Some cheers, a few jeers, but mostly a good showing for Ehlers at town meeting

By Marc Popiolek Contributing Writer

A deceiving government, health care, crime, individual responsibilities and morals were just a few topics of discussion for Congressman Vern Ehlers at his town meeting Saturday morning.

Ehlers was in the third district to answer questions and concerns of residents. Although he drew applause on several issues, his discussion was mainly focused on defending governmental procedures, the constitution and generally voicing his opinion on issues.

After a short period where Ehlers described his feeling on the nation's capital, he opened the floor to questions.

The first issue which drew applause from residents was his "no" vote on the crime bill. Ehlers said he was against the bill because it would have Michigan residents paying for things they would never see.

One of those items was the allocation of $10.5 billion to build prisons. Ehlers pointed out that Michigan has built all the prisons it wants and has no

Grooters proposes another projecton a smaller scale

By Marc Popiolek Contributing Writer

He's back! Robert Grooters is back and this time he wants to build a warehouse rather than a light industrial center.

Grooters sent Bill Kozak, a member of Moore and Bruggink, as his representative to the planning commission's monthly meet-

Kozak explained that Grooters would like to use 110 acres (which he owns) that run along I-96 and is south of the Park and Ride lot on Alden Nash as a site for a new warehouse.

Grooters has a local manufacturing company which would like to use the area; however, the name of the client was not revealed to the commission pending a signed letter of intent. If the letter is received, the client would like to occupy the facility by November.

The development on this site would require building one structure approximately 300 feet by 500 feet (150,000 square feet). The building would be used for the dual purpose of a warehouse and some associated offices. Kozak said the new business would employ approximately 50 people.

If this project goes through, Kozak said Grooters would like to develop this area further with additional buildings.

In a bit of a twist, Grooters would like to develop this land, not under the Planned Urban Development ordinance, but rather under the township's Light Industrial ordinance. The irony is the commission rezoned the property as light industrial with the knowledge that Grooters' industrial com-

McLarty's 'whinnying' effort to continue Pratt Lake horse show

By Marc Popiolek Contributing Writer

For the past seven years, a horse show has taken place on 40 acres of land on Pratt Lake Rd.

Those shows were run on that property for several years, but recently the property was sold to James McLarty. With the purchase the McLartys hope to keep the tradition alive and still hold the shows this summer.

The McLartys approached the planning commission earlier this month seeking a permit to hold the horse shows. Although the shows have gone on for seven years, the previous owners did not seek a per-

McLarty wants to continue the tradition at this location but wants to make sure it falls within the township's ordinance guidelines.

The arena is approximately 600 feet from the road, has two access roads from Pratt Lake, and parking is abundant.

Keeping house, washing diapers, ironing clothes, wiping runny noses—these tasks do not fire the imagination. Piloting jets, exploring the moon, writing books, painting portraits, composing soulstirring music-these sound dramatic and intriguing.

Some Christians have erroneously thought they were disfavored by God because they were not called by Him to some special work. They thought it impossible to be as spiritually minded as those whom He had chosen to serve Him in a dramatic field of service.

But it isn't the size or glamour of our tasks that counts most. Being in the stay, center of God's willwhether it is on a mission field in Africa or in one's or great own kitchen—is what really matters!

It's true God used Moses, Joshua, Esther, and John the Baptist to perform special assignments for Him. However, He also used a little Jewish house maid to point the leprous Naaman to healing, and her name wasn't even recorded in the accounting of this miracle.

Peeling potatoes and sweeping walks can be glamorous tasks, indeed, if Godappointed and "blessed by

A couple of weeks ago I-got my column started with some of the things I learned in Boy Scouts. I intended for that gibberish to lead into knot tying and on to a totally unrelated recount of one of my typical little disasters in life. Somehow I became sidetracked by that snake thing and devoted two columns to those crawly things. Ugh! Since ideas for this space are precious and hard to come by, I'm determined to follow through with my original outline... if I could just remember how it went. If I get off on that snake tangent again, you'll know I've lost it completely and have me committed somewhere.

As I mentioned two weeks ago, I learned a lot of stuff in Boy Scouts. Unfortunately, most of it has turned out to be pretty much useless over the past thirty-some years. I can't remember ever communicating with anyone using Morse code, but it might be worth a try on my kids. I've never had occasion to use any of my first aid skills such as tourniquets. splints. compresses or by-pass surgery. I don't recall ever fording a stream with a rope bridge, building a mud shelter or living on tree bark while lost in the woods. Either I'm leading your average family man.

However, there is one thing I learned in Boy Scouts that I use all the time. The bowline knot. The bowline is a misunderstood knot. To begin with, it's not pronounced like it is spelled. Being a nautical knot, a person would assume the "bow" would be pronounced like the "bow" of a boat. Wrong! It's pronounced like the bow in a girl's hair, or on a package. The "line" is "lin," an exception to the rule, "When two vowels go out walking, the first one does the talking. Red touches yellow, kill the fellow." There I go on that snake thing again. So, bowline is "bo-lin". Just remember, it's the same as President Clinton's pronunciation of bowling. For instance, "Hillary, I'm ah goin' tah tha basement tah do some bowlin."

Now that you're tongue-tied, let's tie the bowline. The bowline is formed by making an overhand loop, bringing the bitter end of the rope out of the loop, around the rope and back in the loop and snugged down. It is best remembered by the little story that goes, "The rabbit comes out of his hole, around the tree and back in his hole... hoping all the while a big snake hasn't crawled in there while he was gone." Or something like

Hearned many knots in Boy Scouts. Among them were the square knot, granny knot, figure eight, half hitch, clove hitch, two half hitches, sheepshank, slip knot and the sheep-dip. The bowline stands out because with a little practice, it is easy to tie, easy to un-tie and won't slip down on its loop, crushing whatever or whoever you're tying up. That reminds me of comedian Emo Phillips telling about taking a woman home with him. She said, "Ilove you're apartment Emo. Do you have cable?" Emo replied, "No, but I'm sure the ropes will be strong

All of this brings me to the incident I started to relate in this column two weeks ago. Long story short... I needed to move my airplane from one hangar to another (Note the correct a terribly dull life, or skills such as these aren't required by spelling of "hangar." You almost never see that.) Using a heavy rope, I threw one bowline around the tow hook on the left gear leg of my airplane. I threw a second bowline around the trailer hitch on my car and a third around the right gear leg. Three perfect bowlines in a row! I felt like standing at attention and reciting the Boy Scout Oath right there.

I began to tow the airplane across the grass. Going ever so slowly, I soon ran into trouble as the airplane wanted to roll ahead on even the slightest hint of an incline. My towing became a herky-jerky affair as I alternately stepped on the gas pedal and brake to keep the plane from rolling into the back of my car. As unbelievable as this may seem to you regular readers, I got the airplane to the destination without bending the prop or smashing the rear window of my car. I wonder what the auto insurance company would say if I told them I'd been rear-ended by an airplane?

When I had the plane where I wanted it, I jumped out to untie my bowlines and discovered what I first thought was a minor mishap. In my herking and jerking, the plane had rolled over the tow rope and it had wrapped itself around the left gear leg a couple of times. As I towed the airplane, the rope had crumpled the aluminum faring around the gear leg and broken the brake line. I thought about applying a tourniquet to the brake line, but most of the fluid had already drained out. It took nearly two weeks, a bunch of work and about two hundred bucks to repair the damage. I felt less and less smug about my bowlines as time wore on and bills had piled up.

To add insult to injury, a friend showed up just after I'd discovered the damage. He ribbed me pretty good, but returned a few hours later with a tow bar he'd fashioned in his workshop. It's a dandy! Made from heavy pipe and steel plate. it will allow me to hook my airplane to my car and tow it to My excuse for stupidity... the Boy Scouts never taught me metalworking and welding. It's real tough to tie a bowline in a steel pipe. The only good part about this story is there weren't any snakes involved!

As I walked out of the library with my bag full of books, I remembered someone giving me a quote about libraries. On returning home, I searched for it, pondered over its truth and even shuddered at its impact on my mind and heart. "The late Robert Kennedy, in speaking of the deterioration of things that matter, once said, "For there is another kind of violence, slower but just as deadly destructive as the shot or the bomb in the night. This is the violence of institutions; indifference and inaction and slow decay."

And journalist Bob Green ends his article with this stabbing truth: "When you close the doors of a library, you can hear the echoes of the slam forever."

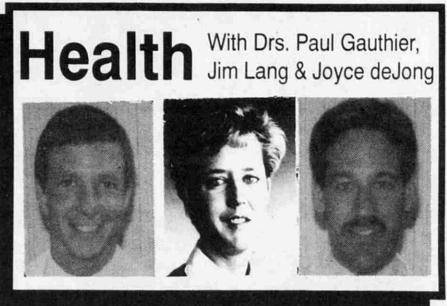

I settled on the couch with my three-year-old granddaughter, and opened the little board book that delightfully read This Little Piggy. What fun we had! Over and over again, she ask for it. Baa, Baa Black Sheep was another board book by the same author Moira Kemp, and although I read and sang this to her, her favorite was the piggy one. Perhaps it was my singing? These books are very durable and the color and drawings are enticing to a little child.

Another book, Moon Boy, was a quiet book about the catching of a moonbeam. It is fantasy-simply and yet beautifully done. It is a Bank Street Ready-to-Read book, for Level 2---reading together, by Barbara Brenner.

It is hard to not love an elephant! Especially one like the elephant in Uncle Elephant, written and illustrated by Arnold Lobel. Uncle Elephant, on hearing that his nephew's parents are lost at sea, comes to take him home with him. The growing relationship between them is nostalgic and yet a treasured truth about family members helping each other out in crisis times. Little elephant's parents do come home-- sometimes little children can worry about that.

Writing this, I remember the laughter, the singing and the closeness that Kourtney and I had that day. I am grateful for the open door of our library.

mandated to serve at least their minimum sentences before being eligible for parole. And, there would no longer be time off for good behavior. In fact, disciplinary credits will be imposed for misconduct in prison. Also, convicted criminals would be forced to serve their minimum sentences in secure tance.

History proves there is great release in releasing violent offenders early. We need to be serious about the idea that time behind bars is our method of punishment. By letting criminals out early, we send a message that the crime committed wasn't really all that bad, and you might get out early if you simply behave. What motivation is there for them to change?

The truth-in-sentencing package makes sense. Not only is it in the public's best interest, it also sends a strong message to convicted and would-be felons: You will pay for your crimes.

But the truth-in-sentencing package is really just one piece of the puzzle. To truly take a bite out of the crime rate, we must start looking at why people commit crimes and offer preventative solutions. Like many others, I believe welfare reform is crucial to this goal. Some people break the law because they are frustrated--frustrated with themselves and with the system. By pulling people to their feet, I believe there is less cause for many of the crimes committed.

The journey of welfare reform in Michigan has been a long one. For several years, we have been working toward a system that encourages hard work and self-sufficiency. The voyage took great strides in 1992, when Governor Engler announced comprehensive welfare reform initiatives that attracted the national spotlight. However, a great deal of work remains to develops, use a corn pad (doughnut shaped pads available at

We in the Legislature expect this year will be the time to bring about real reform. We must continue to strive for a new system--one that fosters pride and determination in Michigan's citizens. I believe it absolutely necessary that we break the cycle of poverty preventing many able-bodied people from reaching their potential.

Well, the public is sick and tired of Michigan's revolving Among the most significant of these reforms are the Social Contract and Michigan Opportunity and Skills Training door justice system; sick and tired of reading and hearing about innocent citizens who have fallen victim to another (MOST) programs. > I strongly believe reforms like these would ease a lot of the frustration out there today, thereby cutting the high crime levels. Welfare reform, paired with "get-tough" legislation like truth-in-sentencing, will go a long way in making Michigan a safer and better place to live far into the future.

CITY OF LOWELL PUBLIC NOTICE

The Lowell City Council, acting as the Zoning Board of Appeals, will conduct two public hear ings at their regularly scheduled meeting on Monday, May 2, 1994 at 7:30 p.m. at the Lowell City Hall, 301 E. Main, Lowell, Michigan.

The purpose of said hearings will be to receive comments on the following variance requests:

Daniel DesJarden (applicant) request a variance to construct a 32' X 30' detached garage at 206 S. Jackson. The garage is proposed to be built 23' from Kent Street and 15' from Jackson St. where 25' is required. An existing garage will be removed.

Donald Green (applicant) requests a variance to construct a 20' X 40' addition to his home at 226 N. Center. The addition will be within 2 feet of the south property line where 6 feet is required.

Interested persons may submit comments prior to the meeting or appear in person at City Hall

DEAR JONATHAN: In January, after my car failed to start, I had it towed to a local garage for servicing. At the time I had the car towed, I also asked the garage to replace the brakes. Seven weeks later the car still did not start properly, the brakes were still not working properly and my car developed an oil leak. Finally, after looking at my car again, the mechanic told me that all my car needed to resolve the starting problem was a new battery and this seemed to work. As for the brake problem, on my drive home, the brakes went out and I drove through a stop sign. The mechanic told me that the brake clamps had fallen off. I have spent over $360 on repairs for this vehicle and countless hours of my time, and it still isn't right. Do I have any recourse against the servicing garage? Does it matter that I never received any of my old parts back?

JONATHAN SAYS: You might have a cause of action against the servicing garage under one or more theories of law, including negligent repair or breach of contract. Under the breach of contract theory, you need to show that the garage failed to place your car in a specified condition. In other words, you agreed to pay the garage to fix specific things wrong with your vehicle and they failed to repair those items. Since you did in fact pay the garage and it appears that they failed to properly repair your car, then you might have a breach of contract action against them.

The negligent repair theory requires you to show by a preponderance of the evidence that the garage was negligent in repairing your car. This means that the evidence supporting your claim of negligent repair must outweigh the evidence that the servicing garage did not negligently repair your car. One question which needs to be asked and answered is whether the mechanic who worked on your car exercised the ordinary skill required of mechanics in your locale. The facts you present suggest that the mechanic who worked on your car may not have exercised this ordinary skill. If you can prove this, then you might have a cause of action for negligent

In addition to the above, you may have one or more causes of action under the Michigan Motor Vehicle Service & Repair Act. Under this law, a motor vehicle repair facility which is not specifically exempted is required to be registered with the Michigan Secretary of State's office. Further, mechanics, unless specifically exempted by the Act, must apply for and receive certification from the Secretary of State's Office.

In addition to requiring the registration of repair facilities and the certification of mechanics, this Act is designed to prevent unfair and deceptive practices by repair facilities and

If the repair facility that you went to was not registered by the state of Michigan and/or if the mechanic who worked on your vehicle was not certified by the state of Michigan, then the facility and/or the mechanic would be in violation of the Act. In addition to other penalties set forth in the Act, you would be entitled to recover any amount you have paid to the repair facility for the repair of your vehicle.

This Act also requires a repair facility to inform a customer of his or her right to receive certain replaced parts on the vehicle. This information is to be given to the customer prior to that customer authorizing any work to be performed on his or her vehicle. This information is usually given to the customer on the contract or work order form and states as

You are entitled by law to the return of all parts replaced, except those which are too heavy or large, and those required to be sent back to the manufacturer or distributor because of warranties or an exchange agreement. You are entitled to inspect your parts which cannot be returned to

A repair facility which fails to inform a customer of his or her rights regarding replacement parts is in violation of the Act and that facility would be liable to you in an amount equal to your damages plus reasonable attorney fees and costs. In the event the facility's violation of the Act is determined to be a willful and flagrant violation, then you would be entitled to recover double your damages plus reasonable attorney fees and costs.
