Council votes to proceed with Bowes Road relocation project

By Thad Kraus
Lowell Ledger Editor

By a slim margin of 3-2, the Lowell City Council voted to proceed with the Bowes Road relocation project.

The vote ended months of discussion as to what would be the total cost of the project; the city's cost, the township's cost; how much of an issue safety was; and whether or not there were other options to consider.

Councilman Bill Thompson, one of two descending votes, said he believed the city would be better off to invest its money elsewhere.

"This project was first brought up because of the safety issue. Safety is not an issue anymore," Thompson said. "I think there are other options that we could do. However, this was the council's decision and I will support it."

The project, including construction and acquisition, will cost the city $155,700. In addition the city will receive $40,800 in federal grant monies for road relocation.

Lowell Township will also kick in its share of $40,000 to handle all costs related to "its side" of the road, including construction and acquisition.

The Federal Surface Transportation Funds will support some of the township's costs for intersection improvements. Lowell Township supervisor John Timpson said if a reduction is accomplished, the township will still pledge $40,000.

The Kent County Road Commission has estimated that the city should budget $50,500 for acquisition of city property. Lowell city manager Dave Pasquale said the acquisition cost would be handled through the general fund.

The city's costs break down as follows:
• Construction $170,000
• Acquisition $50,500
• Traffic light, electric utility relocation and drainage work in right of way $16,000.

"The project will serve the long term transportation needs of the community," Pasquale said. "The city is in a position where the road project is affordable."

Mayor James Maatman, who also voted against continuing the project, said he was not ready to approve it at this time.

"I think there are some other options. I also think there could be some unknown property acquisition costs which could be significantly higher," Maatman said. "I also think there are roads in worse shape that are in need of repair that have bigger safety issues."

Maatman said he favored a delay in the project over a cul-de-sac. "That may have put some hardship on some of the people on Bowes Road," he said.

Drain commissioner backs Mill Isle development while providing suggestions for flooding problems

By Marc Popiolek
Contributing Writer

Valley Vista residents searching for a solution to their rising water table problems walked away from a meeting with Kent County Drain Commissioner Roger Laninga with some answers, but not the kind they were looking for.

Nine residents from the subdivision informed Laninga that sump pumps on Roberta Jayne are constantly running to compensate for a high water table.

They also expressed their concern over the proposed development of Mill Isle Estates.

"We don't want to stop development...that's not our intent," said Marilyn Branham, 280 Roberta Jayne. "We're concerned about our water problem now and what effect the development may have on that problem."

It's Laninga's opinion that the Mill Isle development will not affect the current water table problems and may in fact help relieve the situation.

"We can't ask any more of the developer. He's taken care of his plat," said Laninga. "His problem is separate from yours and it can't hurt your problem...it probably will help."

The development will

DDA, new library and Riverwalk Festival success shared by community leaders

The first annual meeting of the Lowell GFWC Women's Club was Sept. 13 at noon at Schneider Manor. The focus was to update the members on the recent happenings in the community. Dave Pasquale, city manager; Charles Myers, chairman of the Library Building Fund, and Charlene Chapman, president of the Lowell Area Chamber of Commerce, each gave a presentation. Pasquale highlighted the DDA projects that are scheduled to begin in the spring of 1996. The removal of the Hobby Stop building will expand the beautiful view of the Flat River in the downtown area. A pedestrian plaza, being referred to as the Riverwalk, on Lafayette Street, complete with landscaping and benches, will follow the Flat River from Avery Street to M-21. Streetscaping improvements between Jefferson Street and Broadway Street will include new sidewalks with the brick inlays, historical lighting with underground wiring, and landscaping with benches along Main Street. Broadway-Riverside parking lot and the King Milling city parking lot will also be renovated. In 1997 the streetscaping improvements will be continued from Broadway Street to Lincoln Lake Road. Once completed, the Michigan Department of Transportation will resurface M-21. The purpose of these improvements is to be a catalyst for the redeveloping of the downtown of Lowell.

Myers relayed that the existing Lowell Library has been in the Graham Building for 73 years and provides 900 square feet. Although books can be requested from Grand Rapids by computer, the availability is sparse because of the lack of space at the Lowell branch. The proposed library will be located on Monroe Street adjacent to Riverside School. It will have a high visibility from Main Street and will complement the new Riverwalk Pedestrian Plaza. The estimated cost is 1.2 billion dollars. The building fund has already acquired over $700,000. The ground-breaking is scheduled for the second week in April, 1996, which is also National Library Week. Myers encouraged all to get involved with the "Buy A Brick" fund-raiser because libraries don't discriminate and all can benefit from a new library. Myers can be reached at FMB.

Chapman recounted the success of the Labor Day Riverwalk Arts and Crafts Festival. The Lowell Area Chamber of Commerce sponsors the festival to raise the necessary funds to maintain the office and the personnel. The "Riverwalk Duckies" floated down the Grand River and J.J. Haggai was announced the winner of $500 thirty minutes after the start of the race. There was live music and face painting for the children throughout the two-day affair. Canoe rides, a pig roast and, of course, the juried arts and crafts offered something for every age group. Plans are already being made for next year's festival.

ATTORNEYS AT LAW

Some good photos of the Sunday, September 24 Fly-in at the Lowell Airport have been made available to the Ledger. We've opted to use a few of them to offer readers another look at the successful first time effort.

A "Huey" from the Michigan Air Guard Unit at Grand Ledge was on display at the Fly-in. It was a huge hit with youngsters. They were allowed inside for a firsthand glimpse.

Five WWII vintage Stearman trainers attended the Lowell Airport Fly-in. The plane in the foreground is in a Navy paint scheme and owned by Roger Simpson. The other plane is in army colors and owned by Robert Pingston. Both planes are based in Brighton, Michigan.

The Grand Rapids Chapter of the Experimental Aircraft Association has several aircraft at the Lowell Airport Fly-in.

Five locally owned aircraft "hopped" rides at the Lowell airport Fly-in Sunday, Sept. 24. Approximately 80 people took advantage of the opportunity to see the area from the air. Here Roger Brown departs with a passenger eager for the thrill of a ride in an open cockpit biplane. The pilots donated their planes, time and fuel to the fundraiser.

The Calm before the storm. With the griddles hot and ready for batter the pancake chefs await the 8:00 a.m. serving time. Approximately 500 pancake breakfasts were served.

Grand Rapids Aeromed was on hand for those interested in the air ambulance helicopter. Aeromed is based at Kent County International Airport and services West Michigan.

Focus On Education

Parent Involvement Linked to Student Achievement

Studies and reports confirm what educators have been saying all along: students are more likely to be achievers when parents are actively involved in their schools.

The Kent County Education Association echoes the same message by urging parents to continue their important role in the children's schools. KCEA members wish to remind parents that they are welcome to come into the schools and get to know their children's teachers and support staff.

As we start the school year, we would like to reaffirm our commitment to the students and parents of Kent and Ottawa Counties. We want all parents to know that we:

- expect all children to learn and will help them do so;
- will enforce positive discipline codes based on clear and fair rules;
- will get to know each child's needs, interest, special talents and learning style; and
- view the entire community as a "living classroom" and will use all the resources at our disposal to enhance education.

In addition, we ask parents to:

- teach their children basic discipline at home, so they are ready and willing to accept the teacher's authority at school;
- encourage their children to do well in school;
- send their children to school rested and with a good breakfast, so that they can concentrate and be receptive to learning;
- limit and monitor television viewing;
- create a home environment that values learning; and
- model the kind of behavior they want their children to adopt.

"If parent involvement is the key to student achievement and each one of us fulfills our roles as a parent and educator, our schools can be safe havens for school children. They can be a setting for quality teaching and learning," said Karen Hamelink, President, Kent County Education Association. "We are committed to providing that kind of environment and we need all the help we can get from parents in order to succeed."

Focus on Education is brought to you by MEA members in Kent and Ottawa County.

Rebuilding year turns into promising season for Lowell girls' basketball team

By Marc Popiolek
Contributing Writer

What was supposed to be a rebuilding year for the Lowell girls' basketball team has quickly turned into a successful year.

Despite a one-point loss early last week, the Red Arrows downed Forest Hills Central to move to 4-1 in their conference, 4-5 overall.

"The girls passed their first real test by coming back from their first conference loss and beating Forest Hills," said coach Ken Akers. "We're a young club, but we've played well recently and are in excellent position in our conference."

The Red Arrows' first conference defeat came at the hands of Hastings and their star player Rachel Young.

The 54-53 loss was difficult for Lowell, but their effort in the second half and at the end of the game may provide momentum for the remainder of the season.

The Red Arrows found themselves down by seven in the fourth quarter, but with 17 ticks left they had an opportunity to walk away with a win. "We had three good looks at the basket in the final 17 seconds, but the ball just wouldn't fall," said Akers.

Tammy Stauffer, Emily Dunn and Lisa Murphy all had a chance to seal the victory, but the ball didn't bounce their way.

Stauffer finished with 16 points, Murphy nine and Dunn five, but the Lowell's leading scorer was Elena Richmond with 17.

"It was a see saw battle with both teams battling back and forth. It could've gone either way, but unfortunately it didn't go for us," said Akers. "But I was proud of our effort and the way we came back to defeat Forest Hills."

Aided by a suffocating third quarter press the Red Arrows managed to easily defeat the visiting squad from Forest Hills.

"We were up by four at halftime, but we managed to increase it by nine and then 18 because of our press," said Akers. "We can't press for the whole game so we pick our spots and in this game it propelled us to an easy win."

Lowell was led by Emily Dunn's 13 points and 10 rebounds. Tammy Stauffer chipped in 11 points for the Red Arrows.

Akers said his team's defense keeps improving and their rebounding is better than he expected, but he is not looking too far ahead.

"This is a young team who is performing well, but we're just taking one game at a time," said Akers.

The schedule gets a little easier for Lowell with a game against Middleville, but will be tough on Thursday with a game against Northview, 4-1 in the conference and 6-4 overall.

Lowell's Melanie Tucker looks to dish the ball off to a cutting Red Arrow teammate in action against Forest Hills Central. The Red Arrows won the contest 47-36.

Tammy Stauffer releases a jump shot inside the lane against the Rangers.

Red Arrow cross country teams make strides to improve with season's finishing kick nearing

By Marc Popiolek
Contributing Writer

It's midseason for Lowell's cross country teams and coach Tom Harper knows what to expect. He also knows that now is the time to get his teams ready for the season finishing kick.

The boys' team posted a 15-45 victory over a visiting Hastings team, while the girls fell short against their counterparts 22-33.

Coming into the meet Harper expected his boys' team to dominate, while the girls ran strong and continued to show great improvement.

"Right now we're working to improve our times for the end of the season," said Harper. "The boys are running good and the more the girls race, the better they get."

Lowell's John Wojciakowski and Ryan Wittenbach tied for top honors with a time of 17:58.

Casey Harper took third, 18:12, while Frank Kirsch, 18:18, and Matt Inman, 18:38, rounded out the top five finishers.

The closest Hastings runner was Tim Rounds with a time of 18:54.

On the girls' side Annie Oesch continues to display the talents that make her one of the top two runners in the conference.

Although she placed second last week with a 21:01, Harper insists she is the one to beat.

"Annie is still 1-2 in the conference. It was only a mid-season race, so I'm not concerned about her finish... as long as she gets ready for our final meets," said Harper.

Lowell's Andrea Baker placed sixth with a 24:18, while Amy Teunis took seventh, 24:26. Beth Larabee, eighth, 25:08, and Angie Johnson, tenth, with a 26:03.

Speed workouts and more miles will be the normal routine for both squads as they prepare for a tough finish to the season.

"Right now is the time to work hard, not a week before your big meets," said Harper. "We can't lay off now and expect to finish strong. It all starts now."

As the season winds down the teams will get a close look at their competition for the conference and regional titles with invitationals at Rockford and Saranac.

The regular season concludes with rival Wyoming Park.

"The end of the season is the toughest because within a ten-day period we face Park, the conference meet before we qualify for the state's at the regional meet," said Harper. "There just isn't much training time going into that week, so we've got to do it now."

Harper believes the boys' team and Oesch have an excellent chance of qualifying for the state meet, if they work hard enough.

"Our depth on the boys' team puts us in good position to qualify, while Annie has had a great year and will get better near the end," he said.

Lowell faces Forest Hills Central before going to the Rockford Invitational on Saturday.

The 15-mile course allows Lowell to get a look at the best the state has to offer with Caledonia, Cedar Springs, Fremont and South Christian all running. "We'll get a good look at what we can expect three weeks from now," said Harper.

Jon Dean brings it home in a conference meet against Hastings.

Helpful Hints for Successful Conferences

- Find out if there is anything your child wants you to talk about with the teacher.
- Decide what you want to ask the teacher.
- Determine what helpful information you can tell the teacher about your child.
- Be on time and stay within the time set aside for your appointment.
- Be sure to air any concerns you might have, but remember to stay calm and seek solutions.
- Make sure your child doesn't worry about the conference by reassuring your child that the meeting is to benefit him or her.
- Be sure to focus on your child's progress, as well as his or her potential.
- Ask the teacher for specific suggestions on how you can help your child do better.
- Request a further explanation if you don't understand something.
- Sum up the conference by reviewing the decisions the teacher and you have made.
- Discuss the results of the conference with your child and share any learning plans the teacher and you have made.
- Start immediately on any action plans the teacher and you have worked out.
- Stay in regular touch with the teacher to discuss the progress your child is making.

Parents and teachers ... the more we work together, the more prepared our children will be to face the challenges of tomorrow.

It's Time for Parent-Teacher Conferences

One of the most important things you can do to support your child in school is to attend conferences. It's a special time for parents and teachers to meet and find ways to make school the best learning experience it can be.

All children learn in different ways. They have their own individual personalities, and their own listening and work habits. To help their students learn new knowledge and skills, teachers must know as much as they can about each child's likes and dislikes. No one knows more about these things than you, the parents. And no one has more influence over your children than you.

That's why teachers need your help to do a first-class job. Working together, you and the teacher can help your child have a successful school year.

Looking forward to seeing you at this year's conference.

Construction of new Rite Aid building expected to be completed by June

By Marc Popiolek
Contributing Writer

Customers of Rite-Aid will soon have a bigger and better facility in which to do their shopping, according to Rite-Aid officials.

The Rite-Aid business located at 413 E. Main will soon be relocated to the corner of Valley Vista and M-21.

Craig Muckle, public relations manager of Rite-Aid Pharmacies, said the new store will consist of a 9,600 square foot building with a drive-through pharmacy service.

Construction is expected to begin shortly with a completion date of June 1996.

"The Rite Aid Corporation is looking to, where it can, construct larger prototype stores," Muckle said. "Along with a drive-through pharmacy, the Lowell store will also provide a faxing service, photo service, postal ser-VICES and will stock a limited amount of convenience foods. Customers will have an opportunity to buy more and not have to make as many stops."

Muckle said he suspects the larger store will mean more employees, but would not estimate on a figure.

The property on which the building is being constructed is being purchased from Henry Pestka.

Nevertheless, the passions, whether violent or not, should never be so expressed as to reach the point of causing disgust; and music, even in situations of the greatest horror, should never be painful to the ear but should flatter and charm it, and thereby always remain music.
