In pursuit of bids, Council catches wrath of some and loses LL&P Board member

Lowell City Council's charge to pursue bids on the sale of Lowell Cable has raised the concern of some, the ire of others and has left the Lowell Light and Power Board one appointed member short.

"As long as the money is used for something new and innovative and it takes the City of Lowell to a new level, I don't have a problem with selling the cable company," said Ray Quada who resigned from the Power Board after hearing of the news. "The reason I resigned from the Lowell Light and Power Board is I did not feel it was appropriate for the appointed Board to read about the council's decision in the paper. I don't believe that's an appropriate way to treat or use an appointed board."

The former Lowell Light and Power board member and city manager said he'd favor using the money from the sale of cable (if it's sold) for a waste to water energy power system. "If the community is going to benefit and the circumstances are right," Quada said. "I'd oppose using the money for a new city hall with council names imprinted on brick."

Pasquale believes the concern and sometimes ire of some people in the community is premature. "Nobody has ever said the city is ready to sell the cable system," Pasquale explains. "This is just a process in reviewing options. This means there is still the option to do nothing."

The Lowell City Manager said it is prudent business practice to find the value of a product others have expressed an interest in. "People need to realize the city did not go out looking for buyers. Private firms have come to us."

Quada explained that determining the worth of a service like cable is not done by just merely putting it out on the market to get bids.

A Lowell business merchant who wished not to be identified in the article, said he thought the cable system should be sold. "I've always been disappointed in Lowell Cable because it has refused to pursue the possibilities that the Lowell access channel presents. All the Board has ever done is buy HBO and other services so it can make an extra 50 cents per customer a month."

The merchant continued, "Caledonia is a perfect example of how beneficial a local public access station can be when used right. This is something that could benefit everyone, especially the elderly and the students."

Jerry Patton, Patton-JRB Agency, is worried about what happens to Lowell when you start removing services that have helped to give the community individuality. "When that begins to happen, the City loses its pride and Lowell becomes just another suburb of Grand Rapids," Patton says.

He adds that once the cable system is gone, it can never come back. Patton believes it needs to be clarified why cable is in Lowell. "Is it to make money or is it to serve the people," he says.

One of the concerns raised by Lowell's City Council is keeping up with technology and its cost. Quada believes that's a weak argument. Patton explains that the costs are going to be there whether Lowell owns the cable company or a firm outside the city does. "If the customer is going to pay for it anyhow, why not pay the City?" he says.

Another area of concern Pasquale says the council has discussed is government regulations. "There's a money value to all of those regulations sent to us by our government," he said. "The council is just trying to gain information. All points mentioned by the public will go into the thought process."

Charlie Bernard, owner of Bernard True Value Hardware, believes it would be a real shame for the city to opt for UA Cable or something similar. "The customers would pay for it," he said. "What it does is make Lowell a me-too-ism as opposed to a creative self-contained opportunity. As for the technology concern, you don't eliminate your police department because it's in need of more expensive and sophisticated radar equipment."

Bernard also suggested that Lowell Cable is missing an opportunity by not using the access cable station. "I believe some advertising revenue could be created through the access station," he said.

Opportunity seems to be the key word in the question that faces the council. Which is greater? The untapped opportunity that the future of cable holds or the untapped opportunity that the sale of Lowell cable offers?

Lowell Township hires Sani Sweep to vacuum leaves at Eastgate

Lowell Township Supervisor John Timpson said the Township will foot the bill for a trial vacuuming run that he hopes will eradicate the leaf burning situation at Eastgate.

Lowell Township contracted an agreement with SaniSweep out of Muskegon to do a trial leaf vacuuming run on Nov. 1.

The trial run will cost Lowell Township $95 an hour for the truck and the two men running the unit. SaniSweep said it will take a day to complete the vacuuming.

"The Township doesn't charge the homeowners to chlorinate the roads, so it has been decided not to charge the property owners for the vacuuming of leaves," Timpson said.

The Lowell Township Supervisor is asking that Eastgate residents keep parked cars off the streets and in their driveways on Thursday, Nov. 1 so that the leaves may be removed.

"I'm hopeful this will cut down on the amount of leaf burning residents do in Eastgate," Timpson said. "Permits are needed to burn leaves. They must be picked up at the Lowell Fire Station. There will be a limited amount of permits distributed."

Who's Been Lying?

Ed Zigmont says he hasn't been lying. The Lowell man, of 1280 Grand River Drive, east of the upper bridge, has been planting egg plant for a number of years, but never has one had a snout like this before.

New Lowell Postmaster has 14 years with Post Office

Jim Hill, Grand Rapids Division Controller, swears in Sylvia Taylor, middle, as the new Lowell Postmaster. Taylor's husband, Jim, stands to her right.

After spending eight years in the "Show Me" state as a station and branch operations manager, Sylvia Taylor returns to her home state of Michigan with knowledge she hopes will make her a successful Postmaster at Lowell.

Taylor succeeds former Postmaster Charles Doyle, who retired June 1. In the interim, Grand Rapids Supervisor, delivery and collection William Myers has been officer-in-charge.

Taylor's installation ceremonies were held Friday at the Lowell Post Office. Employees, family, area residents and business people were in attendance.

The Clare native first started her post office journey in Lansing in 1976. From there, she moved on to Hicksville, New York before taking a job in Kansas City for eight years.

"I believe my background in mail processing and delivery will help in my effort to get Lowell ready for automation," Taylor said. The new Lowell Postmaster says automation should arrive in the Lowell office within five years.

"I'm looking forward to having much more contact with the community so that I can help it become more aware of the services the post office has to offer," she says. "I think one of the benefits Lowell offers, which was also true of Kansas City, is the strong business base for its size."

Taylor said bar coding/automation will not be the main goal of just the Lowell branch over the next five years, but of all United States Post Offices.

TOWN TALK

Does the City have the right to decide what's appropriate and obscene in regards to what's aired on the local access cable channel?

Jay VanAntwerp
 It is a public access channel and should be open for its use. If the City is responsible for what's aired then yes, it should make the decision if the programming is appropriate or obscene.

Dick Rutherford
 I believe the decision should be left up to the people of Lowell. After all, they are the ones paying for the system. If they don't mind, then the tape should be aired.

Marcia Ebling
 Sure, the city should be able to review the tape and say what's appropriate and what's obscene. The decision should be left up to the cable board.

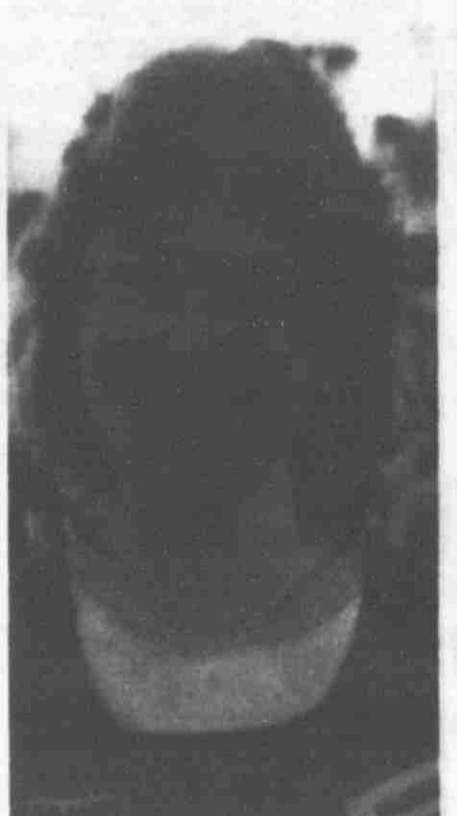

Gail Dempsey
 I think it should be put back on the air. This is censorship. I'd watch it to see what it is all about.

Royal Streicher
 I don't think they should pull it off the air. If people don't want to watch it they can turn the station. I believe what they are doing is censorship, but this isn't the first case of it. It's practiced quite often everywhere. I watch it. Heck, I may learn something.

Marion Rutherford
 I believe the appointed cable board should decide. I guess I believe more censorship should be applied both at the local and national level. I believe this may be infringing on people's rights, but I think the basic right of speech and print gets carried away into a grey area. It's misused.

Debbie Phillips
 I do not believe it should air on local cable access channels. Let's leave this for the Sunday morning religious shows.

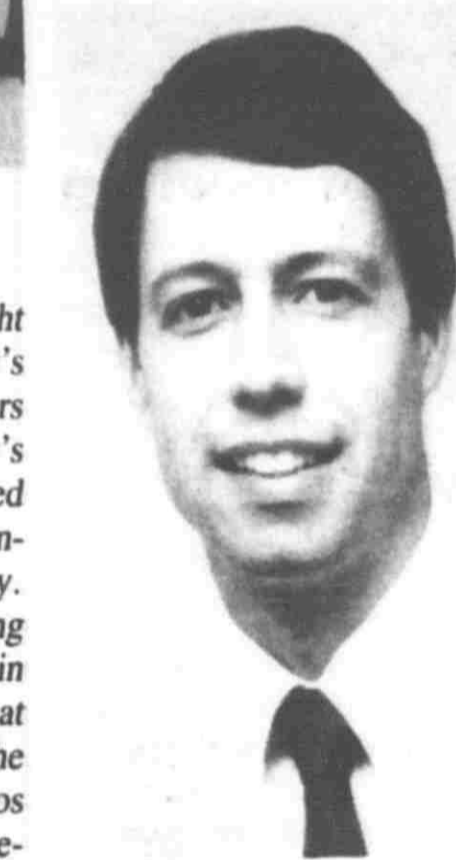

Vilma Abby
 I think the city has the right to make that decision. That's why we have commissioners and city officials. I think it's part of their job and they need to do what's in the best interest of the community. People say this is infringing on their rights, but people in the U.S. don't know what freedom means. I lived in the Philippines under Marcos law, believe me, this is freedom. People are over-reacting.

VanAntwerp cited as 1990 Achievement Award winner in Writing

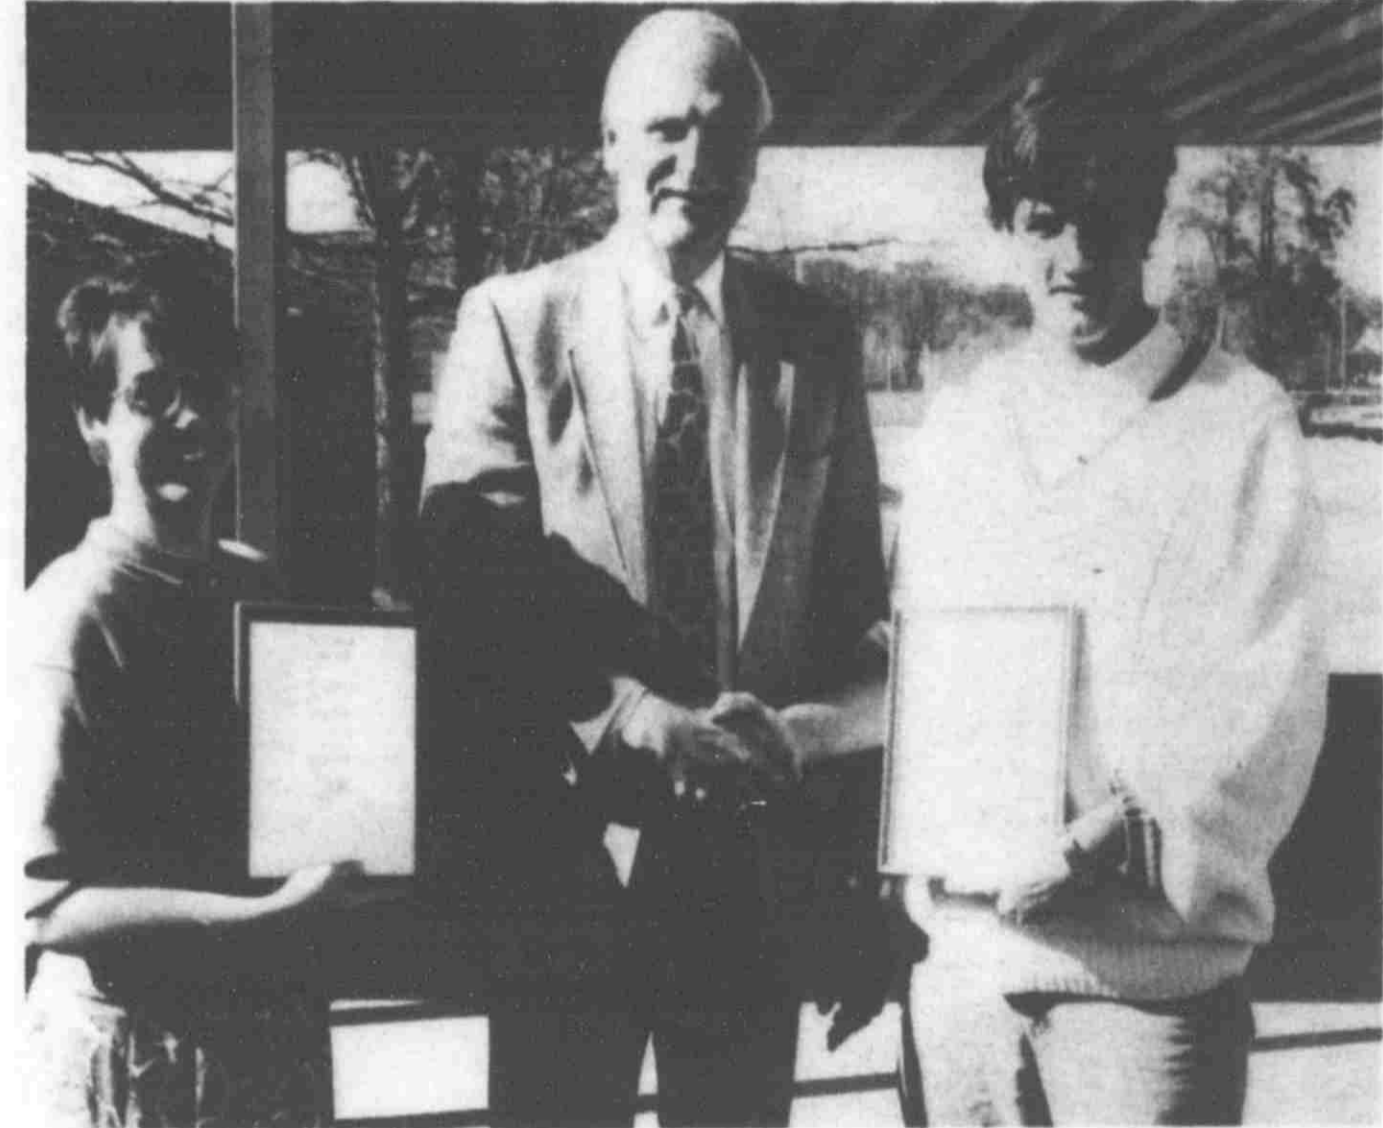

For only the third time in 18 years, Lowell High School has an Achievement Awards Winner in Writing. Jay VanAntwerp was one of over 6,000 students who were nominated last January by their English teachers for the NCTE Achievement Awards in Writing. Each nominee submitted a sample of his/her best writing and an impromptu essay. These compositions were evaluated by state judging teams of both high school and college teachers. Approximately 700 winners are selected each year to represent high schools in all 50 states, the District of Columbia, and American Schools Abroad.

The Council recommends those cited, now seniors, for college scholarships in 1991 should they need assistance. Names of the students are sent to admissions officers and English department chairpersons at U.S. two- and four-year colleges and universities.

The National Council of Teachers of English is a professional organization of individual and institutional members at all levels of instruction. Its goal is to increase the effectiveness of the teaching of English language and literature in the nation's schools and colleges.

Only about 13 percent of the students nominated for writing awards are cited. VanAntwerp, the son of Chris and Jill VanAntwerp, received a certificate of commendation for his work. A certificate was also included for the Lowell English department.

Jim DeWeerd, Lowell High School Principal, middle, presents a plaque to Jay VanAntwerp, right, for being cited as a winner of the 1990 Achievement Awards in Writing. Jill VanAntwerp, left, also accepts an award for the LHS English Department.

Was aviator Amelia Earhart murdered?

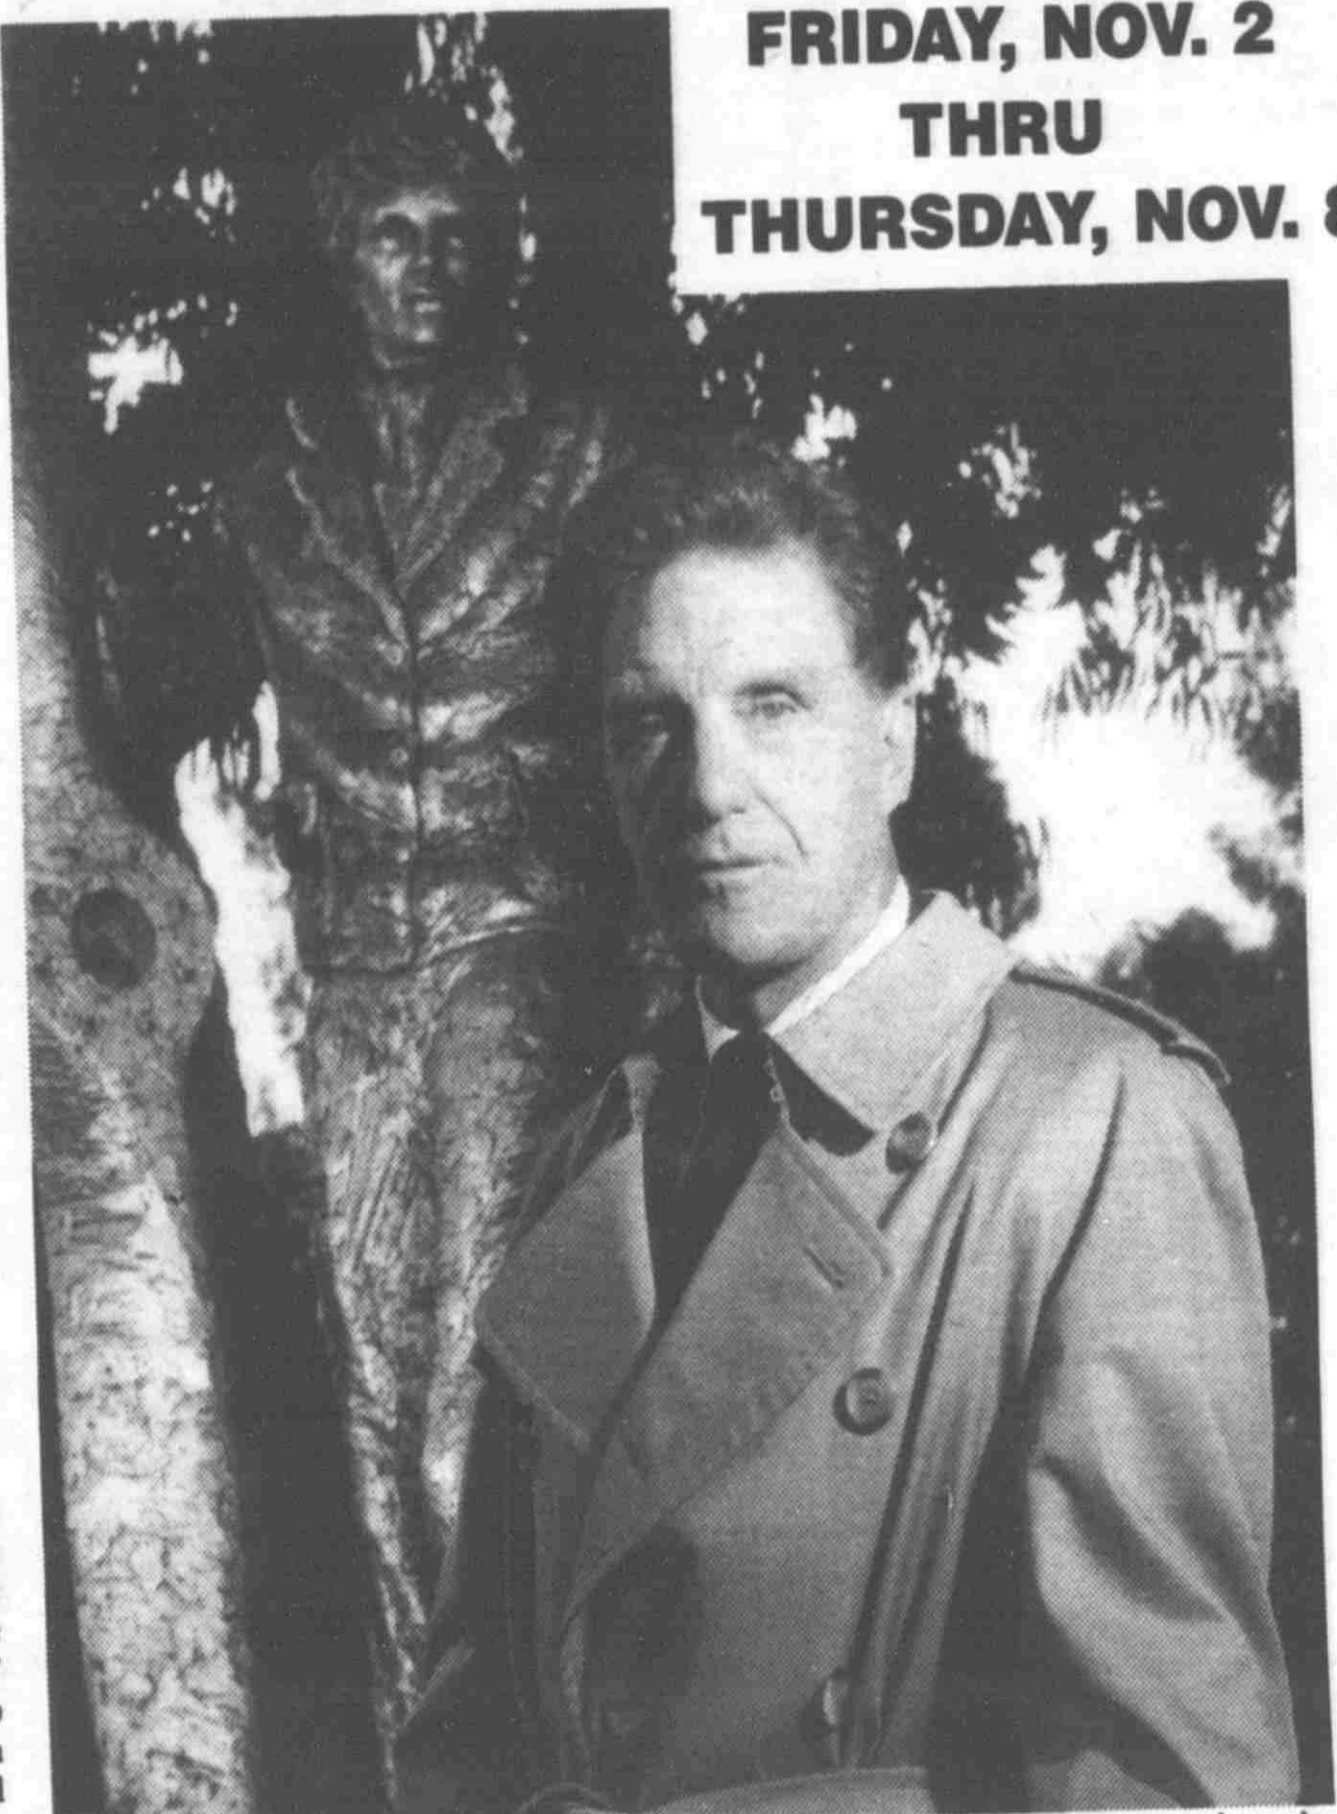

New evidence reopens mystery

By Amy Schmidt
On July 2, 1937, Amelia Earhart and her navigator, Fred Noonan, set out on the final leg of her historic flight around the world. They were never seen again.

For decades researchers have investigated the disappearance. Psychics have tried to pinpoint her location. Now, more than 50 years later, a Texas man claims he has new evidence that Earhart was murdered. His findings will be presented during a special 30-minute segment of Unsolved Mysteries, airing Wednesday, Nov. 7, on NBC.

It is commonly believed that Earhart and Noonan ran out of fuel on their last leg from New Guinea to Howland Island, a tiny U.S. outpost. Even a slight miscalculation of direction on the 2,550-mile flight would have left them seriously off-course and stranded over the Pacific.

After an uneventful 18-hour flight, Earhart radioed the Coast Guard cutter Itasca stationed near Howland Island: "We must be on you, but cannot see you. Gas is running low, been unable to reach you by radio... We are flying at 1,000 feet." Earhart was not picking up any transmissions from Itasca. At 8:47 a.m. her final message was received: "Please stay on 3105 (signal)... Do not hear you on 6210. Maintain on 3105."

NBC's top-rated Unsolved Mysteries examines new evidence that points toward murder in the disappearance of Amelia Earhart. Earhart and her navigator have been missing since their historic 1937 flight around the world. Robert Stack hosts, Wednesday.

Reportedly, Earhart and Noonan were shot down, incarcerated in remote Garapan Prison and interrogated daily. Brennan's most dramatic evidence, however, is his "eyewitness to the execution" and his unearthing of Amelia Earhart's blindfold.

Does Unsolved Mysteries host Robert Stack believe the theory? "It's open-ended... I don't even know how electricity works. That's an unsolved mystery to me," he laughed. The prominent host said he does not lie awake nights wondering about these things, "But by the same token, I don't say anything can't happen. Expect the unexpected." Lowell harriers statebound:

When shall finishing second be first?
When, for the first time since joining the O-K White Conference, both the girls and boys cross country teams qualified for the Class B high school state meet.
The Red Arrow harriers did so by finishing second in the Class B Regional at DeWitt on Saturday.
Both clubs ran their best team races of the year as they reserved a spot on the 24-team state roster Saturday in Fenton at the rolling Tyrone Hills Golf Course.

Lowell boy and girl cross country teams join elite group of 24 at state meet

David Stouffer (seventh) ran the whole race as a member of the top 10 as he posted an impressive mark of 17:07. Jesse Davidson (12th) was Lowell's third runner home, finishing in a time of 17:12.
'With a quarter-mile to go Jesse went by four runners who were ahead of him,' Harper explained.
The boys' regional meet was a two team race between Linden and Lowell. Haslett by finishing third also qualified for the state meet, but tallied 164 points, 80 points behind Lowell.
Oliver finished fifth, a little less than a minute behind Kirsch, breaking the tape at 20:07.
Lowell placed three girls in the top 20.
The third and final team joining Mason and Lowell as a state qualifier was Alma (100). The regional meet was basically a three-team meet. Cheasing finished a distant fourth with a total of 155. Ionia was fifth with 213 points. Belding was 17th with 413.
'Mason is a good club and should place well at the state meet,' Harper said.
In the boys' race, Red Arrow ace, Clay VanderWarf placed fourth overall in a time of 16:47. VanderWarf was fifth with 100 yards to go, until overtaking Alma's Matt Gager.

Alma beat us earlier in the year in an invitational at DeWitt," Harper said. The Red Arrows beat Alma easily as the Panthers were fifth with 185 points. Lansing Catholic Central was fourth at 179.
Lowell placed three of its runners in the top 20.
How other O-K White teams fared?
In the Class A regional at Big Rapids, O-K White boys' champion, Forest Hills Central finished seventh. The Ranger girls, second in the O-K White placed fourth.
At the Class B boys' regional at Gun Lake, Zealand was fifth; Rogers placed 11th; Sparta was 12th; EGR was 15th; Wyoming Park was 17th; and Northview finished 18th.
In the Class B girls' regional at Gun Lake, EGR was second; Northview placed seventh; Rogers was 10th; and Sparta was 13th.
The Red Arrow girls state meet will start at 11:40 a.m. and the boys' race will begin at 1:40 p.m.

Sara Lesky ran well for Lowell in the Class B regional at DeWitt.

It wasn't pretty, but Lowell defeated the 'Cats, 45-32

The mood of Lowell girls' basketball coach Ken Akers after the Northview game on Thursday reflected his team's play - UGLY.

The Red Arrows struggled for the better part of four quarters, before pulling away from a scrappy Wildcat team, posting a 45-32 victory.

"We won the game by 13 points, but I'm not happy with the way we played," Akers groaned. "The girls did not come into the gym tonight mentally prepared to play this game. They need to learn how to do that."

Northview shot out to an early 7-0 lead. Lowell did get its first basket until Erica Hackenbruch hit a short jumper in the lane with 1:05 to play in the first quarter.

The Red Arrows recovered a little, as they pulled to within two at halftime 19-17. Lowell's coach was so disturbed with the first half play, he pulled his starters with a little more than two minutes to play in the second quarter.

"When a team isn't mentally ready for a game, a club like Northview who has a couple quality players in Overbeck and Marlowe can create a lot of problems," Akers said.

Lowell's victory was anchored by its senior center, Hackenbruch. She netted 16 points and cleared the glass for 12 rebounds. She was also responsible for six steals. "The key of the game was Hackenbruch's steals on consecutive Northview third quarter trips down the floor," Akers said.

Angie Arnett was the only Red Arrow in double figures as she tallied 14 points. Amy Stauffer added six.

Lowell outscored Northview 14-8 in the third quarter and 14-5 in the final stanza.

The Red Arrows raced to a 19-3 first-quarter lead and never heard footsteps as it dominated play against the out-manned Pioneers of East Grand Rapids in posting a 54-30 win.

"I was pleased with the effort our girls gave," Akers said. "They played hard throughout the contest, which isn't always easy when a team is so far ahead."

The shining star of the game came from the Lowell bench. Junior Jenny Wieland came off the Red Arrow pine and netted a team-high 12 points on an evening where 11 players contributed. Wieland was 6-of-8 from the floor. "Wieland has really come around for us. Tonight, she had the hot hand," Akers said. She also boarded five rebounds and added two steals.

Lowell led by as many as 26 points, 54-28 late in the game. "I was happy with the way our second seven played. They moved the ball around and I thought played pretty good defense," Lowell's coach said.

Tanya Czarnopis followed Wieland with 11 points and had 10 steals. Estrella Calvo netted eight while Hackenbruch

Athletes of the Week

JEN WIELAND - Lowell's junior came off the bench to score a team-high 12 points against East Grand Rapids in the Red Arrow victory. "Jen has been steadily improving all season long. Because of that her playing time has increased," Lowell basketball coach Ken Akers said. "She's a hard worker and a great all-around kid." This is Wieland's first year on the varsity and it is her third year of basketball. "Jen will be a big key for us next year."

DAVID STOFFER - David Stouffer started the year as Lowell's number four runner, but his hard work and determination has pushed him up into the number two spot behind Clay VanderWarf toward season's end. "David has run in the top ten in both the conference meet and in the regional," Lowell coach Tom Harper said. "He has been an anchor for us in the last two races."

ANDY WILLIAMSON - In his second year on the varsity, Williamson has blossomed into a key figure on the district champion Red Arrow soccer team. His big game was against Northview when the senior scored two goals. "Williamson has been a pleasant surprise. I'm not sure anyone expected him to play as well as he has," Lowell coach John Turkal said.

Red Arrows bring home 1st district soccer crown

For the first time in the school's soccer history, Lowell can call itself a district champion.

Saturday night at Middleville, Lowell was crowned District 28 champion following its 1-0 win over Hastings.

The Saxons were the same club that that ended Lowell drive for a district title last year.

The victory sets up a pre-regional matchup with Spring Lake on Wednesday, Oct. 31 (today) in Sparta at 7 p.m.

"We aren't the prettiest team, but our boys have learned what it means to be a winning team," Lowell coach John Turkal said.

From the coach's perspective, a key to the victory was the leadership by his midfielders. "Jason White, Brian Ray, Andy Williamson, Andy Quada and Tim Thuston were outstanding in running the Red Arrow transition game at midfield," Turkal said.

Turkal also felt playing in the wind helped his club. "We practice daily on Gee Drive and the wind is blowing 50 percent of the time," he says. "I also thought our team's mental toughness and determination played a pivotal factor."

Playing in the cold and, at times, winds that gusted up to 30 miles an hour, the Red Arrows' quickness enabled them to run down the Saxon offense, stopping Hastings' penetration outside the defensive third of the midfield.

The Red Arrows' goal was scored by junior, Jon Kohler, on an arching shot from 30 yards out from left midfield which went over Hastings' goalie, Brian Ketchum's outstretched hands.

"Jon has worked many hours after practice on developing an arching shot," Turkal said. "Tonight, it paid off." "Earlier in the season Kohler would have passed up the shot."

With 10 minutes left in the game, Hastings went with an all out offensive unit. Lowell answered by pulling its left striker and by using Troy Addington in a six-man midfield.

The district championship victory improved Lowell's mark to 15-2-2.

Lowell's 5-1 district win over Middleville last Wednesday earned the Arrows a spot in the district final with Hastings last Saturday.

The smaller Lowell squad used its speed to kill off the larger Trojan squad. Lowell's offense dominated Middleville's defense as it beat the Trojans to the spot all night.

"We were simply too strong for Middleville," said Lowell soccer coach John Turkal.

Jason White opened the scoring early in the first half as he beat a diving Middleville goalie. The Trojans' Steve VanDuine answered with a long shot that beat Arrow goal Aaron Snell.

Defensively Tim Thuston and Jay VanAntwerp led the Lowell charge. Lowell's second goal came on a beauty of a pass from Ray Weigel to Andy Williamson, giving the Red Arrows a 2-1 lead.

Jason White's second goal of the game before halftime extended Lowell's lead to 3-1.

The second half saw Lowell get a second goal from Williamson and Brian Ray celebrated his 18th birthday by booting in Lowell fifth and final goal of the game.

The win improved Lowell's record to 14-2-2. The Red Arrows outshot Middleville 25-9. The Red Arrows had four corner kicks while Middleville didn't have one. The Trojans recorded 16 saves and Lowell tallied nine.

Prior to the district game, Lowell went after the conference championship as it finished a game with Zeeland that was postponed from earlier in the year with 15 minutes to play.

Zeeland, playing the role of spoiler, packed their goal and prevented Lowell from scoring as the two teams finished in a 1-1 tie. The tie gave Forest Hills Central the league championship.

"Zeeland made the correct defensive maneuver and we just missed on a few of our opportunities," Turkal said.

For Zeeland, 2-6-1 in the conference, the tie salvaged what has been a disappointing season.

Lowell finished at 6-2-2 in the conference, a half game behind Forest Hills Central, 7-2-1.

Bill Potter, a 1950 Lowell graduate, took second place in the World Senior Games World Racquetball Tournament held in St. George, Utah recently.

Potter finishes second at World Senior Raquetball tourney in Utah

William Potter, son of played Joe Beardsley of Sacramento, Ca (16-0) in the finals. Beardsley defeated Potter 11/10, 9-11, 11/10 to win the World Senior title.

Potter presently lives in Iron Mountain, MI. He took ninth in last year's National Tour in Albuquerque, NM.

Halloween "Trick-or-Treat" safety guidelines

Thousands of tiny "ghosts and goblins" are gearing up to beg door-to-door for treats in Michigan this Halloween. A little education can make it a safe and enjoyable experience.

"Halloween is a magical holiday for children, but it can also present some serious dangers," said AAA Michigan Community Safety Services manager Robert V. Cullen. "Every year, countless youngsters nationwide are injured through falls, car accidents and harmful candy--injuries that can be prevented by taking safety precautions."

Last year in Michigan, state police reported one death occurred when a trick-or-treater crossed a dark road, tripped and was struck by a motorist. Several incidents of children eating tainted candy also occur every year in the state.

As part of its "Light Up A Life" program, AAA Michigan has developed safety tips to ensure a safe Halloween (Oct. 31). Safety tip cards are available to the public at all AAA area branches. Tips include:

Trick-or-Treaters Safety Tips

- Trick-or-treat while it is still light outside.
- Wear bright costumes with reflective paint or tape and short enough to prevent tripping.
- Wear face make-up instead of a mask.
- Only visit homes with porch lights on. Never enter a stranger's home.
- Carry a flashlight to light the way and to alert motorists.
- Cross streets at corners and look all ways before stepping off a curb. Do not cross between parked cars or in the middle of the block.
- If there is no sidewalk, walk facing traffic, well off the road.
- Adults should chaperone young children on their Halloween rounds and inspect candy before it is eaten.

Alto artist's work on display at LAAC Gallery

Marianne Wysocki doesn't "do lunch." Instead the acrylic artist, whose work can be viewed at the Lowell Area Arts Council Gallery through Nov. 10, opts to "share moments."

"When I'm through with a piece of work, I invite other artists over to critique my work. I refer to it as 'sharing moments.'" Wysocki explains.

The Alto painter's works on display at the Lowell Gallery encompass moments of Wysocki's past through bright acrylic colors, prisma pencils, swatches of textured materials, and bits and pieces of old drawings and paintings from decorative realism to abstract. "The motifs in my work are personal expressions of my evolving character. They encompass both the past and present, keeping me in touch with my history," Wysocki said. "Many people in my family are/were involved with fishing, including aunts, uncles and cousins. From these memories I draw together thoughts of my personal history."

Her work has helped Wysocki deal with the incredible hurt she and her family has experienced through the loss of her brother. The art work on display at the gallery reflects an introspective search for Wysocki's family roots, according to the Alto artist.

"The family type portraits have served as part of the grief process for me," Wysocki says. The dated family pictures which she has recaptured through high gloss acrylic paint and other mediums are shared, treasured moments of her past.

Those moments include pictures of her whippet dog "Ziggy" lying on the couch; a bowl with an assorted number of fish and hooks; her grandmother sitting on the couch talking with a friend; and her mother and aunts standing out in the kitchen. "Ziggy put me in tune with being at home with my children. His symbolism has helped me touch base with who I am and what I am about," Wysocki says. I grew up with fish. To me, they are a symbol of growing up with my family," she adds. "The picture of my mother and my aunts in the kitchen reminds me about women in the 1950's and their place in the home and society and of the choices they had."

Not unlike other artists, Wysocki's work also has contrast. As you walk into the Gallery, before noticing the decorative realism hanging on the left, one's eyes are taken immediately to the mystifying abstract piece of work hanging on the north wall. Abstract is wonderful in that it stimulates and provokes different images and thoughts for each individual. "The painting is not trying to tell anyone anything. It's something I experienced," Wysocki explains. The abstract painting is entitled "Moon Bark on Silver Lake," and recaptures a moment of time she spent on Silver Lake. "I enjoy the mystery that surrounds abstract paintings," Wysocki says.

Wysocki has been showing her work since 1986. Work that she says is ever changing. When the Alto artist first started, she pieced together life size sculptures. She quit that for acrylic painting and today she has added making her own frames. "She paints frames as a means to unite both the painting and frame, bringing the two together as one cohesive whole." "It is a way for me to introduce two paintings into one piece and also to add a bit more information to the viewer," Wysocki explains. "A frame is just as important as the interior painting. I enjoy using wood frames because of the warmth, versatility and workable surface."

Wysocki would someday like to work on landscapes. However, first she will finish the healing process of painting family members. "My work has helped the incredible hurt and pain experienced by death become a celebration of life," Wysocki said. Following her show at the Lowell Area Arts Gallery, Wysocki will be participating in a Christmas Show on Dec. 1 and 2 at the Race Street Gallery in Grand Rapids, as she continues to bring together familiar objects. "I am stimulated to paint the familiar objects around me. While I rarely know the outcome of my paintings, I recognize an important motive for the outcome of my work: the desire to paint an image someone would like to look at," Wysocki concludes.

Moxley reviews master plan with Board of Education

Lowell Superintendent Fritz Esch smiles as he leans back in his chair and remembers that it was three years ago almost to the day (Oct. 27) that the Strategic Planning Committee was implemented.

The committee was formed to raise the prospect of correcting problems that the not-so-distant future may hold.

During this time, the Chairman of the Strategic Planning Steering Committee, Ray Quada, explained that it is difficult to see tomorrow's problems and impossible to predict, but through historical and demographic data it may provide a procedure to look at them.

Three years have since passed, and today, the Lowell School administration, staff and the community are preparing site development plans as they get ready to embark on the construction of facilities which reflect the school's future needs.

Many of the ideas, thoughts and problems the Strategic Planning Committee started addressing three years ago will become a reality. "We did not know three years ago that the need for a new high school and renovations on the existing buildings would be necessary this soon," Esch said. However, following a community study and two student enrollment projection studies (in Dec. of 1988 and February of 1989) the school learned of the future enrollment crunch that the future held.

On Thursday, the Lowell Board of Education approved the owner/architect agreement with WBCD. In that meeting, Ralph Moxley reviewed the 1990 $29,998 million Bond Issue Master Schedule.

The steps for the new $25.55 million High School; the $547,000 community service center project (renovation of Riverside); the $3.54 million middle school (construction and renovation work at the existing high school); the $2.55 million elementary school (renovation work at Runciman); and the $892,000 renovation work scheduled for Bushnell and Alto Schools are all expected to be completed by the start of 1993-94 school year.

It should be noted that these figures total more than the $29,998 million bond figure. Lowell's superintendent said the school projects it will make $4-$5 million in interest from its investment after the sale of the bonds. Esch also pointed out that the school is required by state to send half of the interest money earned from the investment of the bond money back to the state, leaving Lowell with $2-$3 million.

Lowell is currently in the process of selecting a construction manager, who will design developments, award contracts, and supervise the construction people.

The slate of activities for this process includes reviewing and approving proposed "Request for Proposals," mailing requests for proposals to construction managers on the approved list; hold pre-proposal meeting with construction managers; review of proposals; reducing list to three firms for an interview and interviews would be held on Thursday, Nov. 11 at 5 p.m. The board would approve the motion to retain selected construction manager firm at the Dec. 11 board meeting.

The schematic design portion of the master schedule is due to start in December. The schematic design lays out how all the education specifications will be grouped inside the new high school.

This could be pushed back if a site has not yet been purchased. Esch explained that it's not so much finding land anymore as it is making sure the land the school has found meets all the requirements.

Once the site acquisition and the schematic design are completed the next step is design development. This is when a picture draft of each room, similar to a blueprint, is drawn up showing the room's layout and where everything, from lighting to switches, will be located.

From this, construction documents can be placed. Construction documents show what supplies will be needed to complete each room.

Deer whistle alarming to some horse & carriage riders

Sue VanSlyke, Parnell Avenue, Lowell, treasures those fall antique carriage rides down the winding country roads.

Ironically, VanSlyke believes a winding of a different sort could endanger the safety of her carriage rides.

VanSlyke is referring to the winding noise made by deer whistles which are now being attached to the grill of vehicles. The whistles are intended to hinder deer from becoming involved in accidents.

"The whistles not only warn deer that cars are coming, but I believe they also spook and startle other animals such as horses and cows," VanSlyke said. "I'm frightened for young children riding horseback alongside the road."

The Lowell resident would like to see a study on the effects of the deer whistle on other animals before a serious accident occurs.

"I go out in my horse and buggy four days a week. If people are going to attach deer whistles to the grill of their cars then I think the Kent County Road Commission should put up signs of caution where horse and buggies are used," VanSlyke said. "The problem is the whistles are on the cars all the time, even during times of the day when deer are less likely to be near the roads."

VanSlyke's concern may fall on deaf ears for there do not seem to be any statistics to support her concern.

In fact, according to Lt. Larry Beld of the Ottawa County Sheriff Department, car/deer accidents involving his fleet are down, compared to previous years. "Car/deer accidents have been minimized since attaching deer whistles to the grills of their cars," he says.

Beld adds that he is not sure what the hearing frequency for the whistles are or if horses can even detect the noise. "You'd probably have to talk to the DNR," he said.

Lt. Wes Haney, a traffic service representative for the State Police, reports people have called him and asked for a deer whistle recommendation. Haney has refused because of the scarcity of research information available. "I'm guessing that if the noise bothers deer, it would bother most four-legged animals."

The study showed the whistling sound can be picked up by sheep, pigs, cows, goats, horses, dogs and cats.

Johnson adds that truck drivers have informed him that when they pull up behind a horse trailer during their travel, horses look back to check out the sound. However, the animal does not show any fright.

Lowell mother raises concerns about school safety regulations

Cindy Lohr and a group of Lowell Runciman Elementary mothers recently questioned some of the supervision and safety regulations practiced at the school.

Lohr first realized her concerns while transporting her daughter, Erin, to school each day. The Lowell mother took her concerns to the Lowell Board of Education at its October meeting, which led to a school security meeting with building principal, Louie Dudeck. Joining Lohr at the meeting were Sue Han and Margaret Krey.

"The school did what it thought it could do," Lohr said. There are some areas Lohr and her school security mothers believe could still be handled better.

On the mornings it rains or the weather is inclement, the mothers wish students would not have to stand in the cloak room until 9 o'clock.

The reason students are told to stay in the cloak room is because of teacher contracts. Their contracts state they do not have to deal with children until 9 a.m. each morning. Lohr believes this is out of line.

How often this happens each school year and the amount of time students have to wait in the cloak room on these inclement mornings is conflicting, depending on who you talk to.

The group of concerned mothers (12-15) believe it can be as long as 15-20 minutes. They also believe this happens more than a couple times a year.

Dudeck said it is never more than 10 minutes and closer to five minutes. "I'm not sure this happens often enough (2-3 times a year) for it to be a problem," he says.

The Runciman principal says the cloak room is anywhere from 14-20-feet-by-10 feet.

Another concern Lohr has is on rainy days when children have to stay inside for recess. "Children are left unattended in classrooms. The school has a couple of hall monitors that patrol the halls. I just think more supervision than that is needed for that many children," she says.

Dudeck said the school does the best it can and will never be able to be as flexible with its routine as mothers can be at home.

While Lohr and her school security friends would like to see more done in these two areas, they did have many of their concerns resolved.

Dudeck said he was able to clarify to their satisfaction procedures about issues pertaining to allowing students to come in during inclement weather and allowing students to return to the classroom for a coat or hat during recess.

In regards to locking school doors during normal school hours, Dudeck said this would be a violation of fire and safety codes and would not be allowed.

Blocking vehicle access to the Runciman playground was another topic the safety concerned mothers inquired about. "I told them I felt it was impractical, as well as dangerous to our youngsters to do this," Dudeck said. Lohr though it might be a good idea to have someone hired to act as "keeper of the gates," locks and chains.

The two sides reached an agreement in that Dudeck asked Clare McCaul to put latches on the south gate, one which the children can open

After Charles Lindbergh made history with the first solo flight across the Atlantic, he came home by ship.

"People need to remember, we're parents too and their children are treated no different than we'd treat our own," Dudeck said.
