With Harper's departure, food service set to take on whole different look

•••• The Lowell School District will look into the possibility of an outside company managing its food service program. This comes following Caroll Harper's announcement that she will retire at the end of the school year.

By Thaddeus J. Kraus Lowell Ledger Editor

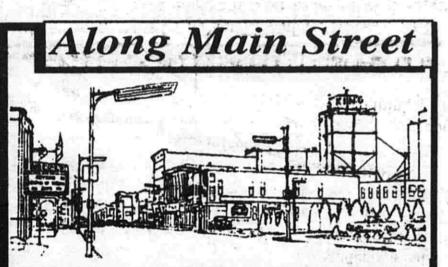

The announced retirement of Caroll Harper presents the Lowell School District with a problem - who will run the food service program when she's gone?

By all accounts, Harper has done an excellent job offering students a balanced breakfast and lunch program while still running a fiscally sound food service program.

"The equation has changed. We have a food service problem due to Caroll Harper retiring," Lowell superintendent Bert Bleke said. "We must look at all options available."

The superintendent's bias is that the district hire an outside management company to run the food service program.

"I think it's good for the long-term benefit of the district,"

Bleke said. "I also think the employees win."

Connie Gillette, Lowell assistant superintendent for finance and personnel, said two companies have answered the district's call for bids.

"I have told both companies that to even be considered, they must meet certain criteria and if they can't, not to apply," Gillette explained.

Criteria would include maintaining and building on a successful food service program; keeping nutrition a major focus; maintaining privacy of students on reduced or free lunch program; no lay-offs or reduced hours of current staff; continuing to operate the food service program in the black; and the service contract terminating with a 60-day notice if the district is not happy with its service.

Board secretary Ann Mulder said she has concerns about an outside company coming in and doing the district's work. "I think it is a first step toward privatization. That is a concern. My other concern is how the district will make up the added management cost that comes with hiring an outside company."

Gillette said both companies believe increased lunch sales will cover management cost.

"I called a number of school districts whose food service programs are run by outside companies. They all confirmed that school lunch participation has increased," Gillette explained.

Mark Blanding, school board vice president, said it is imperative that the board and food service staff be able to talk to a company before any vote. Gillette confirmed that will happen.

"There are three issues I am concerned about: a happy and content staff, nutrition, and the reduced and free lunch program," Blanding said.

The posting of Harper's position brought in 18 individual applications. There were no internal candidates. Gillette said of the 18, there were only two she would recommend interviewing if the board decided not to use a management company.

Bleke outlines concepts to make school safe and neat for all students

By Thaddeus J. Kraus Lowell Ledger Editor

In lieu of the horrific tragedy that occurred at Colorado's Columbine High School, Lowell superintendent Bert Bleke briefed the Lowell School Board on what the district is doing to make Lowell Schools a safe and neat place for all students.

Bleke spoke briefly on three areas: Security and prevention; working with student body and staff to make the school a better place; and training staff to identify and work with students with special problems to make sure they don't slip through the cracks.

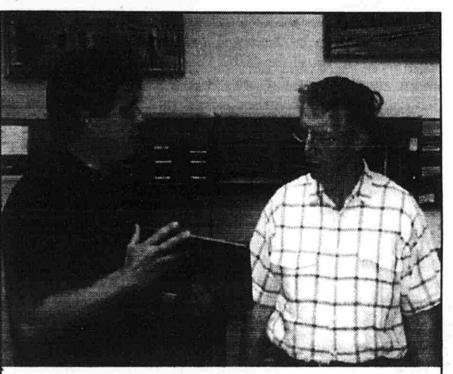

"If we can't help them, then we need to find an outside source that can," Bleke said.

The Lowell superintendent charged that the district needs to actively promote all three concepts.

Security and prevention is addressed daily through district security director, Al Eckman. Bleke said Eckman and the district will do some fine tuning to what's already in place.

In making the schools a better place for kids, students are being asked to answer questions dealing with compassion, responsibility and respect. Parents will also be asked to volunteer their time to help insure the school is a neat place for all and that there is no room for harassment.

"No kid should be harassed while at school," Bleke said. "We want Lowell Schools to be a neat place for all students."

Chamber to Honor Gerard

Donald Gerard has been named this year's honoree at the annual Lowell Chamber of Commerce's Person of the Year celebration on May 20. The event is held in conjunction with Mayor Exchange Day. This year, city of Lowell officials will share the day with Ionia. The celebration, held at the Deer Run Country Club, will begin at 6:30 with a social hour followed by a 7 p.m. dinner, Mayor Exchange presentation at 8 and the Person of the Year Award at 8:15. Above, Chamber president Mike Sprenger presents Gerard with a plaque commemorating the event.

M-21 merchants feeling better about construction progress

•••• Improved communications make all the difference in relations between MDOT/contractor and merchants.

By Thaddeus J. Kraus Lowell Ledger Editor

A quick, all-of-a-sudden start followed by frequent work stoppages during the opening three weeks of the M-21 project left westend Lowell merchants frustrated and concerned.

Heightened communications and informational meetings with project engineer Steve Nichols, consultant project engineer, and Karl Koivisto, Michigan Department of Transportation manager, haved eased merchant tensions.

"I believe the people we're dealing with (Koivisto, Nichols and Tim Little) are very responsive and cooperative," said Charlie Bernard, owner of Bernard's True Value Hardware.

The hardware store owner adds that since the opening three weeks, communications have improved and the project is moving along faster.

Bernard had been and remains a critic of the overall project design carried out by the state. The project has taken the highest density area on M-21 in the Lowell business area,

LMS artists selected for state art exhibition

Region 9 of the Michigan Art Education Association recently had its adjudication at Calvin College for the 1999 state art exhibitions. Four students from Lowell Middle School had artwork accepted for inclusion in the four county exhibition. Crystal Porritt (eighth-grade) received a certificate of merit for her Egyptian Wall Painting; Duncan Lammas (sixth-grade) was honored for his Shoepianomobile; and Kristie Warren (seventhgrade) had her wallpaper portrait in mosaic accepted. Warren's work was done late second semester of the last school year as a sixth-grader.

Heather Befus (eighth-grade) not only had her work hanging in the Calvin exhibition but went on to the state adjudication in Lansing where it was part of the state's middle school exhibition at the Capitol Rotunda and the Historical Museum. Her Russian Icon, LMS Style will also be featured at the MAEA state conference in November in Traverse City.

Warren is a student of Theresa Wasciuk, and Porritt, Lammas and Befus are students in Karen Thomure's art

We're going back a few years here. Do you remember the duo that did the Point-Counterpoint bit on "Sixty Minutes" each week? I'm talkin' late seventies, early eighties. I believe about the evils of gun ownership, the NRA and, of course, the woman's name who took the liberal stance was Jane something or other. As for the grizzled old newspaper guy who took on the conservative role, I have no clue as to what his name was. All I remember is that they'd get right into it and mix hit Saturday Night Live regularly spoofed them.

I saw my opening and took a shot. "You know...," I said,

The past several months have been a flurry of activities. Between speaking engagements and reading through piles of books, and meeting with Shirley Climo, the author of several children's books, and discussing what goes into writing such books, my mind is full of pictures and words and fragrances of people in the literary world... now to sort them.

In the process of finding and sorting, I found the book, The Worry Stone by Marianna Dengler, illustrated by Sibyl Graber Gerig. The first thing that grabbed my attention was the cover artwork. Glancing through it, I knew it would be a treasure. While reading it later, I found myself several times reaching out to run my fingers over the drawings. They are so realistic and beautiful.

The Worry Stone is the story of an old woman who finds an unexpected adventure while sitting on a park bench. A young boy comes to sit on the far end of the bench, day after day. Never speaking, the old woman waits for him to speak. When he does, her memories go back to her own childhood, and especially her memories of her grandfather. The story of her finding a worry stone and her grandfather's unique story of the Chumask Indian tribe and what the worry stone means is a wonderful folk tale. This tale is non-authentic, but because it comes from the author's knowledge about this tribe of people, it is still classified as a folk tale in this book.

Because of the old woman's insight into the loneliness of the boy, Jason, she finds the stone that she had put away many years ago and goes back to the bench and the boy, with the story of the stone and the stone in hand.

The last page is one of my favorites. The picture is a heartgrabber for sure. But the whole feeling of the importance of storytelling is caught when the boy begins to ask for stories that her grandfather told her. Looking at him, she begins another step in her adventure. She shares her love of her grandfather and the other stories that were so special to her as

When she was finally through berating me, ripping the things up in a heated exchange every week. ### DIABETES

Diabetes mellitus is a chronic medical disorder due to elevated blood sugar. About eight million people in the United States have been diagnosed with diabetes. It is estimated that only half of the people who have diabetes are diagnosed because in the early stages of the disease, symptoms are minimal. Diabetes is the fourth leading cause of death in the United States. If left untreated, it can result in kidney damage, blindness, stroke and cardiovascular disease.

Symptoms of diabetes include: • Excessive thirst • Frequent urination • Unexplained weight loss

· Blurring vision · Fatigue You may be at risk for developing diabetes if you are older than 45, are overweight, have a family history of diabetes, and you don't exercise regularly Diabetes is easily diagnosed by checking the blood after an overnight fast for sugar. If the blood sugar is greater than 125, chances are that you have diabetes. It is important for diabetes to be diagnosed and treated early to prevent complications of the disease. Many people will have diabetes for years before they are diagnosed. This can lead to irreversible kidney and nerve damage. There is no cure for diabetes, but it can be treated successfully with diet, exercise and medication. Many patients with adult onset diabetes will not require insulin. Treatment will significantly decrease the damage that can occur with diabetes. Information about diabetes can be obtained through your physician's office or by calling the American Diabetes Associa-

I'm not sure if she would be too In reality, I'm not an NRA member. I'm not particularly an embarrassed to make a scene, or if she would simply have to give the clerk an earful about guns. Either way, I'd die for a copy of the tape from the store security camera.

I put the burden of proof on her, and she has not yet at the office, I was willing to take on the guise of the "only when disproved my claim. She has also not yet come up with my half of the wager. There has been talk of a N.O.W. sticker on my My comments set her off on an all too predictable tirade car, or possibly a Clinton/Gore bumper sticker, but I'm not worried. My wife has only been wrong twice in her life... once when she married me, and the other time she was mistaken.

FOR THE WEEK OF MAY 14 THRU MAY 20

Brandy (left) plays the long-abandoned daughter of singing superstar Olivia King (Diana Ross) in Double Platinum Sunday on ABC. The TV movie offers a fitting showcase for Ross' seldom seen singing talents and a not-so-sugary role for Moesha star Brandy.

Smit smacks two-out single to subdue Vikings

•••• The Lowell DH came up with big hits against the Vikings and Pioneers in leading Lowell to victories. Ironically, the big hit was missing in Lowell's 5-4 loss to Forest Hills Central in game one of a doubleheader.

By Thaddeus J. Kraus Lowell Ledger Editor

Squandered scoring opportunities didn't come back and bite Lowell's softball team, thanks to the clutch hitting of senior Amy Smit.

After Wyoming Park had rallied to score three runs in the sixth inning, aided by Lowell errors, the Red Arrows needed a two-out RBI single by Smit to pull out a victory. Amy Snell led off Lowell's seventh inning with a single. Becky Brander sacrificed her over to second and Snell then advanced to third on a wild pitch. With two outs, Smit ripped a line drive into left field plating Snell and the winning run.

"It was a great win for us. That's how you draw up a seventh inning rally," Lowell softball coach Bob Rodenhouse said, "I can't say enough about Amy Smit getting key hits... not only in this game but also against East Grand Rapids."

Andrea Rickert pitched a complete game, winning her 10th game to go against one defeat. Rickert pitched six innings allowing one run on one hit while walking one and striking out six. Stacev Kinvon pitched the seventh inning, giving up two runs on two hits She allowed three runs on five hits while walking five and striking out six park hitters.

In its 10-3 win over East Grand Rapids, Rickert faced one batter over the minimum and an Amy Smit fourth inning double keyed a four-run outburst, breaking up a 1-1 tie.

Lowell added two runs in the fifth and three more in the sixth, highlighted by an Annie Zalokar triple, to put the game away.

FHC 5-5

Not even Lowell's 15-5 win in game two on Friday against Forest Hills Central could remove the sting from its 5-4 (nine inning) defeat in game one. At least not for Lowell coach Bob Rodenhouse.

"I don't mind losing to a better team, but I don't like losing to a team we should beat. When you're playing a team you should beat, you've got to win those games," Lowell coach Bob Rodenhouse said.

from her third base position. Jody Seif, right, makes a clean throw to first.

The Lowell softball coach watched his club build a 4-2 lead and then not capitalize on scoring opportunities, enabling Central to rally for the win.

"Elliott (Central's pitcher) pitched a good game. She did a good job," Rodenhouse said. "We hit her early and then she got us to hit balls into the dirt." Andrea Rickert (5-1) suffered her first loss in the conference. She gave up four runs on six hits while walking six and striking out 13 Park hitters. In game two, Lowell pounded out 17 hits against Elliot.

The Red Arrows scored seven runs in the second and fourth innings against the Rangers.

Rickert, Smit and Zalokar all hit triples and Smit also added a home run. "We ripped Elliot pretty good in game two. I would have liked one or two of those hits in game one," Rodenhouse said. "We didn't get any one- or two- out hits in game one."

Babcock did not give up a hit in 5 1/3 innings. Warnus came into the game in the sixth with Lowell runners on second and third. He coaxed a pop up and then struck out the final batter of the inning. The Ranger followed that up by striking out the side in the seventh inning to earn the victory.
