Showboat & Chamber -Marriage or Mistake

and history.

If that response is of a positive nature, the Chamber will look into acquiring an option to purchase the Showboat, enabling it to raise funds for its acquisition prior to buying it.

The Chamber has sent out a survey to its membership inquiring about the importance of preserving the Showboat's history and heritage, their response to pledging financial support if it were owned and maintained by the Chamber, and whether its members would be willing to serve on a committee to preserve the history and heritage of the Showboat, under the direction of the Chamber.

member, Dan Brubaker. Liz Baker, Lowell Area Chamber of Commerce, said the organization's intent would be to use the Showboat for its original purpose local entertainment by and for the community. "The Chamber would not try to book expensive headline acts," Baker said.

Brubaker said the majority of the Chamber board was not interested in taking on the debt of Showboat Corp. II. However, it does recognize the Showboat's value to the community.

months of seeing its way through the Bowne Township administrative zoning process, Landon Companies, resolved to get approval for its 142-acre manufactured housing development proposal, was turned back by the Zoning Board of Appeals.

The Southfield company, in presenting its case one final time, requested a variance of Section 6.02 Permitted Uses and Section 6.03 Special Land Uses in A-2 (agricultural).

It stated that the current zoning does not provide the requirements to offer affordable housing in Bowne Township and meet market demands.

Joseph Katz, Landon public relations consultant, told the Zoning Board of Appeals that there is significant concern as to whether a wastewater treatment plant could be put in the area currently zoned for high density living.

"There are questions if that area could handle the development," Katz said. "The Alto wastewater treatment plant is antiquated and maxed out."

The Landon spokesman said the single-family unit development would not provide any hardship. "It would not be injurious to its neighbors," Katz said.

evidence that it can't follow the established zoning other than it doesn't want to.

The disenchanted look on the face of Joseph Katz, Landon Companies public relations consultant, was an accurate barometer as to the direction taken at the Bowne Township Zoning Board of Appeals meeting, Siler said.

In denying Landon's request for a variance, the ZBA said it did not believe the company had met any of the standards set.

Some of the standards included showing undo hardship and unnecessary hardship, as well as verifying that it does not create an island of high density when surrounded by low density housing.

ZBA trustee James Dumas said he did not see a good reason to use good farm land in an agricultural area for the type of housing proposed by Landon.

"In the interest of the community and in accordance with the master plan, the area currently zoned for this type of housing is in the township's best interest and the land in question would be injurious," said John Vrona, a resident on

Bowne Township residents defeat millage proposal

By Thaddeus J. Kraus Lowell Ledger Editor

Bowne Township registered voters weren't crazy about voting on two millage proposals in the July 13 special election as evident by the nine percent turnout.

The diminutive number of voters (157) who did turnout were even less excited about the proposed one mill levy for general township operations.

The request for approval of a levy of one mill for 10 years was voted down 86-71.

According to Bowne Township clerk Sandra Kowalczyk, it would not have increased the millage rate above the rates levied last year.

"It would have replaced the one mill that had been levied previously to finance construction of the fire station," Kowalczyk explained. "The total millage rate levied by the township would have stayed at the '98 levels."

The township clerk said the one mill would have been used for building maintenance, road repair and keeping township zoning and planning current.

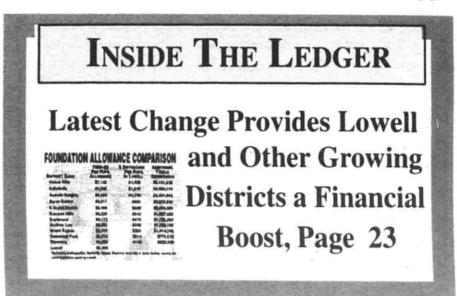

The township hall, which is open two days a week

(Wednesday and Friday), will continue to run as is.

The defeat of the one mill levy may mean gravel roads won't receive chlorine to prevent dust; cemeteries may not get mowed; and while work will continue to be done, the office may possibly be closed.

"It is one of the lowest voter turnouts we've ever had," church, what comes to mind first? For many of us it is a particular building that we have gone to for many years, one we were married in, one we were baptized in, one we buried a family member in. When we think of "church" we think of Sunday morning worship services and Christmas Eve services with the family.

For many years I thought of the church as a "spiritual" gas station. It was a place where I could go to get fueled up for the coming week.

But is this all the church is? We know it isn't. We are reminded in scripture that being a part of the church is being part of the "body of Christ." Yes, but what does this mean?

Every year when we celebrate the birthday of the church called "Pentecost," I reread a reflection by Howard A. Snyder from "The Community of the King." In this book he writes,

"So the church is not to be understood primarily as a means to the end of transform-When we think of the ing society. This would be to trample over the uniqueness and infinite worth to God of the Christian community. Besides, the amazing and profound fact is that the Church most transforms society when it is itself growing and being perfected in the love of Christ.... Truly Christian transformation of culture comes through Christlike (and hence sacrificial) love, community and being But this fact by no means cancels out the responsibility to do, to act, to walk in the words of God. Rather, the being and doing go together. The being is fundamental, but the doing is the natural re-

Every year I am strengthened and reminded that the church is not just one more social service institution. I am part of something that "God" has begun and invited me to be a part of. The church is God guided, God sustained, and God equipped. You and I, by the grace of God, have been invited to join and be about God's work here and now in Lowell in 1999.

Yes, there is much going on in our wonderful community. Yes, there is much left to do. But, the real changes that will affect us forever and eternally will come through our faith community "being" the body of Christ - "being" God with skin on to this part of God's world.

I pray that we continue moving in this direction of "being" the church God has called and intended us to be. A footnote, it you want a bit of evidence, take a walk or drive down Main St. and look at the building across from the Chamber of Commerce office that is the Flat River Outreach Ministries. How wonderful God works!

I tacked a few days on to my monthly trip to my Florida Keys home and business. My daughter and her kids flew in from Phoenix last week. We put our monthly real estate magazine to bed Friday, so we're now enjoying these few days as a family.

My little grandson "Boog" is just seven months old and is cute as can be. The problem is, he's seven months old. Grandkids are not a whole lot of fun for grandpas when they are that little. They eat. They cry. They poop. They eat. They cry. They poop. If you make faces and silly noises you can get them to smile and laugh. That's fun for awhile, but it gets old in a hurry. Grandmas are a lot better at relating to babies. Grandmas at least have more patience.

My granddaughter is a different story. Maddie is 27 months old and is exactly why grandpas like being grandpas.

On the way home from the airport she was jabbering away in her car seat. At one point I was prompted to tease her by calling her a geek. She jumped right on that and said, "I'm not a geek, grandpa!" She hesitated for just a moment and added, "I'm an angel." Maddie is partially correct. She is not a geek. However, she was way off the mark in calling herself an angel. Grandpa has not helped her earn any wings either.

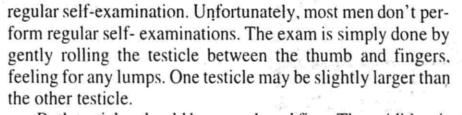

We're in trouble over grammy's perfume. I help her put a little on now and then. She has now taken to helping herself any time she can sneak away to grammy's room without getting caught. Maddie now smells like a collage of scents that have French names with weird spellings and pronunciation marks. I say it beats the smell of poopy diapers.

We're in trouble over gummy dolphins. Every time we go to the store we buy a bag of these gummy treats in the shape of you she's not a geek. She's about the smartest, quickest two-Maddie's appetite for decent food and send her off on a sugar influenced by grandpa. buzz. Maddie and I think that's a small price to pay for something as good as gummy dolphins.

We're in trouble over my motor scooter. Maddie and I have it figured out that she can sit on my left knee, hold on to the handlebars and away we go to the grocery store, hardware, post office, video rental, bait store, etc. She's in charge of the horn. The button is on the left handle grip where she holds on. We honk at everything and everybody as we make our trips. I've been lectured once by a cop for taking my usual shortcut down a bike path. I can't wait until I get caught with a two-year-old on my knee. We're also told that Maddie's dad, who is back in Arizona working, would not be very happy with this motor scooter business. Guess we're just a couple of bad seeds on a motor scooter.

We're in trouble over chicken poop. For Easter I bought Maddie a plastic chick that stands on its feet and you fill it with those good little multi-flavored jellybeans. If you press down on the chick's head, it poops out a jellybean or two. Hence the nickname of chicken poop for those tasty little treats. We don't have the chick here, but grandpa did stop by the Hallmark store on Big Pine Key for a supply of chicken poop. We're in trouble over chicken poop for all the aforementioned reasons we're in trouble over gummy dolphins.

The list goes on and on. Mostly it's our behavior in general. Nothing specific, just little things like me not keeping a close enough eye on her, or reprimanding her when she's getting into some kind of mischief. Maybe she's learned a couple of swear words hanging out with grandpa. Sometimes grandpa laughs at things she says or does that I shouldn't laugh at. It's all these little things that prompted Maddie's dad to proclaim it's a good thing they live 2,000 miles away from me.

Under Michigan law a wife has what is known as a dower interest in her husband's real estate. More specifically, a

If your wife had failed to execute the deed transferring your property, then the buyer would have taken that property subject to your wife's dower interest.

Interestingly enough, a man does not have a dower interest in his wife's real property. Consequently, a husband is not required to execute a deed conveying his wife's property. This is why you

DEAR JONATHAN - My husband and I set up a joint years back. We did it ourselves with the help of a software program. Did the execution of our trust automatically cause our assets to be transferred to the trust? Do we need to have wills?

JONATHANSAYS: First of all, executing your revocable living trust did not cause your assets to be transferred to that trust. You have to actually retitle your assets in the name the trust in order for your trust to own those assets.

Secondly, both you and your husband should prepare last will and testaments. Having a will is important for a variety of reasons. In your situation, you want to make sure that you have wills that are coordinated with your trust and which names the trust as the beneficiary of any assets you failed to transfer to it during lifetime. If you fail to have completion of probate, those assets will be distributed to your heirs according to state law and will never be owned by your trust. The only way revocable living trust a few those assets could end up in your trust after death is if you left a will naming the trust as the beneficiary. As for the trust you and your husband created, I highly recommend that you meet with an estate planning attorney for the purpose of reviewing that trust to make sure it was properly prepared and makes sense for what you are trying to accomplish. An estate planning attorney can also properly advise you as to the preparation of wills and other estate planning documents and how they can benefit you and your family. Good luck.

State's change in blended count formula compensates growing districts

By Thaddeus J. Kraus Lowell Ledger Editor

Since the passing of Proposal A, growing West Michigan schools have been clamoring about a skewed funding formula that punished rather than rewarded growing school districts. Last week, the Michigan Legislature and Governor agreed that the current formula (basing 40 percent of the school aid on previous year student counts) was unfair.

Gov. John Engler signed a bill which will change the student count formula used to determine school funding

The new formula is based on 25 percent of last February's student population and 75 percent in September of the approaching school year.

The formula will improve to a 20/80 ratio in the 2000

The purpose of said hearing will be to receive comments on the following variance request:

422 E. Main Street - Steven Morrison requested a variance to allow a multifamily dwelling in the General Business District. Because the property is zoned General Business, no residential usage other than the non-conforming single family house is allowed. Thus, a variance has been requested.

2001 school year.

This is expected to reduce the impact on growing school

Connie Gillette, Lowell assistant superintendent for finance and personnel, said schools in the Kent Intermediate School District have been submitting information to Lansing relative to student counts and what it means to districts financially

"I'm not sure what made them decide to finally do something. It may have been pressure Lansing has been receiving from school administrations," Gillette explained. "I had heard something was coming, but I didn't think it would happen.

When Proposal A was passed, schools received funding based on a 50/50 blended count. A few years ago (1997) that was upgraded to a 40/60 blended count.

"Our goal is to receive funding for 100 percent of our count in September," Gillette said.

The Lowell School District's total lost revenue with blended count funding versus 100 percent funding since 1995 is $1.646 million.

A 75/25 blended count as compared to last year's 60/40 will mean an extra $68,352 in school funding for the 1999-2000 school year.

"It will definitely help our general fund," Gillette said. In June, the Lowell Board of Education adopted a proposed budget deficit of $169,000.

With the improved blended count and the increase in the school foundation allowance (from $5,462 per student to $5,696). Gillette said the district would not have to deficit budget

The assistant superintendent also complimented Rep. Dough Hart for his work with education.

"Representative Hart is working for education and he does a good job of keeping districts informed as to what's going on in Lansing," Gillette said.

Hart, along with fellow republican representative Marc Shulman and with the help of mothers from the Rockford Parent Teachers Association calculated the impact the blended count was having on growing schools.

"It showed legislators how schools were suffering," Hart said. "Senator Ken Sikkema has also fought hard on behalf of high growth school districts."

Hart adds that eventually they would like to see single year, current-count funding.

That fight is a difficult one, however, since Senate Majority Leader Dan DeGrow and Gov. Engler oppose it.

Hart's explaination is that every percentage increase cost the state a million dollars.

"Philosophically, the blended count is inconsistent with what we've tried to do with the foundation grant." Hart concluded.

Plans get you into things, but you got to work your way out.

Rezoning helps Vennen progress further into master plan

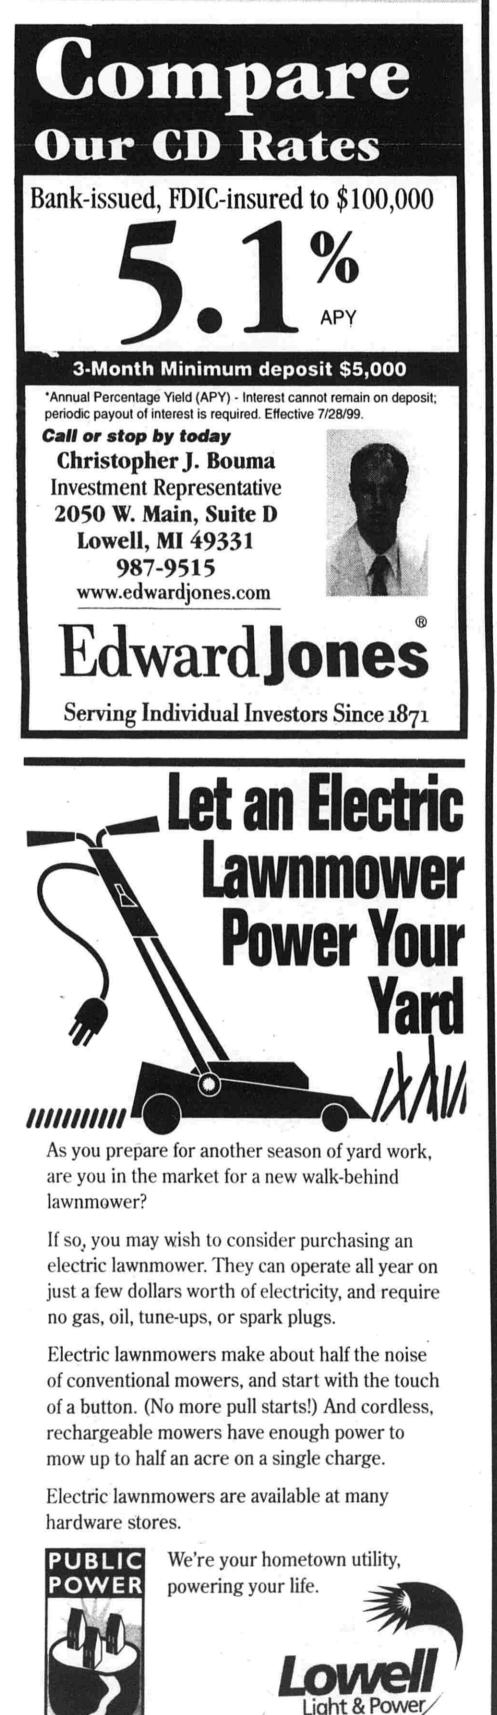

The rezoning of property at 136 S. Center from R-2 Potter (owner Main Street Pub) to move his business across residential to C-3 general business enables Vennen Chrysler Dodge to piece together another phase of its 3-5 year master Vennen's acquisition of Ormand (Bud) Lyons' 72-by-198 foot vacant parcel of land was contingent on its rezoning. The Lowell Planning Commission unanimously moved to recommend the zoning change to the city council. "The rezoning will allow us the flexibility of the position of a new main building in future construction," said Vennen owner, Daryl Kuiper. Another important phase of Vennen's master plan is the of 157 S. Center. purchase of the Main Street Pub.

To that end, Vennen was helped earlier this year when the planning commission recommended approval for Ron

That eventual move and the finalization of transaction to purchase the Main Street Pub will enable Vennen to remove the existing building and install a light pole to complete the existing frontage

Kuiper said any construction of a new facility and demolition of existing Vennen buildings would be at least two-three years down the road.

Monday night's recommendation by the planning commission to rezone Lyons' parcel was opposed by Joe Callier,
