Fund Balance Spared

•••• Academic programs untouched. Budget cuts of $233,500 enables Lowell Schools to operate in the black this year.

By J. N. Boorsma Contributing Writer

While Lowell Area Schools received some good news from the state about funding, it wasn't enough to prevent board members from approving cuts of $233,500 to the 1997-98 budget.

Earlier this fall, the state released a two-year state aid package that left Lowell Area Schools in good standings for this year. Under the plan, there would be a freeze on the foundation allowance in the second year, a restoring of money for the special education and At Risk programs, a 40/60 blended count, and a decrease in the retirement contribution made by school districts.

District business manager Connie Gillette said the reduction in retirement is quite a hefty savings for the district this year, totaling about $357,000. However, the freeze on the foundation grant the following year could mean the district may lose about $553,000. The freeze comes because of the recent settlement of the Durant case, where school districts will receive repayment for underfunded state mandated programs that ran before September 1997.

The goal will be to continue to keep a close eye on this year's budget, because it is so lean and because of the outlook for the following year.

Connie Gillette Lowell Schools' Finance Manager

With that in mind, the Lowell Board of Education approved $233,500.

None of the items were academic programs. The items hit included: professional development, $15,000; supplies, $10,000; curriculum, $10,000; central office administration, $32,500; transportation, $20,000; contingency/capital outlay, $110,000; early retirement, $30,000; and athletics, $6,000.

The board unanimously approved the cuts at its regular board meeting Monday night.

The cuts will allow the district to operate in the black this year, without having to touch its fund balance, which is currently at about $1.84 million. In the budget approved in June, officials had estimated the district would need to pull about $320,000 out of the fund balance for the 1997-

Senior class votes to break graduation tradition

•••• By almost a 2-1 count, seniors voted to nix 24 years of graduation at the Showboat amphitheatre in favor of Red Arrow Stadium.

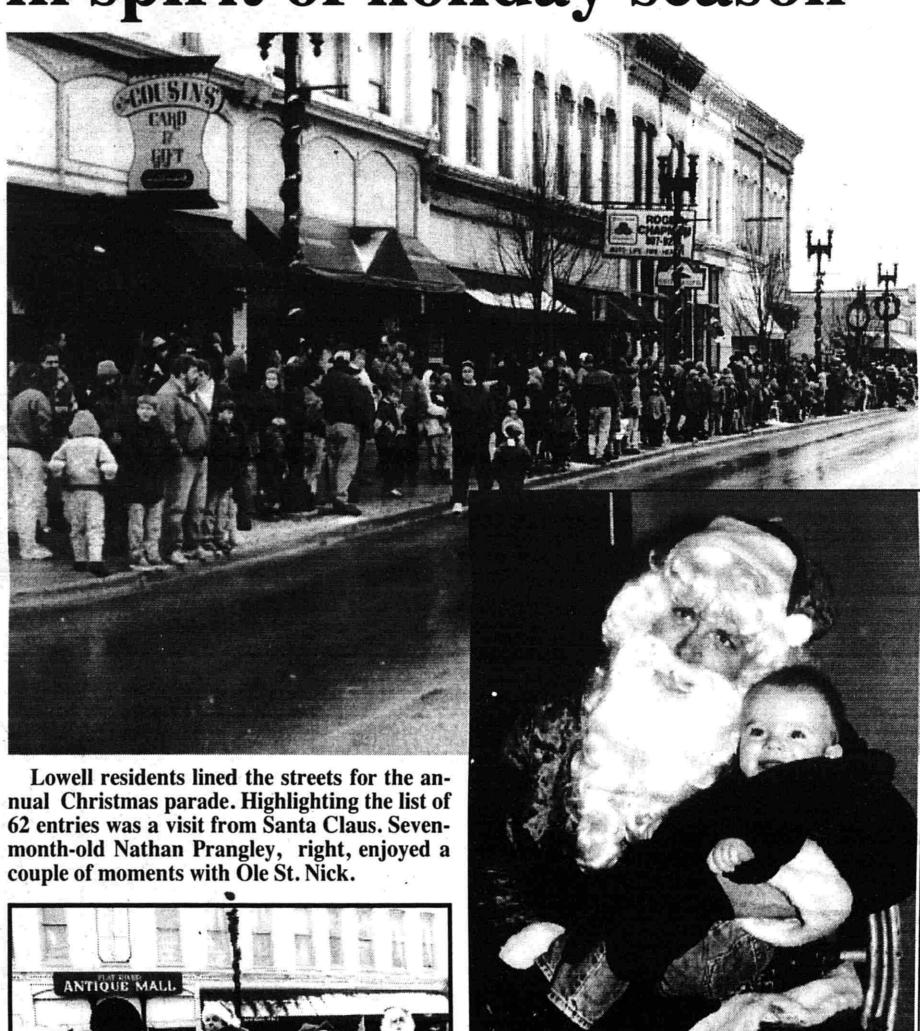

By J. N. Boorsma. Contributing Writer

The Lowell High School Class of 1998 may be breaking from tradition when the students take their ceremonious walk down the graduation aisle next spring.

The students discussed and voted, 98-53 to move the graduation site to Red Arrow Stadium. Seniors were polled on whether or not they wanted to move the graduation ceremonies from the Lowell Showboat-which has been the site of the Lowell High School graduation for the last 24 years.

Lowell School District's Christmas parade marches in spirit of holiday season

By Thaddeus J. Kraus Lowell Ledger Editor

The spirit of Christmas could be felt along the entire Lowell Christmas parade route...from Bushnell Elementary to the First United Methodist Church.

The 62 parade entries marched past the lights of Lowell and the hundreds of residents who lined the south and north sides of Main Street during Saturday's main holiday event.

It wasn't the only Christmas activity Saturday, however. Following the parade was a craft show at Larkin's "The Other Place" and an opportunity for children to have their picture taken with Santa.

Throughout the day free carriage rides were available to residents. The celebration concluded with a city tree lighting ceremony and caroling.

Area churches also enacted a live nativity scene.

Christmas parade (sponsored by the Lowell Area Chamber of Commerce) entry winners included the following, Luscious Landscape, first place, $150 gift certificate to shop Lowell; Lowell Area Bus Transportation, second place, $100 gift certificate to shop Lowell; and Boot-N-Scoot 4-H Riders, third place, $50 gift certificate to shop Lowell. Receiving honorable mention recognition was the Lowell Moose Lodge.

"The chamber is grateful to all businesses and organizations that had an entry in this year's parade," said Liz Baker chamber coordinator director. "They all helped to display the cozy corner by Roger Brown

This column was missing in the last couple of editions because I was away. No, not the asylum again. The wife and I were visiting our new granddaughter over the Thanksgiving holiday. Madison lives in Chandler, Arizona. It's a suburb of Phoenix, and one heckuva long way from almost anywhere. I flew in from Michigan. Terese flew in from Florida. My son was working in Wisconsin, and couldn't make the trip. Our family may be small, but it sure is scattered. Oh, I should mention that while visiting Maddie, we also spent some time with my daughter and her husband... Angie and Brad... Maddie's

I wasn't gone two weeks, though I wish that were the case. I happened to travel on two Tuesdays, and that's the day I write this column. Heaven forbid I should flex my schedule and write it a day early. I have that clause in my contract as publisher of this fishwrap.

I arrived a little ahead of Terese and was in charge of securing our rental car. Terese had reserved a mini-van for the purpose of hauling all five of us around with our clothes for a long weekend, food for a holiday feast, cooking utensils and, of course, the array of stuff needed to care for a seven-monthold baby. We had rented a place nestled in Oak Creek Canyon 4X4 trails. north of Sedona so as to make our visit a mini-vacation for the kids as well. Hence, the need for the van. After 25 years of plans, she should never put me in charge of anything.

When I got to the rental car counter, I had to stand in line for a few minutes. That gave me time to think, and that's when trouble always begins. I should never be given time to think. We had taken a side trip to the Sedona area last spring when the baby was born. It's gorgeous! Red rock buttes everywhere, Indian ruins, canyons, natural arches... calendar photos anyto get you down the rough roads to the trailheads. I merrily walked away from the rental car counter with the keys to an Isuzu Rodeo instead of a van.

numerous comments were made as to just how in the world we were going to get everybody, and everything, in the Rodeo. brushed off these comments, though I had serious concerns of my own. I made secret plans to run to a nearby Home Depot for tie-down straps to secure some of our load to the roof. The gods were with me, and a potential disaster was averted when Brad found he was stuck working all day Wednesday. This meant we would be driving on ahead to check in to our condo on the creek, and Brad would drive up after work. Now we could split the load between two vehicles. I had dodged a major bullet. I packed as much as I could into the Rodeo, and still a sizeable load went into Brad's car. I'm not sure the Rodeo's roof would have held up under the strain.

On the way to Sedona, we took one dirt road that in no way required four wheel drive, but would not have been a great choice in a heavily loaded mini-van. We saw several antelope along this stretch, and my choice of a 4X4 was beginning to gain favor. I wasn't off the hook yet, but they were letting the line slack a little.

We checked in, unloaded, settled in for our four-day stay and waited for Brad to arrive. He showed up that evening, we got him something to eat and we all hit the sack relatively early. The next morning was Thanksgiving Day. I got up for my morning walk, and took a rough trail part of the way up the canyon wall. The climb was steep and tough going, but getting to the top became an obsession with me. More about that in a future column.

When I got back, Angie and Terese were getting our turkey ready for the oven. It was a traditional Thanksgiving Day... family, football, feasting and phone calls to relatives. All the while I was studying maps and brochures of the area for

The next morning we loaded into the Rodeo and headed into Sedona. I think the girls would have prefereed to do a little marriage, Terese should know that if she wants to stick to her shopping, but I hooked a left and headed up Schnebly Hill, a steep, rough, dirt, switchback road that climbs up and out of the Verde Valley. After a 12-mile, one-hour climb, we were at the scenic overlook of Sedona and the valley. It was breathtaking Best of all, I was actually told my 4X4 had been a good idea!

We spent the rest of our time four-wheelin' and hiking. On some of the rougher roads. Maddie had to be wedged in her car seat with blankets and jackets, but she loved it. She knew that where you look. To tour many of these sites, a 4X4 is necessary at the end of the rough ride, she'd get to go hiking in her backpack. Cool! She liked grandpa's 4X4 too!

On Tuesday morning, we had to reluctantly say goodbye to Maddie, Angie, Brad and Arizona, then board our respective Needless to say, Terese and Angie were not as enthused planes back to reality. It was tough to leave, and really tough to hand over the keys to my Rodeo.

Lowell resident, singer and performer Corrie Wood will also be part of this Christmas production playing multiple roles including one of the Andrews Sisters and the featured singer in the Arthur Godfrey segment. Wood is no stranger to Lowell High School productions either and is remembered well for her performance in the Carol Burnett role of Once Upon A Mattress several years ago. That musical, by the way, will be revised as the 1998 spring production at Lowell High School. Wood also has been featured as one of the "end men" for the Lowell Showboat show.

Helping with lighting and set design is Lowell Performing Arts director, Dick Graham.

The performances at the Literary Club Classical Theatre will be December 12 through the 15th. Tickets are available at the door at $9 each or $4 for students. Group rates are available on 20 or more tickets by calling 940-6067 or 454-0525.

"There were a number of reasons why we considered it," said Nate Schoen, who sits on the high school student council and who is also a student representative on the Lowell Board of Education.

Those reasons included the overcrowding of the stage area because of the increased number of graduating students, parking, and what happens when it rains.

Over the last three-five years, graduating classes have ranged from 150-200 students. Lowell High School principal Scott Vashaw explained that in a couple of years, the graduating class at Lowell will be approximately 300. "That is more than what the Showboat amphitheatre stage can hold," he said.

"Still, it is breaking with a tradition some community members have grown accustomed to. Superintendent Bert Bleke said he expected some reaction to the news by the community.

Reaction came swiftly from one board member, Jim Reagan, who expressed his disappointment in the decision of the students and asked them to reconsider.

"Maybe if we gave them all a ride in the showboat. they would change their minds," Reagan said

Bleke said if the board had no objection, the district would allow the seniors move ahead with their plans to have the graduation at the high school field. He said a final decision would have to be made soon so that the printing of programs and invitations could be taken care of. Vashaw said the school would listen to any concerns brought forth by the city or citizens before making a final deci-

Vashaw said there are also political considerations to look at. "The school must be sensitive to all the different audiences and to the city and Showboat board for the working relations it has held with the school over the years. Lowell Schools is very appreciative of that," he ex-

Red Arrow wrestlers second to Charlotte at Battle Creek

•••• Dan Rottier, Brad Lyons and Bill Stouffer earn firsts in respective weight classes.

By Thaddeus J. Kraus Lowell Ledger Editor

A season-opening wrestling invitational at Battle Creek Lakeview Saturday gave Lowell coach Gary Rivers a pretty good indication of what he wanted to know about his 1997-98 grapplers.

"Our younger wrestlers learned that they need to work harder on their strength and conditioning," Rivers explained. "We have spent a good portion of our time throwing out information. We learned Saturday work is also needed on countering wrestling moves."

Rivers said he was pleased with his club's second-place finish. Charlotte won the invitational with 170.5 points. Lowell was second with 149 and East Kentwood came in third with year ago, finished 3-0 on the day. "Dan's a good wrestling technician," Rivers said. "He needs to work on his strength." Rottier pinned Battle Creek Central's Jon Dungey at 3:01 of the second period. Brad Lyons, at 140 pounds, pinned East Kentwood's Andy Bielecki in 46 seconds of the first period. "Brad looked 2. great. He is stronger and a more mature wrestler," said Rivers

Bill Stouffer, 215 pounds, was 2-0 and had a pretty easy time of it. "They are going to have to be a pretty good wrestler to compete with Bill," Rivers said. "I think there will be two. wrestlers at Hemlock Saturday who can challenge Bill."

Placing second for Lowell were Steve VanLaan, 171 pounds; David Luyk, 152; and Brett West, 112. Van Laan lost in the fianls to state medalist Josh Brzycki from Charlotte.

Tom Oesch, 145 (3-1), placed third.

Brent Lyons, 130, Keith Krebill, 160, and Lucas Grummet, 189, finished fourth.

The results at other weight classes were: Eric Hays, 103, 0-2; Peter VanLaan, 135, 0-2; and Mike Arnswald, HWT, 0-

Local FFA Chapter part of record-setting convention

By Thaddeus J. Kraus Lowell Ledger Editor

It was an amazin' sea of blue - and it didn't have anything to do with football in Ann Arbor.

The 70th annual national Future Farmers of America convention in Kansas City drew a record-setting 46.000 registrants, attired in blue jackets, to the three-day (Nov. 13-15) gathering.

The first convention, back in 1928, at the formation of the FFA organization, drew just 33 participants.

Clinton Hopaluk's truck suffered some heavy damage when Hopaluk was unable to stop in time before ramming into a vehicle driven by Edward Lodholtz.

Injury incurred in M-21 accident near NAPA

By Thaddeus J. Kraus Lowell Ledger Editor

A broken leg or ankle was the result of a two-car accident at 2240 W. Main in front of the NAPA auto parts store.

Edward Lodholtz was westbound on M-21 when he stopped to turn left into NAPA.

An oncoming vehicle driven by Lowell's Clinton Hopaluk, did not realize Lodholtz was stopped and hit him in the right, rear corner.

Lowell police officer Trevor Slott said Hopaluk swerved right in an attempt to miss Lodholtz but struck the vehicle before going off onto the right-hand shoulder of the road and striking a no parking sign.

Lodholtz complained of stiffness in his back and leg, but declined medical help.

Officials believe Hopsluk broke either his leg or ankle

Officials believe Hopaluk broke either his leg or ankle. The Lowell man was transported to Butterworth Hospital via Lowell Ambulance.

Hopaluk's passenger, his son Tad Weaver, was treated and released at the scene to his mother.
