Chamber granted permission to hang Showboat/crafts banner across 21

The Lowell City Council and the Michigan Department of Transportation granted permission for the Lowell Area Chamber of Commerce to hang a banner across M-21 from Mikel's Inc. to a pole on the south side of the road near the Veteran's Memorial Park.

The Council approved the temporary banner to be hung from May 28 until June 18.

Dean Lonick, of the Lowell Planning Commission, was asked by Councilman Jim Hodges if the banner was in conflict of the sign ordinance currently being reviewed by the Planning Commission.

"I don't believe the Council need worry about a conflict at this time. The ordinance is moved more toward permanent signs rather than temporary," he said.

The sign will be hung by the Lowell Light and Power Company.

"We want to create a festival atmosphere," Lowell Area Chamber of Commerce chair person Charlene Chapman said. "We want, not only to get good crafters in Lowell for the arts and crafts show, but we also want to get people into Lowell to shop and look around."

State specifications require that a temporary banner not be hung across a major highway that serves as a main artery through a city for more than a three week period.

In an effort to do just that, the Chamber has extended the arts and crafts show an extra day. It will open on Friday from 10 a.m. until 8 p.m. The hours will remain the same on

School Board raises concerns about performance of Bushnell administrator

For the first time in an open meeting the Lowell Board of Education discussed briefly and in not much detail, its dissatisfaction with one of its administrator's performance.

This concern surfaced at a special Board of Education meeting Monday night before it acted on the extension of administrator and supervisor contracts.

The administrator in question was Bushnell Principal Dave Burdette, who has been with Lowell Schools for 19 years. Seven of those years were spent as principal of the Lowell Middle School.

Both Lowell Superintendent Fritz Esch and Board President Ray Quada said the details concerning the Board's evaluation of Burdette would be left between Burdette and the Board.

A motion was made not to renew Burdette's contract for another year by Board treasurer, Jack Lane, however, the motion died when no second for the motion was forthcoming.

The extension of contracts for administrators and supervisors were then approved by the Board.

This one-year roll over action is customary. Esch explained the rollover, extending contracts from one to two years, occurs either by the vote of the Board or automatically, if no action is taken.

The roll over simply continues the two-year contract. It does not do anything with salaries. Those remain the same.

The discussion on Burdette's contract was based on last year's evaluation.

Burdette was also asked to comment on the matter, but felt it was best left between the employer and employee.

Dog's survival of bone cancer serves as excellent study in treatment for humans

Ada's Bonnie Palmer knows now that people don't realize just how far they are willing to go to insure the health and life of their dog.

"Love is love, whether it's for a dog or a human," Palmer says.

Through a recent research project at Michigan State and Colorado State Universities' Colleges of Veterinarian Medicine, man may soon begin to look upon dogs as more than just its best friend.

The research project involved a new chemotherapy drug used on dogs which have been diagnosed with osteosarcoma - a malignant bone cancer.

"Usually by the time the cancer is diagnosed, it has already metastasized from the bone to other parts of the body," Lowell Veterinary Clinic veterinarian, Bruce Langlois explains. "The disease is almost always fatal." Dogs diagnosed with the disease after it has already spread, have a survival time of three months. Those that are diagnosed with the cancer and then undergo surgery (usually amputation of a leg), have a survival time of six months. Dogs who have surgery, followed by chemotherapy, have a life expectancy of nine months.

Langlois, who has served as the vet to Palmer's Belgian Sheperd, Flynn, diagnosed the dog with the disease back in February of 1992. The diagnosis came on the heels of a broken leg which was not healing completely.

Amputation of the dog's front right leg was followed by monthly chemotherapy treatments with this new experimental drug. The treatments started in February and lasted six months. The side effects the drug had on Flynn included weight loss, nausea and tiredness.

"If amputation is necessary, it is assumed that small tumors have spread from the bone to the lungs," Langlois said. "The chemotherapy is used to kill those small tumors."

Five percent of all cancer in dogs is bone cancer. In the United States, 6,000 dogs are diagnosed with the disease.

There are 800-1,000 people diagnosed each year with bone cancer. It is most prevalent in adolescents, according to Langlois. "There are striking similarities in the bone cancer diagnosed in humans and that diagnosed in dogs."

"Because of this, the abundance of canine cases each year makes it an excellent model for the study in humans."

Langlois says the results from studying bone cancer in dogs may very well save human lives in the future.

"I believe within the next five years you will see this chemotherapy treatment tried on humans," Langlois says.

Humans suffering from cancer, who have been in remission for five years, are considered cured. Because of the difference in the life-span, dogs who are in remission for one year are considered cured.

Flynn is the first dog to successfully be treated with this drug. "Flynn has to come in for chest x-rays every six months.

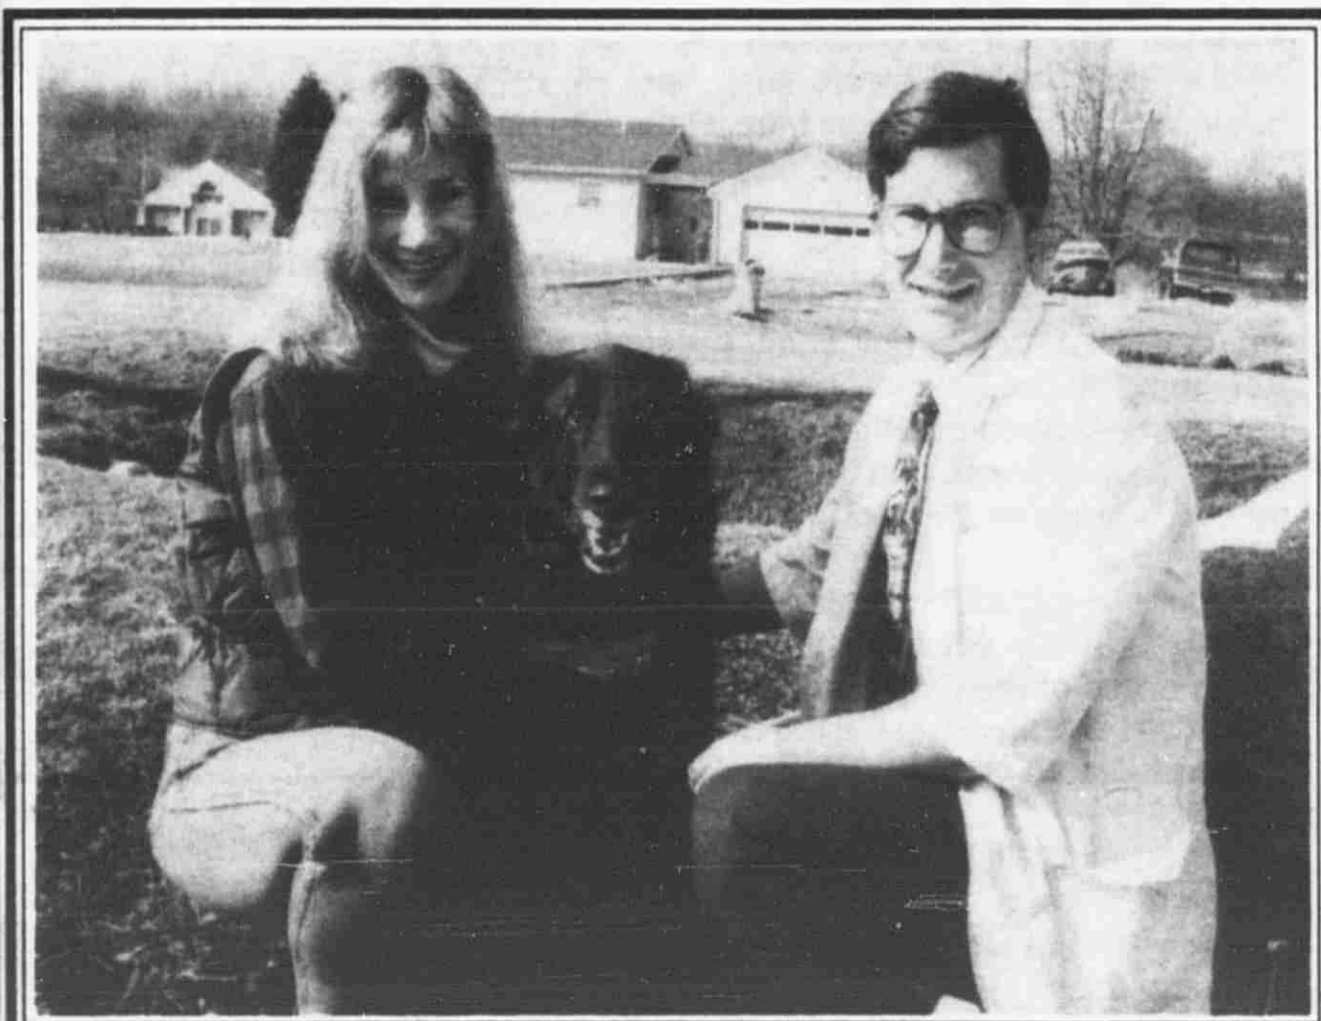

"I never gave thought to putting Flynn to sleep," Palmer said. "Thanks to the sensitivity Bruce showed, which I haven't ever seen in another veterinarian, I never gave up hope either."

Palmer pleaded with vets at MSU to give her something to hang onto during the treatment, but they couldn't. "One of the doctors told me he did not know of one case where a dog with the cancer had survived."

Palmer adds that the vets told her Flynn would never swim, run with her, or jump and climb again. "Flynn is now doing all of those things."

The treatment cost Palmer and her husband, Woody, roughly $2,500. Palmer says it would have been more had it not been done through the program at Colorado State and Michigan State. Palmer credits Langlois with bringing the treatment program to her attention.

"What's really nice about this, is now veterinarians can give people hope. They can tell them one dog has survived and other smiles.

LEA raises $3,000 for K-12 scholarships

Members of the Lowell Education Association, which includes teachers and support staff, have again this year raised close to $3,000 toward scholarships for any students in grades K through 12 who wish to apply.

These monies can be used for special programs offered in the summer such as: tutoring, computer camps, music/arts camps, reading or math workshops, GRASP programs and seniors can use the money for college.

Please contact the school that your son or daughter attends for more information and an application. The teachers in the Lowell School District donate money through the use of payroll deductions. This is unique to Lowell. Our teachers and support staffs care for kids. Call school today for more information.

Homespun Devotions

By Pauline Spray

HOMESPUN

If we keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love... (John 15:10)

Inevitably spring is accompanied by storms. Lightning sends its electrical fingers zigzagging through the darkened canopy above us. Thunder, loud and frightening, shakes the earth. Rain descends in torrents, and the wind whips through trees and bushes, damaging nature's handiwork.

When lightning strikes a majestic oak, a stalwart pine, or a plump apple tree, leaving its heart split open, the sight saddens us. We know the severed branch will wither and decay. Separated from the parent trunk, the branch is void of nourishment. And life. It cannot continue to exist nor bear fruit.

So it is with God's children. Through Him flows life.

As we abide in Him, we receive the life and strength to live and bear fruit. In Him is embodied all righteousness. Only through Him do we receive ability to do good and power to live creatively happy and useful lives. As long as we keep His commandments, we shall abide in Him, and "storms cannot separate us" from His love.

Prayer: Dear God, I thank Thee for Thy life-giving blood and for giving me the ability to do good and live creatively. Keep me safe and secure in Thee when the storms of life are raging. Amen.

In the rifted Rock I'll hide me Till the storms of life are past.

All secure in this blest refuge, Heading not the fiercest blast.

Viewpoint

Cozy Corner by Roger Brown

I don't often dispense advice. I've stumbled through 43 years equipped with a brain that falls far short of genius, but blessed with some sort of inner drive that tells me to get somewhere. I haven't figured out where "somewhere" is, but I've had fun looking. Consequently, from my vantage point of flopping around like a fresh-caught bluegill in the bottom of a rowboat, I don't feel I'm in a position to be telling anybody how to run their lives.

On the other hand, I have blundered into some situations that I can feel confident in recommending you steer clear of. Picking my daughter and her friend up at Detroit Metro Airport a couple of Saturdays ago comes to mind. Looking back on that experience, I can easily advise you how "not" to spend a Saturday evening. Here goes, and I promise not to sound too much like Ann Landers as I dispense this advice.

The girls' flight was due into the International Terminal at 11:25 p.m. I figured Metro is about a three hour drive, but not having anything else to do, I left at about 7:30. A prudent person with an ounce of planning sense would have called ahead to see if the flight was on time. But, prudence and planning are not my strong suits. If I'd been the nutritional engineer on the first NASA flights, the astronauts would have been trying to drink their Tang from Dixie cups and dispose of it via a wall mounted urinal plumbed to the great expanse of outer space. I wonder if that's what they were talking about at the beginning of each Star Trek episode when they said something about "boldly going where no man has gone before?"

I arrived at the terminal around 10:00 to find the flight arrival posted at 12:45 a.m. Bad planning! Having gulped down two large cups of coffee purchased at drive-thru restaurants on the way down, I sought out the mens room and boldly went where many men had obviously gone before.

With my bladder relieved, I went about the business of reconnoitering the joint for creature comforts. There were signs apologizing for the renovation construction, but no creature comforts. The lounge was closed. The restaurant was closed. Even a huge waiting area with hundreds of marginally comfortable looking chairs was locked up tight. To make matters worse, it was the weekend of the big storm that closed all the airports out east. Consequently, the terminal was jammed full of disgruntled passengers, flopped out on their luggage, the stairs, window sills, each other, etc. It was not a pretty sight.

I finally found a chair behind a vacated information booth. I propped my feet up on the desk and read a book I'd had sense enough to bring along. I was occasionally approached by confused, foreign speaking passengers wearing weird stuff like big fur hats, turbans, jewels in their foreheads, grenades in their pockets, etc. I simply smiled, nodded my head in understanding and pointed them off in the direction of the mens room.

After awhile, one of those self-important security guards asked me to vacate the information booth. I was a little upset.

Limbaugh found this ridiculous, as do I. Teenage pregnancy is as much a problem and more disturbing of a problem than un-spayed or neutered pets. But, while we're willing to act to curb one, society seems to put up its own road blocks to stem the other. What's wrong with advocating abstinence, My only guess is that it actually makes a lot of sense.

A little over a week ago I took some time off for a trip to Erie, Pennsylvania. The trip was inspired by the fact that my mother wanted to spend some time with her mother and it had been a while since I had visited with my 92-year old grandmother.

It's a 5-1/2 hour trip if you set your cruise at 70-75 mph, and if need be, one stop for gas and a trip to the boys' room. During our stop in Ohio for gas I made a comment to the gas attendant about how chilly the wind was. He replied, "We're expecting a big storm here tonight." Being that my mother is more of a nervous wreck than I am, I kept that information to myself and high-tailed it out of there.

We arrived in Erie at my Uncle's around 7:30-8:00. The next morning my Uncle Bob said that the Erie area was expecting some bad weather, but didn't think it would be real

Not only had I lost my seat, but I was just picking up a little Russian and Swahili.

I wandered around, poisoned myself with some vending machine coffee, exchanged pleasantries with a couple of guys who I believe were Libyan terrorists and boldly went to the mens room again. All the while I was scouting around for a decent place to sit down, read my book and try to forget how stupid I'd been to get there early.

My chance for a seat came when I finally spotted a vacant wheelchair. I felt guilty sitting in that thing. It's not like I'd tripped a crippled little old lady in a race to get to it or anything like that. I just felt guilty. So, I took off my shoe, put it in the pouch behind the chair, wrapped my foot in my handkerchief and put up the gizmo on the chair to elevate your leg. When anyone asked about my injury, I'd tell them, in Russian or Swahili, that I'd sprained it skiing in the Alps. I felt better.

The girls finally showed up about 1:30. I gave up my chair to a big Arab-looking guy. I put my shoe back on and made him a gift of my handkerchief. He bowed and thanked me in some language I wasn't familiar with. It wasn't Russian or Swahili, I know that much.

We got home a little after 4:00 a.m. Wired on coffee and driving, I couldn't get to sleep and read for an hour or so. Nature called at about 7:00. I just nicely got back to sleep and the phone rang. That was it. I got up and spent the rest of the day as a zombie.

So, my advice, and believe me, this is "good" advice, to anyone picking up somebody at Metro is, "DON'T!" I don't care what airport parking costs, make them drive themselves there, park the car, go on their trip and drive themselves home!

since the weatherman said Erie would be on the storm's fringe.

What that meant 24 hours later was 14 inches of snow and high winds (30-40 mph wind gusts). I guess snow up to your ----- is considered on the fringe when the areas hit the hardest got 2-3 feet of snow. Just a little over an hour from Erie, Pittsburgh, got 24 inches.

The reason I bring all of this up, what a lead in, is for the four days we were there my Uncle was never given a chance to wipe the egg off his face for saying Erie wouldn't get it that bad because it was on the fringe of the storm.

This got me to thinking, how as a society we all relish in an opportunity to magnify bold statements that go awry, or even simple changes in a person's attire, a new haircut, new tennis shoes, the donning of a beard and/or mustache.

It's been nearly two months now and I still hear comments about my mustache and about the new hairstyle.

I believe this sort of good natured ribbing must be handed down through the ages. It's like we're all born with this unspoken right of passage that we all delve into at every opportunity.

Thad's Thoughts

I was listening to Rush Limbaugh during my travels the other day, admittedly, I think the man is a loud mouth buffoon, but as with anyone, if you're constantly spewing at the mouth sooner or later something will come out that makes sense. With Rush it just takes a little longer.

He was talking about the push for people to have their pets spayed or neutered because of the genesis of the over population offspring. Well this is all well and good. He then noted that while people move and adhere to this societal problem, a judge ruled (I cannot remember the city) that a school could not teach abstinence in its sex education class. The reasoning being, the judge felt this leaked over into religious matters.

MICHIGAN'S HEALTHY KIDS

With the unveiling last Friday of Governor Engler's recommended budget for fiscal year 93-94, there can be no doubt that Michigan's children remain the State's number one priority. Aside from education, nearly all other areas of the state budget saw cuts or freezes. An extra effort was made to cut wasteful spending in other areas, allowing for the unveiling of a new health care program for children of the working, but low income families of Michigan. It is called Michigan's Healthy Kids proposal.

For a family without health coverage, a sick child can send their limited finances into a tailspin. Even the costs of routine exams and medications can be a devastating setback. This health proposal will give children and their families needed peace of mind.

The children helped by this plan come from families who earn too much to qualify for government sponsored health care programs but too little to buy their own health insurance. Governor Engler has announced the Healthy Kids initiative which will provide full Medicaid benefits to all children in the state 16 and younger, living in families with incomes less than $17,910 or 150 percent of the poverty level for a family of three. Approximately 80,000 children currently without medical coverage would be covered by this program.

In addition, the Healthy Kids initiative calls for expanding the Michigan Child Caring Program by providing limited medical coverage to approximately 12,000 children age two through 15 living in families with income less than $22,100. The Child Caring Program, operated by the state and Blue Cross/Blue Shield, currently relies primarily on private contributions to provide children with physician, pharmacy and non-hospitalization benefits.

Extending health benefits to these children could save lives and give parents additional security. Since one of the biggest stumbling blocks people face when rebuilding their lives is adequate health coverage for their family, especially when working in entry-level positions, this program serves a second purpose by helping people move off welfare and into the workforce.

This program will help with the transition from welfare to work by seeing to it that the children of low-income families receive adequate medical coverage. As a parent, I know first-hand the concerns one has when a child is sick. We all want to provide the very best for our children so that their childhood is not only happy, but healthy. Now, Michigan is going to make that job a little easier for families.

Photography, whether mounted in albums, singled in frames or massed in a collage, most always holds some precious adventure for children, and for adults as well.

Knowing this, author Charlotte Zolotow and artist Anita Lobel combine their sensitive imagery into the book, THIS QUIET LADY. It was captivating to me as I began a journey with a delightful little girl who began to discover her mother in a way she perhaps had never seen and her self, as well.

This book like its title is quiet. Quiet in gray shades most often, especially when the little girl is drawn. And although I enjoy bright colors and lively pastels, I was not disappointed; the little girl haunting and discovery-filled held me to its pages.

Her mother first appears in picture in a bassinet, and from there the little girl beckons us on to important events in her mother's life. The artwork literally pulls one from page to page, but I was not satisfied until I finally saw the face of the long-haired little girl who seemed like a tour-guide into her heart's country. It was always the photo that was important in the picture, and yet to me, I wanted to see her face, which was usually covered in one way or another. When at last I saw her face—I smiled in recognition. She was much like her mother.

One of the captivating moments was near the end of the book where the little girl, sitting in a chair, holds another important image in her mother's life. A photo in which she exclaims, smiling in recognition, "And here is where I begin." THIS QUIET LADY is a moving book, but filled with action in the love that ties the first photo to the last.

I would imagine that after reading this story, a mother could do the same for her own daughter by showing her photographs of important events in her life. This book certainly promotes a bonding of love.

This book can be found in your local library or bookstore.

FEMALE PROTECTION AGAINST AIDS

On an ever increasing basis, AIDS is being recognized as a disease that can spread by heterosexual intercourse. As of this year, over 12,000 patients (5,100 men and 7,781 women) were reported as acquiring heterosexually transmitted AIDS. Women are at greater risk than men of getting AIDS in this manner because more men are infected already and the virus appears to be transmitted more easily to women than men.

Recent studies have examined the effectiveness of spermicidal sponges with monoxynol in preventing the acquisition of AIDS. Unfortunately, the data was compelling that the sponge was not an effective means of preventing AIDS.

Other approaches to prevention the female must consider to include the use of male condoms (effective, but not always under the woman's control), and female condoms, (which have not yet been shown to be effective and are not readily available). Beginning in the teen years it is advised that we begin educating our youth about the risk of heterosexual transmission of AIDS. Abstinence should be strongly encouraged, but for that subset of our young population which is noncompliant with this attitude, safe sexual practices should be clearly elucidated and further established as high priority as we continue to struggle with this deadly disease.

Ada student to compete in national spelling bee

More than 100 fourth-through-eighth-grade students will compete in Michigan's fifth annual National Geography Bee April 2 at Central Michigan University in Mount Pleasant.

The state bee is the second level of a national competition sponsored by the National Geographic Society and Amtrack. Students are orally tested on geographic knowledge.

More than 200 Michigan schools participated in preliminary bees in January. Winners of the preliminary round took a written qualifying test, which was scored by the National Geographic Society in Washington, D.C. The top 100 scorers, plus students who tied scores, advanced to the state bee. Among the students will be David DeJong, of Ada.

The April 2 competition will begin with preliminary rounds at 12:30 p.m. in Moore and Pearce halls and the Dow Science Complex. Ten students will advance to the 3 p.m. final round in Pearce Hall. Wayne Kiefer, Michigan coordinator of the National Geography Bee and a member of the CMU geography faculty, will be the moderator.

The winner will receive $100 and an all-expenses-paid trip to the national finals May 25-26 in Washington, D.C.

To The Editor

What a delightful evening. I was fortunate enough to be invited to participate in the Lowell cultural scene by attending the Lowell High School's Drama Club presentation of "Exit The Body" on March 6.

This three act play, written by Fred Carmichael and directed by Laurie Summerfield and Donna Hinman, takes place in the living room of a New England country home where stolen jewelry is hidden. A mystery sriker, accompanied by her secretary, has rented the home to take a short vacation, prior to writing another novel, not knowing about the hidden jewelry.

As you may have guessed, the rest of the play revolves around the various characters, a housekeeper, crook, and a real estate agent, all attempting to locate the hidden jewels. Their bungling efforts, bodies magically appearing and disappearing, the writer passing off various men as her husband, and yes, the inevitable bungling country sheriff, evoke much confusion and laughter. The jewelry is inevitably found in the els where all the cast were passing each other in the dark. All the student actors did very well, but two performers were particularly notable. Special kudos go to Cat Kilpatrick, as secretary, Kate Bixley and Ben Boggs as Sheriff Vemon Cokely. Their portrayals were clear, sharp and totally believable. They are two people to watch in the future.

The play, written unlike a mystery by Dashed Hammet, Agatha Christie or Edgar Allen Poe, was written in a way that was more delightful, humorous and appealing to the audience. Much like a Pink Panther movie.

Does it deserve a "Tony"? Maybe a little one. John Sanchez

Lowell Church of Nazarene welcomes new pastor

Rev. Robert Walls

Rev. Robert Walls, formerly of Reynoldsburg, OH, recently accepted the pastoral assignment at the Lowell Church of the Nazarene.

In 1977, Rev. Walls graduated from Mount Vernon Nazarene College, where he received a B. A. in Religion. He has also done course work at Olivet Nazarene University and Central Michigan University.

He has served the Church of the Nazarene in three pastoral assignments and one associate position, all in Ohio. He and his wife Julie have three children: Matt, age 15; Cassy, age 13 and Zachary, age 22 months.

Rev. Walls states he wants to minister to the needs of the family and community, as well as provide a place of worship where all feel welcome.

LHS bands receive honors at Festival

Lowell's High School bands performed in the District Ten Concert Band Festival on March 10 and 11.

The concert band, under the direction of Bob Rice, performed "The Citadell March," "Covington Square" and "Triumphant Overture." The concert band received a second division rating which gave each member a medal. This is the first time the concert band has ever received medals at the Festival.

The Lowell High School symphonic band performed very well in receiving the top rating of a First Division.

The symphonic band performed "March Lamar," "Interlochen Variations" and "The Blue and The Gray." The band has qualified for the State Festival to be held in the Lansing area on April 23 and 24.

"All the students did a great job at the Festival," said band director Bob Rice.

LEGAL LANGUAGE
With
Jonathan J. David

DEAR JONATHAN: Within a week of moving into our new home, the basement flooded. Can we sue the prior owner for fraud or misrepresentation?

JONATHAN SAYS: It depends. In Michigan, a misrepresentation can come in the form of an intentional misrepresentation of the facts, an innocent misrepresentation of the facts or by nondisclosure of certain facts that are not reasonably discoverable by the other party.

In your situation if the seller (or his or her broker) had prior knowledge of there being a water problem in the basement and told you that he or she had no knowledge of the water problem, then you might have a cause of action for intentional misrepresentation. In order for you to succeed under this theory, you would have to prove the following in a court of law:

- (1) That the seller made a material misrepresentation;
- (2) That it was false;
- (3) That when he made it, he knew that it was false, or made it recklessly, without any knowledge of its truth and as a positive assertion;
- (4) That he made it with the intention that it should be acted upon by you as the buyer;
- (5) That you as the buyer acted in reliance upon it; and
- (6) That you as the buyer thereby suffered injury.

The absence of any one of the foregoing elements would destroy any cause of action you would have for intentional misrepresentation.

In the event that the seller was unaware of any water problems in the basement and told you that there were no such problems, then you still might have a cause of action for innocent misrepresentation. This may seem harsh from the seller's viewpoint, but so long as you can show that you as the buyer relied on that misrepresentation and that the seller benefited from the misrepresentation, then you would have a cause of action. However, before proceeding under this theory, you would have to show that there actually was a water problem in the basement prior to your purchasing the home and that the flooding you experienced was not a first-time occurrence.

CLASS OF 1973 REUNION

OFF THE BLOTTER

Christian Nauta, 17, of Lowell, struck a parked car on Hudson Street near Elm, March 17, that belonged to Joyce Thuston, also of Lowell. No one was injured.

Duane MacDonald, 57, collided with the rear of a vehicle, driven by Carlene Hendrick, 25, March 15, on M-21 near Valley Vista Drive. Hendrick sustained minor injuries in the accident. Both drivers are from Lowell.

Cited into 63rd District Court later this month for littering were Robert Kennedy, 18, and Kristopher Fox, 19, both of Lowell.

Arrested March 19 on a warrant issued by 63rd District Court was Darryl Gildner, 41, of Lowell.

Marlene Risner, of Lowell, reported to Lowell Police March 18 that her car had been struck by a hit and run vehicle while parked in the Family Fare parking lot, on West Main, sometime on March 17.

Edwin Phillips, 32, of Saranac, was arrested on a warrant issued out of a Grand Rapids court on March 19.

In the event the seller knew there was a water problem in the basement and simply failed to disclose it to you, you still might have a cause of action for misrepresentation. Under these circumstances, it would have to be determined whether you could have reasonably, upon inspection of the property, discovered the water problem. In most cases, upon inspection you should be able to determine signs of water damage in the walls and flooring. However, this isn't always the case. Signs of water damage can be covered up by fresh paint or floor coverings, which would make it virtually impossible to discover on a visual inspection.

You should review the facts of your case with an attorney to determine whether you have a cause of action against the seller for misrepresentation. Even if it's decided that you do have a legitimate case, attorneys do not come free so you should determine what your damages are and whether it would be cost efficient for you to pursue this matter.

DEAR JONATHAN: I am a widower and I have four children. I get along very well with three of my children but my oldest boy and I have not spoken for several years. I have decided to make out a will but I have no desire to leave anything to my son. Am I legally obligated to leave him anything? If not, do I have to use any specific language in my will excluding him as a beneficiary or should I just totally ignore him and not even mention his name?

JONATHAN SAYS: You are not legally obligated to leave any portion of your estate to your oldest son. If you decide to omit him, then you should make sure that your will has a paragraph which states that you are intentionally omitting him as a beneficiary of your estate. This will make it clear to your son that he was intentionally omitted and not excluded by mistake and that you were mindful of him at the time you prepared and executed your will.

I highly recommend that you have an experienced estate planning attorney draft your will for you. An attorney well versed in this area will be able to draft appropriate language which will both exclude your child as a beneficiary under your estate and prevent him from having a reason to contest the will.

LEGAL TIP: Any time a person, who has drafted a last will and testament, dies, the person who has possession of the will is required by state law to file the will with the Probate Court having jurisdiction. This is required even if the decedent left no estate to probate. This should be taken care of within a reasonable period of time after the death of the person who made the will.

The information contained in this column is not to be construed as legal advice or legal representation and should not be relied upon as such. If legal advice or legal representation is desired or required, then competent legal counsel should be consulted.

Meteorologist enhances school officials awareness of stormy weather

It's morning and the skies are clear and the sun is shining.

By 10 a.m. a few cumulus clouds have formed.

By noon, high cumulus clouds have built.

By 2 p.m. the moist warm air is rising and the cumulus clouds grow.

By 4 p.m. the moist warm air continues to rise and the cool, dry air is now falling.

The more cool/dry air that falls and mixes with the warm, moist air that rises, the more intense the energy of the thunderstorm.

The aforementioned is a progressive development of a severe thunderstorm warning. Jack Cooley, meteorologist in charge of the national weather service, educated school instructors and Lowell school bus drivers in identifying severe thunderstorm and tornado warnings on Monday morning at Lowell High School.

"I think the bus drivers who were in attendance came away with an appreciation for the guidance and direction I was able to provide for them," Cooley said. "Automobiles out on the road during a threatening storm are most susceptible to the bad weather."

The meteorologist said it is not only important that bus drivers are better able to identify severe weather and tornado warning situations, but is also important that the general public not feel inhibited about contacting authorities about possible severe weather situations.

In a severe weather situation we need more people who are willing to call 911, so that locally the word can be relayed to the people. The people at 911 have been educated, so they can visualize what a person is seeing," Cooley said. "They then can relay that information to us so that a warning may be issued if necessary." Cooley added that there are roughly 1,500 severe weather spotters in eight counties in the West Michigan area.

Cooley said with a limited staff it is somewhat unusual for him to give informative presentations like he did on Monday at Lowell High School.

His presentation ties in with the school's recent link to Kent County's Skywarn. The tie-in allows Lowell to talk directly to the people, giving the radio stations their information.

Thus, smarter decisions can be made based on the knowledge of oncoming weather.

The Lowell bus drivers in attendance at the Monday presentation agreed they were interested in what to do under severe weather circumstances with a bus load of children. Cooley was able to answer those concerns. "I think their desire for this knowledge may also be a signal for drills so that they can practice them."

Cooley said his charge with Monday's presentation was to give those in attendance a better understanding of what they might be looking at under different situations.

"I think something like this will help us become more observant," Lowell bus driver, Shelly Van Veelan said.

Of all the storms that will pass through the West Michigan area this summer, the meteorologist said 90-95 percent of them will not be severe. "Only three to five percent of those storms we actually need to worry about."

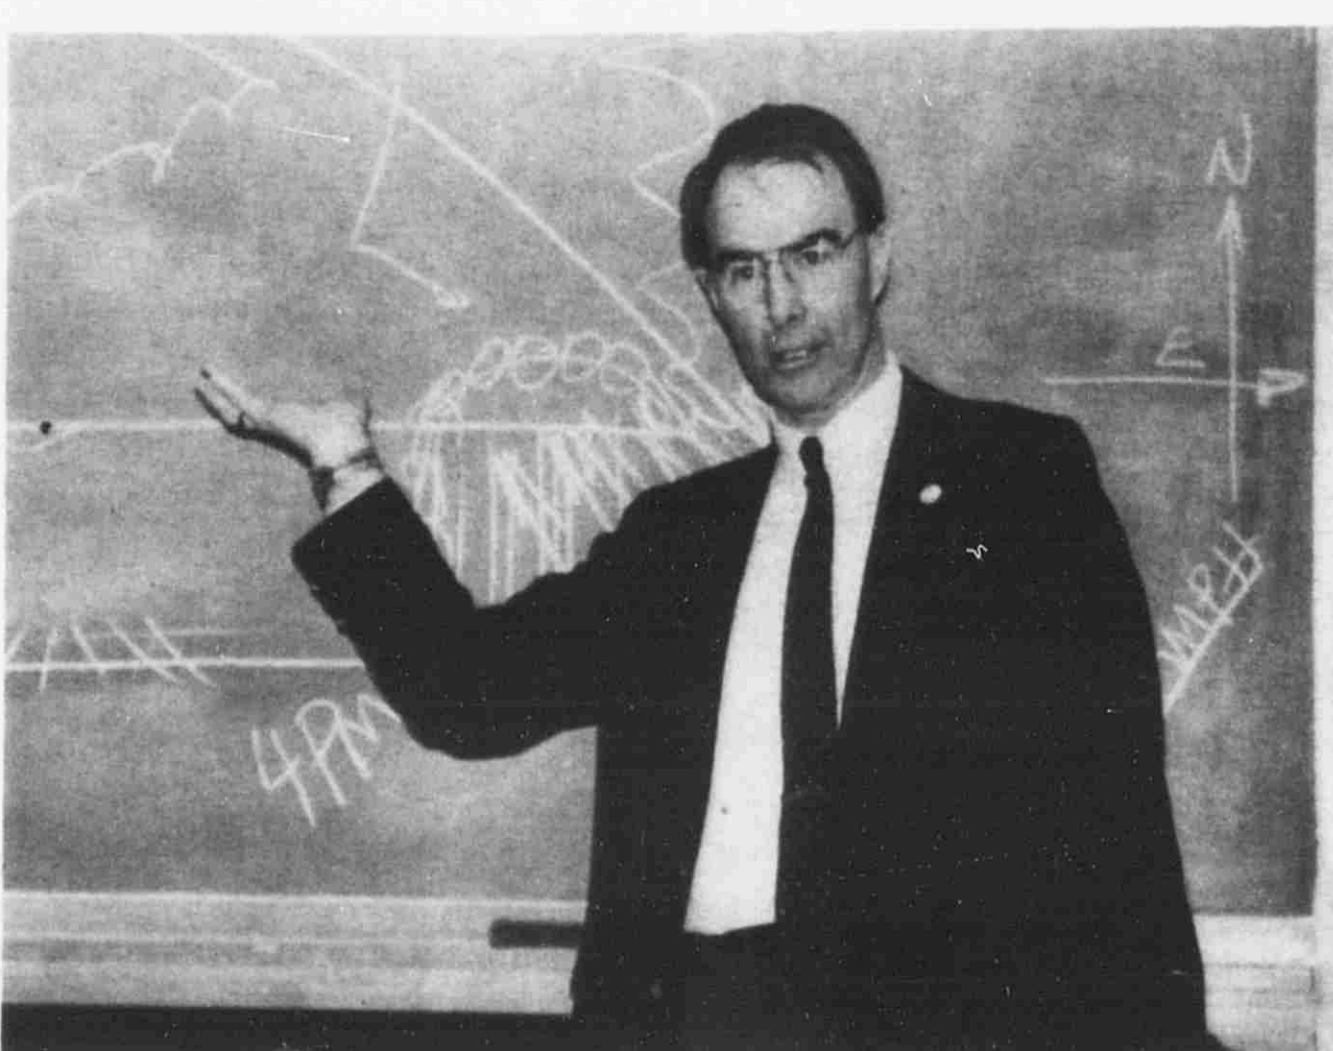

LHS students march in music festival

Twenty-six students from Lowell High School attended the District 10 Solo and Ensemble Festival on Saturday, Feb. 6 at Calvin College.

Performing very well were Shannon Bennett, Ann Kilpatrick, Cara Thaler, Jessi Pelon, Chris McClure, Tallie Bassett and Jeremy Clore.

Receiving a First Division rating and qualifying for the State Festival were Tom Roudabush, Mike Roudabush, Reggie Reynolds, Connie Kelly, Dianna Rice, Jay Pike, Craig Lett, Jason Conant, Josh Ennis, Jesse Gleason, Dena Beers, Anna Luyk and Bob Berrington.

Eight events have qualified for the State Festival on Saturday, March 27 at Western Michigan University.

Jack Cooley, meteorologist in charge of the national weather service, helped to increase Lowell bus drivers' recognition of approaching storms.

Police department purchases logging, dictating and voice mail systems.

Stating it provided greater recording time for the logging system, Lowell Police Sergeant Al Eckman recommended the approval of the Van Belkum (Lanier) dispatch logging equipment, dictating and voice mail system.

Following the recommendation from Eckman, the Lowell City Council waived the bid process and approved a motion that would allow the Lowell Police Department to purchase the system from Van Belkum for a cost of $8,990.

The monies used to purchase the system would be taken from the department's drug forfeiture fund of which there is $19,000.

The Van Belkum system will provide 360 minutes of record logging time. Dictating equipment will include two telephone input stations, one transcription station, and one console with keyboard. It will also provide 156 minutes of recording time.

The voice mail will have 390 minutes with a possible 100 users.

Dictaphone was also considered at a cost of $8,000, but it failed to give a demonstration of its equipment. Its recording time was also not as great, and Van Belkum's voice mail user will utilize the City's Centrex system, which it installed.

The current recording system for police dispatch is obsolete. Currently, one phone line and the radio are taped.

The length of the tapes is limited. The Director of Law Enforcement Risk Control of the Michigan Municipal Liability and Property Pool recommends tapes (phone and radio) should be stored for one year. Eckman says this would be difficult under the current system, requiring numerous tapes.

Currently, dispatchers have to provide written notes to officers. Voice mail can be directed to each officer with the capability to other City employees.

A quarrel between friends, when made up, adds a new tie to friendship, as experience shows that the callosity formed around a broken bone makes it stronger than before.

Captured assessed value revenue to pay bond indebtedness

The Downtown Development Authority's plan to revitalize the Lowell downtown business environment will go before the people at a public hearing on April 19.

The DDA proposes to accumulate sufficient revenue from captured assessed value to make principal and interest payment on bonded indebtedness.

The plan outlines projects to be implemented in the district. Priority will be placed on streetscape improvements on Main Street from Amity to Division. Upgrading of City parking lots is also a key feature of the plan. Altogether, $1.749 million would be spent over a 20-year period for various types of projects.

Another key element to the plan is its conservative financial approach. No personal property tax revenues were included in the plan. It also excludes all school debt millage.

Streetscape improvements will include replacement of sidewalk, curb and gutter and installation of decorative concrete. Peninsulas and intersections will be created where practical for a landscape strip.

New historical style light fixtures with underground electric service will be installed. A re-work of electric, telephone and cable service is planned.

Placement of benches, new trash receptacles, bike racks, street planters and signage will be purchased as part of the streetscape project. Where feasible, street trees will be planted.

All existing parking lots within the downtown development district will be improved with asphalt surfacing, resurfacing, drainage and miscellaneous landscaping. Installation of new historical style lighting fixtures will also take place.

Improvement of markings for an optimal number of parking spaces will be planned, along with installation of curb and gutter and incorporation of landscape boulevards where practical. Pavement accent strips and uniform signings will also be installed.

The downtown development is scheduled to begin this summer.

TOWN TALK

Do you believe Rodney Kings' civil rights were infringed upon? And, do you believe the verdict in the civil rights case will be any different than the first court case?

Bill Collins
Yes, his civil rights were infringed upon. I hope the verdict is different this time. I think it will be.

Craig McIntyre
No, I don't believe his civil rights were infringed upon based on the limited information I have gotten. He fled an arrest and had to be subdued.

Brenda Matlock
Yes, his civil rights were infringed upon. The verdict should be different.

Mark Droog
Yes King's civil rights were infringed upon. I don't know if the verdict will change though. I'm not sure a jury would be willing to change all of that.

Charles Melle
Yes, his civil rights were infringed upon. I don't think the verdict will be any different though.

Frank Smith
His rights were infringed upon. I don't think the verdict will be any different.

Gladys Thorne
No, and I don't think the verdict will be any different.

Bob Lautenbach
It definitely looked like his civil rights were infringed upon and that unnecessary force was used. I don't know what the verdict will be this time.

New sleep system helps in proper alignment of spine

Members of the Michigan Chiropractic Society, in an effort to prevent back pain, have aided in the design of a new sleep system. The sleep system, Chirobedic, will be manufactured by Spine Align, Inc. of Holland MI. This new system is designed to encourage proper alignment of the spine during rest.

Doctors of Chiropractic treat back pain on a daily basis, now they have a tool to prevent certain types of back pain.

Close to one third of our lives are spent asleep. If this time is spent in awkward positions needless pain may result. Almost everyone has, at one time, woken up with a stiff back.

The key to this sleep system is that the Chiropractic Physician is able to have it custom manufactured to fit each patient's requirements. The sleep system is designed with coils of varying tensile strength to maximize the protection of the patient's spine.

"It's rewarding to see this project take off. Back pain is one of the most common health problems in America. Approximately 80 percent of the population can expect to have back pain at some time in their lives. Close to eight million Americans suffer new back injuries every year. In addition to the crippling pain, there is a cost to society in lost work and decreased productivity," stated Dr. Paul Tuthill.

"We are continually researching ways to prevent back pain. The American Red Cross believes approximately 90 percent of back pain should be prevented. The Chirobedic isn't a "cure-all" for back pain.

It is a vital part of the overall equation which includes exercise, proper nutrition, Chiropractic care and correct body mechanics when lifting heavy objects," added Tuthill of Lowell.

Fire Commission asks for investigation of funding for West Michigan fire department

Lowell Township has supported a resolution drawn up by the Kent County Fire Commission urging state legislators to conduct an investigation into the level of funding for West Michigan fire departments. The resolution will ask state legislators why taxes levied on fire and casualty insurance writing businesses have not been given to the Fire Fighters Training Council as it should.

The exact amount of funds from the insurance taxes is not known but instead of finding its way to the training council the money is deposited into the state general fund. "I know that as a township we have not received any funds for the fire department, maybe the city has but it is not the amount it should be," said Township Supervisor John Timpson.

For the past ten years there has been a significant decrease in training funds while laws imposing higher standards of training for fire fighters has increased. It is estimated that to properly suit and train fire fighters cost $4,000 per person. Current legislation dictates that every fire fighter must be properly equipped and trained no matter where they are serving.

With increasing legislation imposing higher standards for fire departments and funding decreasing many West Michigan fire departments have voiced their concerns about the current trend to the commission. In turn the commission have asked all

West Michigan townships, villages, and cities to support the resolution presented to Lowell Township asking for the investigation of allocating funds.

$1.7 million water project bond resolution drawn up

Lowell Township has made a resolution to bond the water construction project for Lowell's new high school.

The total cost of the project is estimated at $1.7 million. Lowell's school board has already given $500,000 to the township covering their share of the cost. Township officials hope to raise $1.2 million to cover the remaining cost of the project.

The resolution is the first step in getting the project funded. The township must post its intention for the bond issue for 30 days to see if there is significant opposition to the measure. At the end of the 30 day period the township board then can decide how it wants to move forward.

"I think this is an ideal time for the bond issue because the project is a benefit to the community and current interest rates are low," said Township supervisor John Timpson.

$56,000 addition to create 3 new positions at Optec

Optec plans summer addition.

A public hearing was set for April 5 for the establishment of an industrial development district at the southeast corner of Smith and Chatham.

The firm wants to add 1,500 ($56,000) square feet of additional manufacturing space, doubling the size of the current facility. Of that 1,500, all but 200 feet will be used for manufacturing and assembly. The 200 feet will be used for engineering. Optec currently employs five full-time people and one part time person. With the addition, two more full-time positions will be added. Under state law, other taxing jurisdictions must be notified and a public hearing must be held before a district can be established. After a district is formed, tax abatement may be provided based on a construction proposal.

NOTICE LOWELL CHARTER TOWNSHIP KENT COUNTY, MICHIGAN

NOTICE OF INTENT TO ISSUE BONDS TO ELECTORS AND TAXPAYERS OF LOWELL CHARTER TOWNSHIP, KENT COUNTY, MICHIGAN, SECURED BY THE REVENUES OF THE TOWNSHIP'S WATER SUPPLY SYSTEM AND THE RIGHT OF REFERENDUM THEREON

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE THAT LOWELL CHARTER TOWNSHIP intends to issue revenue bonds in a maximum amount not to exceed $1,200,000.

The Bonds shall be issued for the purpose of defraying all or a portion of the costs of constructing water storage facilities, water transmission and distribution lines and related appurtenant properties and facilities at various locations in the township.

The bonds to be issued shall mature within the maximum term permitted by law with interest on the unpaid balance at a rate not to exceed the maximum rate permitted by law. The bonds shall be issued pursuant to Act 94 of the Public Acts of Michigan of 1933, as amended.

SOURCE OF PAYMENT

The principal of and interest on said bonds shall be payable solely from revenues derived from the operation of the Township's Water Supply System and shall not constitute a general obligation of the Township nor an indebtedness of the Township within any constitutional or statutory limitation.

RIGHT OF REFERENDUM

The bonds will be issued without a vote of the electors unless, within 45 days from the date of publication of this notice, a petition, signed by not less than 10% of the registered electors residing within the township limits of Lowell Charter Township, shall have been filed with the Township Clerk requesting a referendum upon the question of the issuance of said bonds, then the bonds shall not be issued until approved by the vote of the majority of the electors of the Township qualified to vote and voting thereon at a general or special election.

This notice is published pursuant to the requirements of Section 33 of Act 94 of the Public Acts of Michigan of 1933, as amended.
