach agreement

An agreement between the City of Lowell and Pitsch Sanitary Landfill was approved by the Lowell City Council at its August City Council Meeting.

Pitsch Sanitary Landfill, near Belding, sent a letter to Lowell City Manager, Dave Pasquale asking for a discharge permit to dispose its leachate (storm water which filters through the landfill) at the Wastewater Treatment Plant on a continuing basis.

Pitsch needs the availability to discharge 10,000 gallons per week (two truck loads), since the Belding wastewater facility had disrupted service.

Waste Water Treatment Plant Superintendent Mark Mundt reviewed the request and then recommended to the council that the permit be issued based on the following:

- A one year permit ending Aug. 31, 1991.
- A flat fee of $200 per load (divided equally between Waste-water Operation Services and the City).
- Limiting Pitsch to 10,000 gallons per week.
- Spelling out in the permit (as previously provided), the need for testing and the immediate discontinuance if any adverse impact is discovered.

Expedition, continued . . .

Lowell's Look Memorial Fire Station was one of 13 sites where the expeditioners stopped for lunch and/or dinner. "I've been extremely pleased with the response we've gotten," Verlen Kruger says.

City Hall's Betty Morlock organized the Expedition '90 Luncheon and Terri Robinson, owner of R-Place, prepared the food.

"It's been a fun experience. I've really enjoyed canoeing in the Voyager," said Jeff Irwin, 13, of Troop 180 in East Lansing. "The canoe is bigger, it holds more people and you get to wear costumes."

Fellow scout, Mike Garyet, 13, said he too was having a great time. They first heard about the Expedition through their Scoutmaster, Bruce McCreary. Garyet said the two Scouts were testing the water for its Ph level, the water clarity, and for TDS.

Jeffrey and Earlene Jeffrey

do a lot of canoeing in the Oakland County area by themselves. This time though, the Campfire leaders brought four Camp Fire girls. "There's quite a difference in canoeing by yourself and canoeing with four Campfire girls," Jeffrey Jeffrey muses.

Jeffrey said he was most taken aback by the River's ability to cleanse itself. "In Lansing the Grand River looked quite dirty, but as we reached the Grand Ledge area the River was much cleaner," he says. "The River was dirty again in Jackson, but as we got a little past Jackson you could see it begin to clean up again."

The Jeffrey's four Campfire companions, who counted turtles throughout the trip, learned that turtles are not necessarily found in the best quality of water.

Even through three days of rain, to an expeditioner, the trip on the River was Grand.

Hey man, I'm just happy to be here.

KINSMAN — Jon F. Kinsman, aged 22, of Alto, passed away Wednesday, August 22, 1990 from accidental injuries. Surviving are his parents, Robert and Nancy Kinsman of Clarksville; one sister, Robin; one brother, Nathan, both at home; maternal grandmother, Clara Van Antwerp of Dutton; paternal grandfather, Robert Kinsman of Sun City, AZ; a dear friend, Katie Hawk of Alto. Funeral Services were held Friday at the Calvary Grace Brethren Church, Alto, Rev. Mick Funderburg officiating. Interment Bowne Mennonite Cemetery. Memorial contributions may be made to the Kidney Foundation.

"The City has the authority to terminate the discharge permit if at any time there is a violation," Pasquale said. Mundt said samples of the leachate will be taken approximately once every five weeks.

Pitsch Sanitary Landfill currently discharges at the Grand Rapids Wastewater Treatment Plant also.

"I don't see any problem with the discharging," Mundt said. "It will be sampled throughout the one-year permit."

Homespun Devotions

By Pauline Spray

...be clothed with humility... (1 Peter 5:5).

How long for vacation time to come! Won't it be wonderful just to move out of the house - leaving the daily toil behind? No dishes to wash for two whole weeks.

No beds to make. No floors to clean. No windows to wash. What luxury to forsake responsibilities, to be foot-loose and fancy free!

But after some time spent away from familiar surroundings, home begins to sound good to us again. It's funny, but we find we're as eager to get back to the daily grind as we were to leave it. Even the sensation of hands in the dishpan is a pleasant prospect. And it is actually fun to sweep the floors again.

To enjoy homelife is a great privilege. Nothing else takes its place. Nothing can compare with the freedom experienced within one's own home. But with privilege goes responsibility.

Christian living is also a privilege, and with it goes responsibility. The privileged must help bear the burdens of the weak. Godly living has for its true pattern the attitude of humble helpfulness toward the less fortunate. "Humility is a must."

Prayer: Heavenly Father, truly it is a privilege to belong to Thee, to be loved by Thee, and to serve Thee. Help me also to realize I have a responsibility to those about me. Make me helpful to one of Thy weak ones today. Amen.

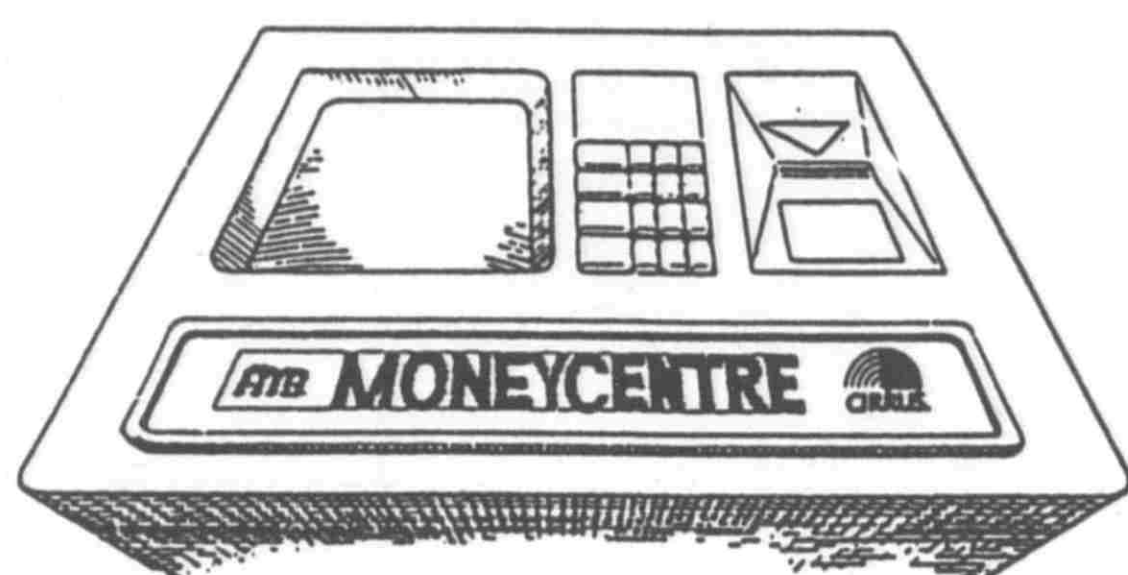

I believe the first test of a truly great man is his humility.

Cozy Corner by Roger Brown

At the risk of being turned in to the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals I'm going to feature Thor, the four wheel drive, turbo charged destructo-dog/pup in this week's column. As a refresher, Thor is a nine month old, neutered male, yellow Labrador retriever. He's nearing adulthood physically. Mentally, he's still an embryo. He became part of the family back in January, the brainchild of my wife and kids who "promised from the bottoms of their collective hearts" to feed him, train him, bathe him, exercise him and otherwise let their lives revolve around him. Well, seven months later, guess who's life is forced to revolve around this canine lunatic? Don't dwell on the question, your first hunch is correct!

As I pointed out in my opening arguments against another dog back in January, two socially active teenage kids, a career mom and a dad with a business to run just don't have enough time to spend with one dog, let alone a brain-dead puppy. I stood alone with my protests, with the probable exception of Duffy, our five year old golden retriever who knew he had a good thing going and wanted no part of a cute little puppy as competition for family affection and table scraps. Unfortunately, Duffy wasn't able to get through to the rest of the family any more than I could.

I have to admit, I do get some help from the family in taking care of the dogs. They usually take care of the morning feeding. Angie is pretty good about taking them to the vet. They help out with baths. And they will, if forced to, take the dogs out to the back yard for their constitutional. The one big letdown has been the time spent with the dogs, especially the new pup. They are left to vegetate in the house way more than I care to see, so I've taken to loading them in the car and hauling them along when I go out to the airport to work on my old airplane. So far they haven't chewed the fabric off a horizontal stabilizer or anything like that, so I keep taking them along.

They love the airport! They can run wild on several acres. They meet other people and dogs that also hang out at the airport. They chase rabbits, chipmunks and mice. They get sprayed by skunks. It's great dog fun!

My only problem with taking them along is transportation. As a cost cutting measure, I sold my sedan and now drive an old two seat MGB that we've owned since 1977. There isn't enough room for both big dogs in the right seat, so they ride in the trunk, or boot as it is referred to on an English car. (My mechanic would be proud of me for tossing in that little tidbit.) It must be quite a sight going down the road. Picture my big hulking figure driving this tiny little convertible with my head sticking up over the windshield and two large dogs with their snouts stuck out either side of an open trunk snorting the fresh breeze. It must look a little like a circus act.

Now for an explanation of the aforementioned fear of the cruelty to animals folks. On these trips to the airport I've always driven slowly, 25 or 30 miles per hour at the most. Docile Duffy was never a concern, but I knew it was simply a matter of time before Thor tested the resilience of the pavement against the impact of his body. The pavement won.

It finally happened last Friday. We were returning from a quick trip out to the airport to fetch some tools when we met a kid on a bike going the other way. Apparently Thor decided he wanted to meet that kid more than he wanted to stay in the trunk, and out he went. I caught sight of him skidding along the pavement on all fours. His injuries were about like those kids get when they fall off their bicycles. Thor had some skinned up toes, a scrape under his chin and a very bruised ego. He shifted out of his usual four wheel drive, shut down his turbo charger and acted pretty sheepish for the rest of the day.

The next day he began to act a little more like his normal, wild self when he caught the tip of his tail in a wind blown storm door. The door neatly clipped off the last half inch of his tail. A hurt and very upset Thor came yipping to me for help. I had never experienced a bobbed tail injury, but I soon found out that they bleed, and bleed a lot! Before I could get his tail pinched off and soaking in some ice water, he had made a considerable mess of a deck, patio furniture and the front of a cottage.

Well, that was three days ago. For the most part Thor has just been laying low and trying to stay out of harm's way since the tail episode. He must figure somebody is out to get him, and he's probably right. For me these three days have been a bit of a respite from his wild antics. I'm sure a clipped tail and some skinned toes aren't going to keep him down long, but I'm enjoying it while I can. Just don't tell the A.S.P.C.A., okay?

Thad's Thoughts

In case you're stone deaf, the volume of opinions and the tone in which they're spoken have been elevated to new heights recently in regards to the "not quite yet put in" turning stalls on Main Street, the new downtown parking, and the changing of Broadway to one-way going south.

There has been a lot of finger pointing, harsh criticisms, accusations - you know, good ol' small town politics.

I've taken some time over the last couple of weeks to sample a plethora of opinions - some I have valued and kept and others I have discarded. All of which have helped to foster some of my own thoughts.

For as long as I've worked in Lowell, I have heard countless times how something needs to be done with M-21 west of town to slow the traffic down and to cut down on the number of accidents.

A vast majority (99 percent) said a traffic light was needed, some even thought more than one light. The snafu in that thought was in order for the City to get a light, the state (MDOT) said Lowell must either remove all parking from Main Street or have an engineer come up with a compromise so that both sides are happy.

The City Fathers had a study completed, I believe for $2,500 and from those results an alternative to no parking on Main Street was drawn up. The City decided the positives incurred by getting a light at the west end of town outweighed the negatives incurred by removing some parking on Main Street. In the eyes of many Main Street merchants, they were sold out.

It seems to me, that while the changes may very well move traffic through town (I'm not sure if it will be smoothly), and it may stop some of the craziness west of town, now City officials, no, merchants have a new problem - downtown parking. For many, store front parking doesn't exist any longer.

So what was gained? Were there other options?

City Manager Dave Pasquale and Council members will tell you the state (it's the expert) says this needs to be done. Who are we to argue? It's either this or lose all of the parking downtown.

Consider this, what would have happened if the City Fathers would have decided to not act on the state's recommendation. Yeah, kind of like a "Father like Son" scenario. The state is renown for dragging its feet and failing to move on something immediately. How long has Lowell begged for help with M-21 traffic?

So, if Lowell says no, nice offer but it will pass. Does the state come in the following day and start towing away parked cars along Main Street? I very much doubt it. There's a good chance that instead, the small town of Lowell, population 4,001 (fictional number) is forgotten about again. It continues with a traffic problem that it's lived with for years.

City council meetings return to the old glory days, where it's the council and a couple of reporters. And the merchants, well they're still wondering if anything will ever be done with the terrible traffic problem.

I may be naive, but unlike many, I really believe the City Manager and the Council thought they were acting in the best interest of Lowell. And until the system is completely installed by the state (may be waiting quite some time), I don't think a fair judgment can be made.

I think it's safe to say there are some flaws that have been detected early, again forgive my being naive, but I think the City Fathers will work to try to correct or smooth over many or most of them.

I've written before that it is easy* to sit back and throw rocks and to criticize, in this case, every move the City makes. It isn't easy being a council member, and trying to decide what's right for 4,001 diversified people and that's why most of the seats go unchallenged on election days.

I tend to think that not doing anything may have been the best move at this time. If the decision turns out to be boil on . . . . ., then so be it. I don't think that will have been the only crime (if you will) that has been committed.

The second misgiving will have been the apathy that was shown. Once the horse was out of the barn, everybody yelled, but there were numerous meetings where the traffic study was discussed. City Officials sent out flyers, posted it in the newspapers, inviting merchants and city residents to the special meetings with the engineer. I believe, I, myself, missed one of those meetings. The only merchant I saw was Duane Lambert.

I'm not pointing fingers, because I'm probably as apathetic about things as the rest.

At the last City Council meeting when asked where were they? The answer given was, "who reads the paper and/or I didn't understand."

If you want to know what's happening in Iraq you'd better listen to the news. If you want to know what's happening in Lowell, you'd better read the town paper.

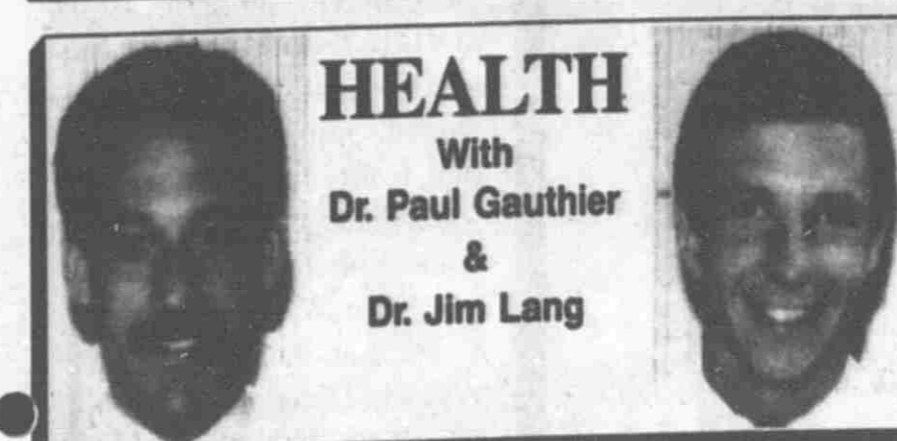

If you don't understand, refer to any level of your educational past. Every level teaches - If you don't understand something ask questions.

After reading my columns on the downtown sidewalk situation, an area resident stopped in and asked me to say something about the people that post picnic, reunion, festival and yard-sale signs on post in Fallsburg Park and fail to take them down afterwards and dispose of them properly.

Since then, I've also noticed signs on electrical poles at many intersections, that I think have been up all summer. That's one heck of a yard sale.

Well, I'm going to spend the Labor Day weekend looking for another job, so I am not a participant in Lowell's first lynching.

Anyway, anyhow, make it a safe and happy Labor Day weekend.

HEALTH With Dr. Paul Gauthier & Dr. Jim Lang

HEMORRHOIDS

Hemorrhoids are very common, affecting up to 1/2 of the adult population at one time or another. Also known as "piles", hemorrhoids are actually swollen veins of the lower rectum. They are caused by increased pressure on the veins in the lower rectum while straining during passage of stool. Therefore, hemorrhoids are more common in individuals that are constipated or have hard bowel movements. Repetitive heavy lifting can also lead to hemorrhoid formation. Because pregnancy leads to increased pressure on the rectal veins it is also a common predisposing factor. Hemorrhoids occurring during pregnancy will usually disappear spontaneously a few months after delivery.

A hemorrhoid will appear as a small lump or a protruding mass from the rectum. The most common symptom of hemorrhoids is bleeding after a bowel movement. You may notice blood on the tissue or discoloration of the toilet water. Pain and itching are also frequent symptoms although hemorrhoids are often painless. Pain usually develops when blood within the hemorrhoid clots or when internal hemorrhoids prolapse and become strangulated. Because bleeding can signify a more serious problem other than hemorrhoids it is always important to have a thorough examination prior to treatment.

Your doctor will usually perform a rectal examination and pass a sigmoidoscope into the rectum and lower colon to directly visualize any abnormality. Once a diagnosis is made treatment consists of relieving swelling and pain. You should sit in a warm bath for 20 - 30 minutes daily. Your doctor will usually prescribe a cream or suppository that will help decrease swelling. A stool softener will also be prescribed to relieve pressure during bowel movements.

If a hemorrhoid is acutely strangled or clotted, surgery may be necessary. This is usually done in the office after injection of a local anesthetic. Most commonly a small incision is made to remove the clot. Occasionally cryosurgery (freezing) or laser surgery is performed.

Prevention of hemorrhoids is possible by maintaining a diet high in fiber. Taking bulk forming agents like Metamucil or Citrucel allows for passage of large soft stools and decreases the pressure on the rectal veins. Any rectal bleeding should be brought to the attention of your doctor so that more serious conditions can be ruled out.

On June 30, 6-year-old Antwon's great-aunt and great-uncle had raised the youngster for five years before a judge ordered his return to his natural mother in May 1989. As Antwon's guardians, the aunt and uncle tried to retain custody, but Probate Court was forced to abide by the law governing limited guardianships.

Under the Probate Code, parents who willfully enter a limited guardianship have the right to end it whenever they choose.

The tragic story of Antwon has outraged many throughout Michigan. It has raised serious questions about the state's child custody laws and rekindled public awareness about child abuse.

Courts should have more discretion in deciding what is in the "best interest" of the child when assigning custody. Legislation being drafted would give courts greater authority in such cases and order a thorough investigation of parents before a child is returned home.

In addition to a periodic review of limited guardianships, concerned legislators want to relax the strict confidentiality of Children's Protective Services cases handled by the Department of Social Services (DSS).

Michigan's Department of Natural Resources (DNR) has entered into an agreement with Grand Valley State University's Water Resources Institute (WRI) to work together on efforts to protect, restore and develop the water resources of the Grand River watershed.

The June 26 agreement, signed by DNR Director David F. Hales, and Grand Valley State University (GVSU) President Arend D.

KRAUSE at the HOUSE

Under current law, DSS cannot disclose to lawmakers whether a social worker investigated child abuse charges. That means there is no way for legislative committees to investigate the child protection process.

It is time for better oversight of this important governmental function.

It is time to approve House Bill 5002, the Sexually Abused Children Bill of Rights, which I co-sponsored. The bill would give added court protection to young victims and make it easier to remove them from hostile home environments.

It also urges training in the diagnosis and treatment of sexually-abused children for Michigan judges.

Also needed is adequate funding of protective services for a growing caseload of reported child abuse and neglect.

The Florida Legislature recently authorized $79 million for additional child-protection workers, after a state man was convicted of downing his toddler stepson in a toilet following weeks of physical abuse. The child's death came two months after he was ordered returned from foster care to his young mother and stepfather.

The plight of the abused child is heartbreaking and we must move swiftly to help these defenseless victims. Our efforts should be motivated by the sentiment of Antwon Dumas' great-uncle, who said, "I want to make sure this never happens to another child."

DNR & GVSU work together to restore resources

Lubbers, provides for a coordinated implementation of water management initiatives under the Michigan Clean Water Strategy and the WRI's Grand River Watershed Project (GRWP).

The strategy includes recommendations in five key policy areas including: watershed management; pollution reduction through management or air, water and land pollution in an integrated fashion (cross-media management); computerized information management; public information and education, and funding directed toward pollution prevention activities.

Funded by a $1 million grant from the Grand Rapids Foundation, the WRI's Grand River Watershed Project (GRWP) will provide business and government leaders and environmental organizations with recommendations for actions to improve and protect water quality in the watershed. The GRWP is a comprehensive study of water quality in the 5,572 square-mile area of the Grand River watershed.

"We have been working closely with the DNR since the Grand River Watershed Project was in the planning phase. This agreement simply keeps up focused on our mutual priorities and goals," said Ronald Ward, WRI Director.

DNR Director Hales said, "The Grand is Michigan's longest river so its health influences dozens of communities. Because of the scope of the river's influence, the Grand River Watershed Project at Grand Valley has far-reaching implications for much of the watershed and the adjacent lakeshore. By working together we can use our respective resources more effectively."

The Fisheries, Land and Water Management, Recreation and Surface Water Quality Divisions, and the Office of Water Resources will represent the DNR on committees and technical panels which will be established to support the GRWP through 1991. Staff from GVSU's Water Resources Institute will be included among implementation teams formed carry out watershed management recommendations in the Michigan Clean Water Strategy.

The Land and Water Management Division of the DNR will work particularly close with the WRI, sharing information and technical assistance using geographic information systems technology. The DNR's Office of Water Resources and the WRI will also work with environmental groups to assess what type of organization might collectively reflect the interests of various communities along the Grand River in the future, and will provide advisory assistance to support the creation of such organizations. The assessment is slated to take place before December 1991.

The Water Resources Institute at GVSU was established in 1986 with GVSU faculty from biology, geology, natural resources management and other related disciplines. The goal of the WRI is to protect, preserve and enhance water quality in the Great Lakes region. For more information on the Water Resources Institute at Grand Valley State University, call 895-3749.

Rogers provides seniors with smooth ride and caring ear

Melvin Rogers is a "traveling man" 23 hours a week. However, his travels don't take him far from home. His travels cover an 11-mile circumference of Lowell in either direction.

You're more likely to have seen the Senior Neighbor's van he drives than you are Rogers. I guess you could say he is that quiet man behind the wheel.

Melvin Rogers stands with a few of his passengers prior to loading up in the van Monday morning.

Rogers travels about 23 hours per week within an 11-mile radius of Lowell. He is the quiet man behind the wheel.

For many members of the Lowell Senior Neighbors Center, Rogers is their wheel ticket to Turkeyville for a turkey dinner and a show, to Shippshewana, to see their doctor, shopping at Woodland Mall, grocery shopping, or lunch at the Senior Neighbors Center.

"We couldn't have found a better driver," says Gert, while she cleans the flower bed of its weeds.

Michigan National Bank leased out 80 vans to organizations around the state that were in need of a vehicle. "They wanted the vans to be used and not to just sit in a garage someplace," Rogers added.

Marj Snyder, then, the Senior Neighbors Director, had occasional talks with Rogers. Knowing that Rogers had retired in 1983, and was driving truck part-time for Christoff and Sons to help assist his social security,

During the summer months Rogers works on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. Al Wittenbach drives on Thursday and Friday. Rogers says Wittenbach will go back to driving a bus once school starts and he will then work five days. His traveling days start about 8:20 and end around 2:30. He drives at least 36 miles a day and on some days he drives over 100 miles.

An individual must have a C-2 (chauffeur's license) before he is able to chauffeur people around.

"This is a service I definitely enjoy. I will continue doing this as long as I am able," Rogers says. "Because

Lowell's Red Arrow soccer team has sights set on title

Lowell's soccer team participated in many close score offensive games last year. The result was a 10-4-3 record, the best the Red Arrows have ever had.

While the end result helped create a smile on the face of Red Arrow coach John Turkal, there were a few coaching detractors who said Lowell was playing not to lose, instead of playing to win.

"The reason for the detractors was our midfield game took our opponents out of their game," Turkal explains. "We ran a double stopper midfield which helped us gain possession. In the game of soccer, if a team doesn't control the midfield it isn't going to win."

Turkal added that he had the style evaluated by college coaches. "They said with the talent we have there is no reason to change. It's all smiles."

The 1990 Lowell team will make the transition to a 4-4-2 style. Turkal said the Brazilian style will help take Lowell into the main stream of soccer. "We're going to play to be competitive. If it is defensive, so be it."

The Red Arrows will return 16 lettermen from a team that finished third in the conference behind East Grand Rapids (second in the state) and Forest Hills Central (10th in the state).

Only one member of the year's varsity squad will be returning.

First-year coach asking Arrow netters for hard work & a good attitude

The first question Wendy Ackerman was confronted with by her 1990 Lowell girl's tennis team was "Are you going to coach girl's tennis longer than a year?"

It was a fair question from a team, that counting 1990, will have had four different coaches in four years.

The Goodrich High School (Wisconsin) and Hope College graduate has her sights set on more than one year.

"I was hesitant about accepting the coaching position at first, but now that I've started, I'm glad I did. It's been a lot of fun thus far," she says.

What Ackerman may not find to be so much fun is the stiff competition the O-K White Conference will present her and the 20-player team.

"I understand that the O-K White is an extremely tough tennis conference. The goal we have set in my first year is to work together hard as a team and to keep a good attitude," Ackerman said.

Ackerman said tennis is not a sport that can be played three months out of the year. "If you're going to be good at it, a player must play a lot throughout the year," Ackerman said.

Ackerman, in her first varsity coaching position, would like to help start a summer tennis program down the road. She's also realistic enough to know that it will take time and some help.

For now, she will concentrate on the summer circuit.

Long-hitting linksters shoot for league's 'Top Gun', FHC

The chase to catch perennial O-K White golf power and 1990 pre-season league favorite, Forest Hills Central, will be a long one, but a senior laden Lowell boys' golf team hopes its early start has shortened the distance between the two teams.

Many of Lowell's top golfers started preparing themselves in June as they played on the summer junior circuit. "We didn't come out to Deer Run on Aug. 13 (when high school teams may begin practice), and find a surprise (a good golf team)," Lowell coach Jack Ogle says. "The boys knew they had a chance to be a good golf team in 1990. That's why many prepared themselves this summer by playing in the junior circuit."

Lowell has never won an O-K White Conference title in golf. The last time the Red Arrows won a league title in golf was 10-11 years ago in the Tri-River.

The Class B School that sets near the Flat River, returns five seniors. Three of those five are some of Lowell's top golfers.

Jerud Joynt is Lowell's top golfer, and may be West Michigan's top golfer before the year is out. Joynt, motivated by the fact that he did not make All-Conference in his junior year, went out this summer and played his way onto the All-West Michigan team.

"Jerud has showed this summer that he has a great work ethic," Ogle said. "He's a smart and consistent player. He doesn't seem to get himself in a lot of trouble."

Joynt and most of his teammates all are able to hit the ball long. "This sounds funny, but I believe high school teams take on the character of its home golf course," Ogle explains. "Deer Run is a long course and players must hit the ball long. Visiting teams that play on shorter home courses have problems here and that's because they've been molded to shorter distance courses where you play with a wedge and a putter." The Lowell coach said that the opposite of that is also true. "We knew coming into the season we had to work on our short game."

Ogle says Joynt should average rounds of 37 in his senior year. He will be helped by fellow senior, John Borg, who is coming off a year that earned him All-Conference honors. "Borg has a very even temperament. He also has a great deal of self control. You can't teach that. It's in-born."

The Lowell coach says both Borg and junior Chris Elzinga should come in under 40. "Elzinga is the most improved in physical tools and attitude."

Lowell's fourth man will be senior Chad Laux, who is in his second year of competitive golf. "Chad is capable of low scores and will be a key to the team's success. We need consistency from Laux," Ogle said.

Ogle will also look to senior, Jason Engle; junior, Craig Coleman; and sophomore, Chad Dunn for depth. "Dunn is smooth and will definitely be a part of Lowell's golf future. Engle played the summer circuit and has worked hard to improve his game."

Other members of the team will include junior, Dave Hildenbrand; sophomore, Chris Byrne; and freshmen, Travis Gemmel and Dave Groen.

The Red Arrows have set winning the conference and qualifying for the state as goals for 1990.

Ogle smiles. "It's always fun when you have a good club. I think it will be us, Zealand and East Grand Rapids chasing Forest Hills Central."

Soccer continued...

Lowell will enjoy quality depth at the goalie position. All-Conference goal-keeper Doug Sanford returns. He will be assisted by junior Aaron Snell.

Turkal will enjoy depth at the midfield thanks to the playing efforts of Jay Thaler, striker; Jim Moore, fullback; football transfer Tim Schumaker; Travis Briggs, midfielder; Troy Addington, midfielder; and Nate Robertson, fullback.

Junior varsity players joining the varsity ranks for 1990 include Gary Parcher, Jeremy Speerstra, Bryan Patton, Kyle VanStee, Scott Southland and Alicia Ebling.

In his first two years, Turkal-coached Lowell soccer teams have gone from 8-10 to 10-4-3. He believes the 1990 Lowell team will be even better. "Our goal is to be conference champion. I think it's between East Grand Rapids, Forest Hills Central and ourselves. Dedication will decide who the conference champion is," Turkal said.

Returning at sweep will be Ryan Peel, an All-Conference performer from a year ago. Fullback will be amply filled by Ray Weigel.

Coming off an injury-riddled season of a year ago, will be Josh Andrews. Turkal believes he will provide a big boost.

What Lowell lacks in experience, Christensen hopes it makes up for with desire & traditional Red Arrow pride

There will be seven to eight underclassmen filling in voids on both the offensive and defensive sides of the ball for the Phil Christensen coached Red Arrows in 1990.

To listen to Christensen, one tends to believe that Lowell, with a roster filled with underclassmen and inexperience, will be doing well to finish better than .500.

However, one should remember, Christensen enjoys pre-season interviews about as much as a root canal.

Entering into his 11th year, 54-36, Christensen has only had two losing seasons. Those were back-to-back in 1981 (2-7) and 1982 (3-6).

His best year was in 1987 as his club finished at 8-1.

If Lowell is going to be its traditionally competitive self in the O-K White, Christensen says he needs some seniors to come through, some juniors to play like seniors, and for some underclassmen to surprise him. Is that asking for too much with less than two weeks before conference play begins?

When opponents look into the faces of the Red Arrow backfield in 1990 they will see young, untested Red Arrows with the exception of fullback Brett Knoop.

"Knoop is a legitimate ball carrier," Christensen said.

The junior will be the only player with more than occasional varsity experience from a year ago.

Other ball carriers who will share time in the backfield behind the Lowell QB include Jason Essex, Rob Fahrni, Shawn Smith and Randy Klitz. These four backs have one thing in common with the three players vying for the quarterback position - Christensen is undecided on who it will be.

Taking snaps under center will be either Troy Clinger, Mark Lyon or Randy Crawford. "Lyon and Crawford probably throw the ball better," Christensen said. "My choice will go to the quarterback I believe will do the better overall job."

Lowell's coach said the offensive line will probably average 180-200 pounds per man. "Compared to what they will be facing, that's probably small," he says. "There's a possibility that I will have three sophomores playing on the offensive line."

Christensen said Lowell will emphasize the run and will blend in some passing.

"We will do whatever we believe we can do the best," he says. Plenty of running will be done behind senior guard Rob McGee. "He too, is a legiti-mate football player," Christensen explains.

When the ball goes in the air, Red Arrow quarterbacks will look in the direction of the speedy, Shawn Smith. The junior may also be used at times in the one-back set.

"If you're looking for a positive offensively, I think we have good speed in the backfield," Christensen said.

That's funny, Christensen also believes quickness on the front line may also be a defensive strength.

The defensive line will be anchored by senior ends, John Rupp and Mike DeBold. Jason Hamilton will fill a defensive tackle spot. Lowell will return some experience at the defensive back spot with Jeff Lillie and Jeff Compton.

Todd Phillips will hold down the inside linebacker position. Lee Iteen will fill an outside linebacker void, but will first have to heal a broken thumb. "We expect he will miss the first two games," Lowell's coach explains.

Other names Christensen threw out for possible starting linebacker assignments include underclassmen Chad Lyon, Rich DePew and Brad Harrall.

Christensen said East

Lowell, strong front line, ready to defend title

Senior Tonya Czarnopis will anchor inexperienced backcourt

Funny things happen to successful programs.

Two years ago the Lowell girls' basketball team entered each contest hoping that it could win. Following a conference and district championship season in 1989, the team now expects to win.

Lowell coach Ken Akers realizes there's another lesson that comes with being successful - "Uneasy lies the crown of a champion." "When you're the defending champion, everyone wants to knock you off. That means all of our games will probably be very competitive."

Akers returns his three starting frontline players, but does not return a starting backcourt player from a year ago.

What will this mean? It means the bulk is there for a physical half court game. It means that Lowell will be working the ball inside much of the time to Erica Hackenbruch. Renee Nugent and Angie Arnett.

Gone, though, will be the speed, the trapping and the full-court pressure. "We're bigger this year but slower," Akers says. "We won't be able to press as effectively as we did last year."

Akers is concerned however, as to how effectively the bigger, stronger club will handle opponents' pressure.

The answer to that question will have to come from point guard, Tonya Czarnopis and wings Angie Brown; Vickie Videan; freshman Amy Stauffer; and exchange student, Estrella Delrio.

"It's hard to tell from practice, we'll have to see how they perform in game situations," Akers said. "I guess we will be depending a lot on Czarnopis. She really has the only true speed. Tonya also does a good job of penetrating and distributing the ball."

Other than the play of Czarnopis, Akers points to the development of the juniors as a key. "Brown played some last year. I think her confidence level will be much improved. She certainly can shoot the ball."

Akers adds that along with Brown, Stauffer, Delrio and Allchin can all shoot but must know when to shoot.

As for Hackenbruch and Nugent, Lowell's coach would like them to shoot all the time inside of five feet. "Barring injury, Hackenbruch will be a force. Nugent also stands a good chance for All-Conference honors."

Akers reports that Arnett got a clean bill of health from her doctor following knee surgery. "She's 100 percent and didn't show any signs of problems at the Northwood basketball camp this summer."

Lowell's coach believes with the big frontline, Lowell's half-court defense should be solid.

He adds that he will be able to rotate 10 players on a much deeper team. This should be helpful in case of any foul problems.

Akers has one new face that other league coaches may not be familiar with - Stauffer. "She will either be a sixth man coming off the bench or could even start some games. Stauffer has good court awareness, and anticipates well. I think both attributes will be important in game situa-

Lowell Varsity Girls' Basketball

Other faces that will help fill the roster include Jen Wieland, Betsy Nugent, Brandi

Phillips, Heather Sobie, and Julie McLain.

If Lowell was the best team in the O-K White last year, then Forest Hills Central will be the hungriest in 1990. The Rangers may also be the most talented team going into the new season. "FHC returns all of its starters," Akers said.

Wyoming Park and Zee-land are two other clubs that Akers believes will have a hand in determining a 1990 conference champion.

trate on fielding a competitive Red Arrow girls' tennis team in 1990. "It wasn't that long ago when I was playing high school tennis. I know of the pressures and anxieties the girls are feeling. I think this will help me as a coach in relating to the players," she says.

The Red Arrows will be led by junior Kathie Abel, who will play at number one singles. "She's definitely our top player. I think the strength in Abel's game is her ground strokes," Ackerman said.

The second and third singles spots will be filled by the 1990 team captains, junior, Alison Zillmer and senior, Heather Tap.

"Zillmer is probably our hardest hitter and she also has good ground strokes," Ackerman said. "Tap is the most consistent player in all areas of the game."

Filling the fourth singles spot will be net player, Nancy Wingeier. Pushing for a singles spot will be junior, Diedre DenBoer. Ackerman added that whoever doesn't fill one of those four spots, will be asked to play doubles.

Joining a penciled-in list that includes senior, Jenny Langridge; sophomore, Rachael Neile-McGrew; sophomore, Tara Sterly; and junior, Connie Colburn. Ackerman says she is still working on the team pairings.

That sixth doubles player could be filled by senior, Shannon Young or senior, Sara Kelley.

If neither of the two seniors are able to fill the void, there are a slew of underclassmen right behind. They include junior, Tara Belliel; sophomores, Sarah Scoles, Marcy Anes, Amy Gerkin, Cathy Pasquale; and freshmen, Lindsey DenBoer, Jen Idema, Sara Kropf, and Ashley Olin.

The first-year coach said evaluating other players' games has been the most difficult part of coaching thus far. "But in a short time I've learned a lot and I'm feeling much more comfortable giving out advice," she says.

"I've been encourage by what I've seen." Ackerman and the girls will play their home opener on Sept. 4 against Grand Rapids Union.

Lowell's girl and boy harriers have hearty title hopes

Hillari Kirsch & Clay VanderWarf hope to lead Harper and Arrows to 1st championship

The team goal is to challenge for the O-K White Conference title, and to have the team qualify for state competition. Quick, which team is Lowell Cross Country coach, Tom Harper referring to?

If you said the boys' team, you are wrong. If you said the girls' team, you are wrong. But, if you said both teams, you've obviously been talking to the Coach.

Harper, in his eighth year, is not a coach that deals much in hype. But, knowing, going into the regular season, that he has the league's top boy and girl harriers, even Harper's pulse races a little faster as he begins to discuss the possibilities that the 1990 season holds.

The Lowell coach has yet to field a cross country league championship team. However, he realizes there is no time like the present. The Lowell girls have finished second in each of the last two years. The boys finished fourth last year, with its O-K White Conference finish being third.

"The boys' team does not have a lot of depth, but overall I think it is the best boys' team I will have coached," Harper said.

The Red Arrow girls' team also lacks depth but the quality of the runners is solid. "If we can stay healthy we should be able to challenge for the league title again," Harper says.

If you haven't guessed it by now, Harper's top boy runner will be senior, Clay VanderWarf. In Harper's eyes, the senior is the league's top runner until someone beats him.

"Hillari Kirsch will peak in 1990," Harper said. "She's excited about the season, is in great shape, and should be the conference's top girl harrier."

Harper said both Kirsch and himself are optimistic more, Jason VanderWarf (17:30's), Tom Mull (18:00's), and David Stouffer (17:50's). "I'm counting on some big help from Stouffer. He's a gamer," Harper said.

Lowell's six and seven runners will also play a big role in the Red Arrows' success. That means quality times (19's) James Chertos and Sergio Saldivar.

"I'm looking for improvements from all the runners," Harper said. "I think along with Clay, Jason VanderWarf and David Stouffer could also make All-Conference."

Harper says Stouffer is the key, but either Chertos or Saldivar need to surface as a strong fifth runner. If not, Harper will look to some promising underclassmen - Pete Wills, Mike Wojociakowski and Eric Shelby.

Other underclassmen that may contribute include: Jon Amundsen, John Messler, Steve Kanoza and Sean Strauss.

"We're relaxed, fresh and ready, just the way we should be," Harper says. He gave assistant coach Mike Dey much of the credit for the fitness. "Dey ran a camp at Ludington State Park this summer and it's really helped the kids who attended."

The Lowell coach added that Rogers and Sparta look to be decent clubs that should challenge for top league honors.

Harper's hopeful though, that Lowell will be the class of the O-K White on two counts in 1990.

Davenport College offers dislocated worker program

For the sixth year Davenport College Career Center is offering a free Dislocated Worker Program for area residents who have been recently laid off or who are just unemployed. The Career Center is one of six statewide Davenport sites for the program sponsored by the Governor's Office for Job Training. The others are Kalamazoo, Flint, Warren, Dearborn and Lansing.

Eligible candidates for the classes to begin Oct. 1 can be enrolled in the Office Technician Program and will be trained in computer skills. The program is for people who have been unemployed and need skills to get back to work.

What makes it so popular is that it's not based on financial guidelines. You only have to show that you're unemployed.

Classes will continue through the end of May, 1991 and will carry academic credit. Davenport will also offer job placement assistance.

The program also includes basic skills testing and assessment. Participants will learn new job-seeking and job-keeping skills.

Enrollment is limited. An Information Day/Open House will be held on Friday, Sept. 21 at 10 a.m. and 1 p.m. Please call the College Monday through Friday at 245-3030 to reserve your spot.

L. E. A. P. Committee presents long range plan to Board for Arts Education

Lowell Board of Education Vice President, Chris Van-Antwerp called it a "watershed date" for arts education in the Lowell Community.

He was referring to the long-range plan that a six member committee developed for arts education within the Lowell Community. "It fits like a glove with what the curriculum committee of the Strategic Planning Committee has already begun," said fellow board member, Ray Quada.

Jim White, Curriculum Director and a Local Leadership for Education and Arts Planning (L-L-E-A-P) committee member, explained it is important that people be aware that this plan is a roadmap for improvement in education. It also serves to further enhance people's awareness of art in the community.

The committee was formed last summer as a response to a successful grant application with the Michigan Alliance for Arts Education. Lowell was one of five schools in the state that was successful with its application. Lowell is also the only community of the five that started, followed and finished a plan.

The L-L-E-A-P program gives Lowell a jump start on the forthcoming state requirements that fine arts must be offered. "It's coming down the road," said board member, Linda Beers. White adds that currently there are no roadmaps for improvements.

L-L-E-A-P Site Coordinator Gayle King said Lowell will be a model for teams across the state.

The six local members that went to Interlochen at the beginning of the year to begin the process were White, Lori Ingraham, Jack Lane, Gary Eldridge, Chris Hodges and Robin Prawdzik-White. Because of the conditions set up by the grant, each committee had to have a school board member, a school administrator, a member from a local business, an arts teacher, a community artist and a member of a local arts organization.

The plan serves only as a recommendation for things to be done and ideas on how to improve, White explained. "The goal now is to work on the plan and to see that some of its objectives get implemented."

The committee will now present its plan to the Strategic Steering Committee, and see how it ties in with what it's doing.

Following L-L-E-A-P's its presentation to the school board, the Lowell board passed the plan as a guideline for schools over the next five years. It also stated it wanted the plan passed onto the Strategic Planning Committee for review.

A fictional vision of what the committee would ideally like to see in 1995 would be a new Center for the Arts which houses two rooms for visual arts, one for graphic arts; eight independent study student studio spaces; an instrumental music room; a choral music room; eight practice rooms; a large movement and dance space and a 500-seat theatre with stage; a video and filming studio and a set construction space. Finally, all hallway space is to be assigned for gallery-like presentation of student art works (K-12).

In addition to the opening of the beautiful new Fine Arts Center, Lowell's new direction in the arts would result in the development of well-equipped arts classrooms at all three elementarys, the hiring of four full-time elementary art specialists, a K-12 movement specialist, a half-time video and film instructor and one graphic instructor.

Art - isn't that what dreams are made of?

-Letters to the Editor-

Dear Editor:

We should all support the City Council for making the hard decision to take some of the parking off Main Street. For more than fifty years it has been obvious that Lowell has had a traffic congestion problem which needed to be addressed. At last we have a council willing to start solving our problem. Much work has yet to be done. Further improvements can and must be made, to make Main Street safe and usable. We have taken the first step, thanks to our council. They stayed in the kitchen and took the heat. Thanks, David W. Miller

Jim Perdaris
I think they should do good and finish above .500. The way the Lions finished up last year, I'd hope they'd do well. I'd like to see Andre Ware run the run-and-shoot offense for the Lions. I think Ware fits in well with Sanders and the receivers. The Bears have slacked off, but I think the Packers should be decent, although I think the Vikings are the team to beat.

Ronda Patrick
The Lions will win. Not only will they finish above .500, but I believe they will play .800 ball. I've watched the Lions practice and they look like they have a lot more confidence. I think they can win with Peete. The Lions don't need Ware. The Lions have a 5-foot-4 rookie named Davis Smith, he's slippery and cute to watch. I think the Vikings will be their stiffest challenge in the division. The Bears won't be any problem.

Jack Thomet
The Lions won't embarrass themselves. With a couple of breaks, I think Detroit can win the division. I believe the Lions have a strong coaching staff and the players have adapted to the run-and-shoot offense. The Lions will win the division, they have confidence. I think Peete should be their quarterback. Minnesota will be their stiffest divisional competitor.

Lee Glamery
The Lions should do a lot better this year. Detroit will finish above .500 and will finish close to the top in their division. I don't think the lions will finish first. They have some good young players who need time to adjust to the professional ranks. Next year or the year after I think Detroit could reach the Super Bowl.

Eleanor Perry
The Lions will do well. My son says so. They drafted some good players. I think the Lions will finish over .500. I'd like to see the Lions sign Ware, and then I'd like to see Ware start at quarterback. I think the Vikings will be their toughest competition.

Joann Childs
The Lions will do great. I think they will finish above .500. Detroit has confidence and some real good young players. I think Peete should start at quarterback. He's better than Galliano. Minnesota will provide Detroit with its toughest competition in the Central Division.

Eric Combs
I believe the Lions will win 15 of their 17 games. They will win the division and have a shot at the Super Bowl. Chicago will be their toughest opponent within the division. I want Rodney Peete to start at quarterback.

Frank Renegar
I believe the Lions will do well. If they don't run Barry Sanders all the time they should finish above the .500 mark. Coach Wayne Fontes has pulled them together as a team. I like that he shows some emotion. The Lions are a lot more exciting than the Tigers.

MADD sponsors "Drive For Life"

As a part of the fourth annual Drive for Life -- a national awareness campaign to reduce alcohol-related traffic crashes -- Jack Hughes, Vice-President of MADD/Kent County Chapter is asking all residents to join Mothers Against Drunk Driving and pledge to drive sober this holiday weekend and to continue that pledge throughout the year.

"According to last year's statistics, we will lose nearly 23,000 men, women and children to drunk driving again this year," says Hughes. "Among those who will be people we know and people we love, unless we do more than stand by and hope it doesn't happen to ourselves or our loved ones. Drunk driving crashes happen to two out of every five Americans. Unless we do something now, sooner or later those will be people we know."

"In 1989 in Michigan alone, over the Labor Day weekend, there were 29 fatalities. Of those 15 were alcohol-related, 51.7 percent," continues Hughes. "A seldom used statistic in the drinking and driving tragedies is the number of persons who suffer serious injuries in alcohol-related crashes. The numbers are astronomical for 1989. There were 540,000 (over one-half million) men, women and children whose bodies were crippled, maimed and deformed for the remainder of their lives because someone chose to drink and drive."

"While the Drive for Life program focuses on Labor Day weekend, its aim is a long-term change in public attitude. THIS IS A CALL TO ACTION."

Drive for Life asks all Americans to pledge to be responsible by driving sober, and encouraging others to do the same, on Labor Day weekend and throughout the year. Drivers are also asked to drive WITH THEIR HEADLIGHTS ON in a show of support and in remembrance of those people senselessly killed and injured in drinking and driving crashes.

Camp Tamarack offers students education in a fun setting

On Sept. 19, 20, and 21, 160 Lowell Bushnell and Runciman fifth-graders will have an opportunity to participate in and perform civilian tasks of the 1850's.

The outdoor educational experience will take lessons from their science and history books and bring them to life. The fifth-graders will spend three days at Camp Tamarack in Ortonville, 10 minutes south of Flint.

Rob Stevens, a camp organizer, got the approval of the Lowell Board of Education at the August meeting, to commit to a three-day camping trip in September.

Throughout last spring and the summer, Stevens with the help of other teachers, parents and volunteers have raised $9,000 through fund raisers, family sponsorships and business donations.

The trip will cost $80 per student, bringing the total cost to approximately $12,000. Lowell Superintendent, Fritz Esch told Stevens that being $2,600 short should not stop him and other camp organizers from making a three-day commitment.

Along with the 160 students, 16 Lowell teachers will be used as educational staff counselors. Two principals will also make the trip. "Many schools use high school seniors as counselors, but we've decided to go strictly with educational staff," Stevens said.

He adds that the camp offers 40-60 classes for students and instructors for the classes. "However, we've decided to use some of our own staff for some of the classes." An example of this would be high school science teacher

Bob Garcia. He will take the opportunity to teach pond study to the fifth-grade students.

The camp will provide students with an opportunity to work on problem solving skills and cooperative problem solving with fellow students.

Stevens says it will give the fifth-grade staff an opportunity to work with kids in a different setting. "We are very likely to see skills in students that a classroom setting may not bring out," Stevens said. "The camp will also build upon teacher-student communication. It's a good opportunity to build some rapport."

Camp Tamarack was chosen because it has a professionally run staff year around and offers a variety of classes. Each cabin holds 12 people, has its own bathroom, according to Stevens.

Eventually the camp organizers would like to extend the camp to four days. Stevens adds that they would like to eventually Alto to join them. Alto already offers a two-day camp program to its students in the spring.

"When we get back from the camp, we will sit down and evaluate what happened. We will also have more time to start planning for next year," Stevens explains.

Five buses will be used to transport the students, teachers and equipment.

"I am very appreciative of the help we've received from parents and volunteers in fund raising and in getting a camp organized," Stevens said.
