DDA and school struggle over who has rights to the debt retirement

The charge of the Downtown Development Authority of Alto is to improve the downtown community - its and parks.

DDA program was initiated by the state in 1978. It is a tax increment financing prog-

"The funds to finance the program come through freezing assessments of an area at a certain level. Then, all the monies from increased assessments above the frozen amount go toward the DDA program," said the DDA of Alto chairman George Anderson.

Because of this program, the DDA was able to provide Bowne Township with the Northrop Corporation for Council support to aid in the Congressional funding of two more Stealth Bombers.

Northrop just happens to be the company who would manufacture the Stealth Bombers and would stand to gain an exorbitant amount of money.

The vote would not take place until September and a lot could change between now and then. Northrop is using this time to lobby intensively for local support from cities, chambers of commerce, Michigan Farm Bureau and other local entities and organizations.

"On national defense issues, the city doesn't have any direct issues. I believe that is best left with the federal government," Lowell City Manager Dave Pasquale Debra Walsh, a spokesperson for Congressman Paul Henry's office, concurred. "No, this is not typical of similar corporations. Northrop's strategy is obviously to aggressively," Walsh said. "Many view their apAlto Public Library with a for the community and for the

State aid question keeps school budget in a flux

Lowell Assistant Superintendent Gary Kemp is planning for an eight percent increase in operating costs, He just hopes the state's school budget plan has that in mind.

The February amended budget for the 1990-91 school year shows an eight percent increase in expenditures compared to the 1989-90 budget. What Kemp and all other school officials from Michigan schools are not sure of is what will happen to state aid. Will it grow, stay the same or be reduced?

Local property taxes and state aid account for the majority of the revenues brought in by the Lowell School District.

The current amended budget for 1990-91 shows Lowell Schools operating with a budget that shows expenditures exceeding revenues by $77,291. The actual budget for 1989-90 showed Lowell schools operating with revenues exceeding expenditures by $117,018.

The total operational millage rate for Lowell schools is 37.6. Of that total, 1.4 mils is used strictly for energy and maintenance, leaving 36.2 mils for operation.

The SEV total for 1990-91 is $227,750,411. That represents an 11.4 increase. Of that, $1,396,433 goes to the Alto Downtown Development Authority. Leaving the net SEV at $226,353,978.

The energy and maintenance fund currently sits at $439,992, with $316,896 coming from local taxes and 123,096 coming from state aid.

Of the $13 million budget, roughly $8 million comes through property tax and $4 million through state aid.

Lowell Schools has a fund balance of $1,070, 316. The projected fund balance for 1990-91 is $993,025.

The Northrop Corporation sent a letter to the Lowell City Council asking for its support in the funding of two more Stealth Bombers.

As you may have guessed, acne is the most common skin

We know that acne as a syndrome reaches its zenith in adolescence secondary to the increased amounts of hormones present and how they influence the activity of oil glands located under the skin. These glands empty into the skin through tiny tubes, or ducts. In acne, the increased activity of the glands causes the ducts to become filled and blocked with bacteria and other skin products that accumulate. The oily materials may emerge, causing irritation or an inflamcreased risk of developing acne as well. Because boys have higher levels of the "masculinizing" hormone testosterone,

Treatment of acne has improved dramatically in the last

10 to 15 years. It begins with washing of the face twice daily with regular soap. Never pick or squeeze pimples, or blackheads, as this can injure the skin and perhaps result in scarring. Over the counter medicines should be the first step in actual treatment of acne. If preparations containing ben-zoyl peroxide, salicylic acid, or resorcinol don't provide relief, then prescription products are usually indicated. Your doctor will assess the extent and degree of acne and recom-

By today's standards that doesn't seem like much, but it was all we could afford back then. No, I'm not going to get into those "We were so poor when I was a kid" stories. the old Savage. The front fender was broken, there are dents in the tank, the seat is ripped, covers for the battery and oil tank are missing, the chain guard is gone, the list goes on and on. The coup de grace came when the chain broke and nobody wanted to spring for a new one. It has been stored for the past ten years or so in a basement warehouse my dad rents. It was covered with mud from it's last few outings, ten years of dust and a few offerings from roosting birds. She looked pretty pathetic, and I didn't hold out much hope that the old Savage would ever cough to life. But, with the optimism of youth, Casey was insistent that I try.

My first step was to see if it was getting any gas. I turned on the valve at the tank and nary a drop came out of the hose I had disconnected at the carburetor. The valve was disassembled, found to be completely varnished shut, cleaned and reinstalled. With gas flowing to the carburetor I choked it, climbed aboard and gave her a kick. She tried. I looked at Casey in disbelief. I shut off the choke and kicked again. She tried again. On the third kick she roared to life. I couldn't believe it. Now I was in trouble.

We took an inventory of the bare minimum parts we needed to get her going. The list included a new chain, battery, rubber seal for the now leaking gas valve and a good helmet. About $150.00 later we were back to work on

I had driven to a Suzuki shop way over on the northwest side of Grand Rapids for the parts. When I went to install the chain it was the wrong link size. I drove to a Honda shop in nearby Ionia. They sold me one that was a link size too big, but should work. It was too short. I drove to a motorcycle accessories shop north of Ionia and bought one that was the right link size, but turned out to be about two links short. The proper chain was special ordered and a dissappointed Casey had to wait another week for his chance at the Savage. In the meantime I had bounced an assortment of wrenches off the wall over the chain fiasco.

Sunday afternoon we installed the chain, pumped up the tires and took it out to some vacant land my dad owns. I took it for a little test drive to reacquaint myself with the shift sequence so I could instruct Casey. The next thing you know it was feeling like old times and I was tearing around like I was a kid again. I spilled it once when I caught the front wheel in a furrow and twice more trying to climb a steep hill in a nearby gravel pit. This morning I'm sporting a bruised shin, sore knee and a stiff shoulder. I keep forgetting I'm on the far side of forty.

So, the old Savage is up and running . . . at least for the moment. I can almost guarantee that it will pop up in this space again when I have installed a new piston, rewired the lights, installed a new fender, etc., etc. If I were smart, I'd take my old .45 automatic out to where it's stored and put it out of it's misery. I know I'd save myself a lot of grief . . not to mention money.

"Life doesn't just hand out enthusiasm. There are times chestra when we have to go out after it, and like Sam Ullman, know that to 'give up enthusiasm wrinkles the soul."

"I wonder if any woman has counted up the hours of sleep she has lost from the time just before she gives birth to a child until--until--when? There are times in life when if the eyes fall asleep, the heart stands watch. I guess I'll leave the ounting to God, and thank Him for the memories of the oices that called out, 'Mother, I'm home."

"Seasons come and seasons go--and we change and adapt ourselves each time as they brush or bombard their way into our lives. Sometimes I think that the seasons are given as mother means of helping us humans adapt to change."

"One of the reasons I chose to write my serial, 'LOVE'S DUTY', was to encourage you to take time to reminisce and find your special story. Did you? Some of you told me about character in your life and their influence on you. Often I eard, 'Good grief, I had forgotten about that person, until ow.' Some of them were happy memories and others brought tears--but they were your stories. You are special!"

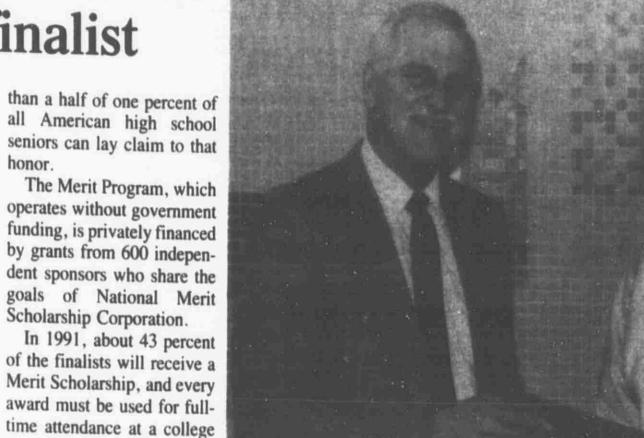

"Expectation--that's what makes the difference in people's lives. We learn to become listeners by expectation. That's a vonderful way to begin a new season of learning--in the lassroom, at work or in the home."

"I read books in order to touch the hearts of boys and girls, oung people and adults when I share them in reviews, in etters or by buying them a copy of their own. 'Fortunately, have a husband who is generous with my avocation. How in the world could I not possibly share all the happiness, struction and laughter that reading books has given me?"

"In my passing years, I am beginning to see clearly that God has had a plan for my life. I can see all the 'and downs' is puzzle pieces, which seem to slowly fall in place. Some are missing yet, but God isn't finished with me either." Nellie Schlepers/Adventures With My Spinning Wheel

I close with a favorite quote of mine from Sally Conway: Every experience you have in life is like being given another crayon with a slightly different color than all the rest to use in creating a picture. Each new color allows you to expand the shading, the tone, the richness." So be it, Lord, so be it.

Kropf helps to vault gymnastics into limelight

In the last four years, it is doubtful whether an athlete has meant more to its sport at Lowell High School than Laura Kropf has to gymnastics.

Kropf has brought notoriety and publicity to Lowell gymnastics. More importantly, this visible acknowledgement has helped to intensify the participation of underclassmen.

There were seven freshmen members of the 1990-91 Lowell gymnastics team. "That's probably the highest number of freshmen we've had come out for gymnastics in 6-7 years," Lowell gymnastic coach Annette Pearson said. "What's even more gratifying, is that most of them have had club-type experience."

Kropf has given each of the underclassmen something to reach for, incentive to compete at their highest level.

The Lowell senior gave fair warning in her freshman year that she would compete at a level few other Lowell gymnasts have attained. Kropf, as a freshman, qualified for the state tournament on the uneven bars. She placed 12th. She went back to the state meet her sophomore year, competing on the bars and in the floor exercise. She placed eighth on the bars and remembers placing 20-something in the floor exercise.

She was slowed down in her junior year with a knee injury. Not only did it prevent her from qualifying for the state meet, but it also stopped her from competing at the high level she was accustomed to.

Her knee injury was painful, but this hurt even more. "My knee injury really got me down. I seriously considered quitting gymnastics. I'm not sure what it was that kept me going, but I'm glad I did," Kropf said.

"Kropf has given all Lowell gymnasts something to work toward," Pearson said. "She has always competed at a high level. She has given the underclassmen that incentive to work hard to participate at a high level too."

Kropf pauses for a moment and then reflects on what gymnastics has provided her as a student. "It's given me self discipline and has made me a stronger person and not just physically," she says.

The Lowell senior earned Honorable Mention All-Conference honors in her sophomore year. She was named to the O-K Rainbow All-Conference team as a junior.

Pearson pointed to the senior's consistency as one of her more valuable trademarks. "She has her bad nights and her good nights, but she has never strayed far from her mark. Consistency is very important in gymnastics,"

Kropf has also been steady with her team support and leadership. "Laura is pretty straight forward in and outside of gymnastics. Earlier in the year the team was struggling and Laura could see the frustration on many of he teammate's faces. She gave them a pep talk, encouraging them and telling them she could see potential," Pearson said. "There have been times where she is better able to explain a point on technique, movement or positioning to girls than I can."

Following her senior year, Kropf plans on remaining active on the competitive club. "I've also given thought to one day coaching or judging gymnastics," Kropf said. "I may compete in gymnastics at Central Michigan University.

The growth and improvement of the Lowell gymnastic team and the increased publicity it has obtained are the two things Kropf is most proud of.

Kropf will compete for the final time at home on Saturday in the O-K Rainbow Conference Meet.

"I'd like to finish out my final season at Lowell by competing at the state meet in all four events," she says. "I'd also like to hit on all my routines. Even if I don't place, as long as I do well.

Laura Kropf performs on the balance beam in a league meet against East Grand Rapids.

Women of the Moose euphoric over yellow ribbon support

What is it called when the deniand exceeds the intent?

Lowell's Women of the Moose Post 1388 call it a tremendous success.

In an effort to symbolize the extension of their heartfelt wishes for the safe return and good health of local servicemen, and to let servicemen's families know their hearts go out to them, Lowell's Women of the Moose began making yellow ribbons on Jan. 26.

Since then, the Women of the Moose have made 220 for along Main Street, of which, 150 have been hung up on street light poles and build-

The organization also decided to try to sell a few to area residents with all the proceeds going toward the support of local service ribbons is $3 apiece. They families in the area.

"The success has been unbelievable. We have had a difficult time keeping up with the demand from the general public," said Women of the Moose officer, Connie Roth.

As of last Friday the organization made roughly 600 yellow ribbons and sold nearly 400. The remaining ribbons are being hung up along Main Street and along north and south Hudson Street.

"I can't believe the response," Roth explained. "The response is beginning to touch into Grand Rapids."

The charge for the yellow may be purchased at the Moose Lodge and New Creations (between Gary's Meat Market and Man's World).

Roth says they have enough material to make 900-1,000 yellow ribbons. At the start of the project, the organization was going to contribute $500, but with the success of the yellow ribbon sale, it has enough money currently to make a $1,500 donation.

"I'm speechless over the response," Roth said. "Obviously it's going very well. We will continue making yellow ribbons until the demand for them quits."

Roth said the Lowell organization has also helped to collect food for the food bank at the Greenville Armory.

For more information Roth can be reached at 897-8837.
