Township revisits hall addition with new priorities in mind

By Marc Popiolek

Contributing Writer

The Lowell Township Hall could get a face-lift providing construction costs for a new addition fall within the township's guidelines.

Two years ago the township decided not to go ahead with a 10,000 square foot addition because the estimates were well above what the township could afford.

The estimates ranged between $400,000 to $700,000, but the township only had $300,000 to spend on the project.

At a recent meeting the township was presented with preliminary plans that are scaled down from two years ago.

Originally the township had plans for two 5,000 square to only 2,500 square feet per floor.

The change in space is due to the new high school being built. As part of the original construction plans, the school was going to use some space for their office needs, but that is not a factor any more.

The township still wants to add onto the hall because they feel the addition would benefit the community.

"At some point in time, we'll need to build something for the community. We are growing fast and in five years, we'll need the extra space," said Township Supervisor John Timpson.

Timpson said the hall could be rented out for community meetings or receptions and would also be beneficial during election periods.

One cost saving measure has the township building a

Third annual Christmas Through Lowell hits home this weekend

By Marc Popiolek Contributing Writer

This weekend Lowell residents have the opportunity to look for that special gift without the crowds. The third annual Christmas Through Lowell will take place this weekend. This year's tour includes 13 homes which will offer crafts of all sorts.

Diane Gamach, one of the event organizers, said the homes are more consolidated this year which should make it easier for people to visit every home.

"We don't have many homes out in the country and each home will have a numbered Christmas tree sign designating participating homes," said Gamach.

Crafts will include woodwork, knitting, quilts and other artistic pieces.

As an extra benefit, visitors can collect brunch recipes and door prizes.

"At the end of the trip, people will have a complete brunch menu and can win prizes," said Gamach. Last year the event drew over 500 people to the homes and Gamach expects the same turn out this year. "This takes a lot of work on the part of every home entered.

We have to transform our homes into a showcase for our crafts," said Gamach.

The event will take place Friday from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m., Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday from 11 a.m. to 3

Sunday was added to accommodate the increase of people, but only select homes will be participating.

Gamach said maps can be found at any home or area business such as Family Fare and Cousins' Card and Gift Shoppe.

Veteran's Day came and went last week. I noticed the employees at the Post Office next door observed the occasion by taking the day off. I was a little disappointed that no one at the only federal facility in town saw to it that the flag was raised for the day. A call came into our office to complain that the flags were not placed along Main St. The powers that be hustled around and got the job done by late morning. A breeze picked up in the afternoon and the downtown looked dressed for the occasion, all a-flutter in red, white and blue. I wonder how many people knew what the occasion was?

I'm not condemning anyone for how they observe Veteran's Day. You know what they say about people who live in glass houses. I'm no better than the next guy. My annual joke around the shop is to ask if I can have the day off, since I'm the only veteran working here. That always gets a laugh, but never a day

To be honest, I have to admit I've always had a little more than a passing interest in the military history of this country. It simply amazes me that men and women will enter into military service knowing full well they may be killed, maimed or blown to smithereens for their efforts. Consequently, I honor those who've served in uniform at any time and in any capacity. They all went in harm's way to defend this country

25 YEARS AGO IN THE LEDGER - NOV. 13, 1969

In the months preceding election day in 1992, Bill Clinton focused his entire campaign on themes of change and renewal, promising both to the American people. But since his inauguration, we have seen nothing but the same tired, old ideas of big months, we will continue to fight for job creation, further tax government, high taxes and snarling bureaucracy come out of Washington.

On November 8, 1994, voters across Michigan and the nation sent one of the loudest messages in years by booting out of office the legislators and congressional members who had supported the policies of more government and higher taxes. Instead, the American people overwhelmingly supported candidates who believed in the principles that our forefathers who If you have any questions or concerns, please feel free to started this country sought to establish-that is, the right of free people to live in a country with liberty and opportunity created by individual responsibility and initiative, not by big 7536 government and high taxes.

Because the Republican Party espoused these basic principles, the electorate responded by giving it control of the U.S. Congress for the first time in 40 years and electing eight new Republican governors. In fact, not one incumbent Republican governor, senator or representative on the national level was defeated.

The tidal wave swept through Michigan, as well. Here, we not only re-elected Governor Engler, but we also elected a new Republican secretary of state, a new Republican U.S. senator and a new Republican U.S. representative. In addition, voters handed control of the state House to the Republicans for the first time in about 30 years. Gains were made in several local offices, as well.

However, I don't see Election Day 1994 as the day the Republican Party won over the Democratic Party. Rather, I see it as the day the American people won over a government that had grown too big and too expensive. Nationally, people were angry about President Clinton's return to the old liberal policies of big government and high taxes.

Republicans, now in control in Washington, have a responsibility to deliver on their "Contract with America"-a contract for smaller government and lower taxes. If they don't deliver, they too will be thrown out like the Democrats before them.

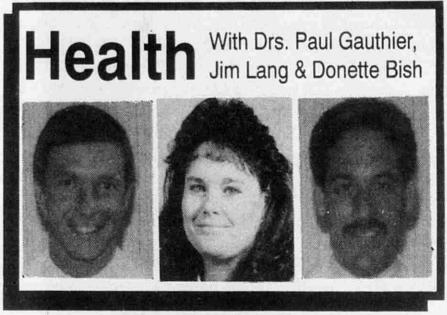

But if they do deliver, they will be the majority party for years to come

Consider what happened in Michigan. Four years ago, Governor Engler and we as legislative leaders-who have supported lower taxes and more efficient government-promised action. Working together, we pushed through one of the most ambitious and reform-minded agendas in Michigan history. We delivered 11 tax cuts, education and school finance reform and several anti-crime and welfare reform measures to Michigan citizens.

And by looking at election results, it is obvious citizens agree with the direction in which our state is headed. They sent those of us who pushed these ideas back to Lansing to keep the state moving forward.

Now, we have been charged to make Michigan an even better place to make a living and raise a family. In the coming cuts and education and welfare reform. We have a full and demanding agenda, but we also have lawmakers in place who are committed to the ideas supported by the Michigan people.

In that vein, I want to thank my supporters for re-electing me to the Michigan Senate. As your public servant, I will continue to do my best to represent you and your families in the Michigan Legislature. To do this effectively, I seek your input. contact me or my staff at any time. CONCUSSION IN COMPETITIVE SPORTS

Recently there has been quite a bit of media attention being paid to concussions in professional athletes, particularly those in The National Football League. Since this may occur at any level of athletic competition, we thought we would highlight some of the current recommendations regarding how long an is that I can't afford to hire a lawyer for such a small sum of money. athlete should be sidelined from this type of head injury.

A concussion can be graded in three ways: mild, moderate, and severe. Mild concussions involve a blow to the head associated with no loss of consciousness and mild amnesia (memory loss) of less than 30 minutes after the injury. This is the typical injury where the athlete "gets his bell rung." If this their expenses. However, if they are unsuccessful in getting your is the athlete's first concussion, and he is examined by an money back, then you owe them nothing other than their exattending doctor who notes full recovery, consideration may penses. be given to returning the player to competition at that time.

Moderate concussions involve a period of lost consciousness that lasts at least five minutes. These injuries are considered moderately severe, with amnesia lasting longer than 30 min- relative, who would be named as the defendant, would then be utes but less than 24 hours. If the athlete enjoys full recovery, he may resume participation in one month.

All of the preceding recommendations will change if an athlete has more than one concussion in a season. If he or she does, termination of the athletes season should be seriously considered.

JONATHAN SAYS: Probably. Let me explain. As long as your ex-wife survives you, she will continue to act as the guardian of your children assuming she does not become incapacitated or is not deemed to be an unfit mother for some reason. However, there is always the possibility that she might predecease you. In this event, you would end up getting custody of your children and if you died without including a provision in your will naming the guardian of your children, then it would be left up to the probate court to appoint a guardian on their behalf.

DEAR JONATHAN: Two days after moving into our new house, our basement flooded after a heavy rainstorm. Prior to purchasing the house, the sellers provided us with a Seller's Disclosure Statement and indicated on the statement that they lived there for 10 years and there has never been any evidence of water in the basement. However, after having several contractors out at the house to give us estimates on what it would cost to fix the problem, they all indicated that this flooding was not a onetime occurrence; it had been going on for some time. It is going to cost a lot of money to resolve this problem. Do we have any rights against the sellers?

JONATHAN SAYS: Yes. Assuming your contractors are correct and the problem with the basement flooding existed while the seller's were in possession of the property, then their representation to you on the Seller's Disclosure Statement was an intentional misrepresentation and fraud.

Generally speaking, under Michigan law you are entitled to receive the equivalent of what you would have received if the representations made by the sellers had been true. The measure of damages is the difference between the actual value of the house as it was (with the water problems in the basement) and the value of the house if it were in the condition it was represented to you (without any water problems in the basement). Although it might appear that the difference in the two values is basically the cost of correcting the problem, determining damages in these types of cases is not as clear cut as that. I recommend that you meet with a lawyer to review the facts of your case in detail and determine a proper course of action.

DEAR JONATHAN: I loaned a relative of mine $1,500 over a year ago. At the time he agreed to pay back the loan at the rate of $50 per month over a three-year period and pay seven percent interest on the outstanding balance. He even signed a promissory note containing those terms. After making the first two payments, he stopped making payments altogether. I have called him several times about reinstating the payments and he always has an excuse and promises to start making payments again soon. I think I have been patient long enough and I want my money back. The problem What is your recommendation'

JONATHAN SAYS: There are some collection attorneys who will take this type of case on a contingency basis. This means that if they are successful in getting your money back or any portion of it, then they take one-third of what they recover after deducting

Another alternative is for you to represent yourself in small claims court. For a $32 fee you can file your own complaint in small claims court and represent yourself at the hearing. Your

There are two potential problems to this approach. First of all, the defendant may not want to represent himself and instead may Severe concussions are severe head injuries. These indi- want to hire a lawyer. Since lawyers are not allowed to practice in However, with the defendant being represented by a lawyer, your representing yourself is probably not a good idea.

The other problem is even if you win and get a judgment against the defendant, you still have to try to collect the judgment from him. This can sometimes be more difficult than getting the judgment. If you do get a judgment and the defendant refuses to comply, then at that time you might want to hire a lawyer for the sole purpose of enforcing the judgment on your behalf.

DEAR JONATHAN: I am divorced from my wife. She has custody of our three small children. I am in the process of making out my will and I want to include a provision naming who I would like to see be the guardian of my children if something happened to me. My lawyer, however, said this would be unnecessary since my wife will continue to act as guardian regardless of whether l was alive or not. Is this accurate?

I think it makes sense to include a provision in your will now as to who you would like to act as the guardian of your children and also as the conservator of your children's estates in the event neither you nor your ex-wife are alive. By doing this you leave nothing to chance.

It's an art that Superior Furniture doesn't want to do without

By Thad Kraus owell Ledger Editor

In the eyes of Judy Diephouse, recognition has een long overdue.

When Diephouse first started decorative painting 20 years ago, she was considered a crafter. Today, her painting is considered a treasured art form.

"For years we were considered craft people. There are some that still call us crafters." Diephouse said.

The Chicago native and her partner of six years, Lynne Deptula, have developed a unique style of free-hand decorative painting on furni-

Admiral Petroleum to fill up former Action Auto building

By Thad Kraus Lowell Ledger Editor

In an agreement with the state of Michigan which states it will take care of any environmental problems stemming from an oil leak, Dennis Lemmen, president of Admiral Petroleum, purchased his eighth defunct Action Auto store.

The purchase became official on Nov. 1. The Action Auto branch automotive stores went bankrupt approximately five years ago. "What I'm doing with the store in Lowell is similar to what I've done in Three Rivers, Portage, Caro and Saginaw," Lemmen said. "I've brought in other entities

TODD J. SPENCER Address unknown

Lowell's Todd Phillips grounded his five-point 160pound buck at his grandmother's land on Grindle. Phillips said the buck came in about 7:30 on a slight run. He dropped the buck with his 12-gauge from 35-40 yards out. The buck was Phillips' second since taking up the sport. Phillips was on a school break from Saginaw Valley.

Saranac's Sprague wins "First Buck" contest

Brian Sprague, Saranac, was the Lowell Ledger and area merchants ' "First Buck" winner. Sprague arrived at the Ledger office approximately 10 minutes before 8 a.m. Tuesday with a 160-pound, four-point buck. Sprague was out just 15 minutes when he saw his prize-winning buck. Watching the buck through his scope until it got to within 60 yards, Sprague then fired his 12-gauge Remington X-70, dropping the buck in its tracks. Sprague was out with his son, Trevor, who will get his first taste of the sport next year during the bow season. "I enjoy the nature part of deer hunting," Sprague said. "It's very enjoying." The Saranac man has hunted since his youth. Tuesday's buck marked his 12th deer since he started hunting

John Crissman, Alto, followed Sprague approximately 20 minutes later with a threepoint, 150 pound buck which he downed on his Alto farm. Using his 44-magnum, Crissman plugged the buck in the neck from 20-yards out. The Alto man had only been out 30 minutes when he saw the buck. "I pulled the trigger at 7:31," he said. Crissman has been hunting since the age of 14.

Lowell's Terry Abel and his son Brian were out at 52nd Street and Pratt Lake when Terry set his sights on a seven-point 160-pound buck. Abel, using his Remington 870 with scope, hit the buck, which then ran 60-yards before falling. It was Abel's third buck and to share the space that will compliment Admiral."

The environmental problems which surfaced while Action Auto was in business are currently being worked on, according to Lemmen. "The environmental problems are not as bad as everyone thinks or what I originally thought," Lemmen said.

The new Admiral, which is scheduled to open Dec. 15, will offer more diversified products. Lemmen said it will be more in line with the convenience marts.

With the opening of the new Admiral store, one might assume that the current store would close down — not so. "I'm going to leave it open and see how things go," Lemmen said.

The former Action Auto covers approximately 8,000 square feet. Its size will allow Lemmen to lease space to three other businesses.

Currently, Showboat

Video and Blimpy's are also slated to open on Dec. 15. Showboat Video, 2333 W. Main, and Blimpy's are owned by Jim and Sandra Fizer.

Lemmen said there is still a 2,000 square foot space available for leasing. Lemmen is pleased that the new location will also provide a side street access. "This may also bring us different clientele.

"We were interested in moving Showboat Video because of the additional space it will provide," Sandra Fizer said."It will allow us to become more modern. We will add all new shelving and implement a computer system to help make us more efficient."

Blimpy's will offer sub sandwiches, salads, breakfast sandwiches, soup, cookies, brownies and pop.
