Available CDBG monies for city may reach $60,000

Those federal dollars known as the Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) funds are available on an annual basis for community projects.

There is an estimated $42,992.80 available to Lowell Federal Community Development Grant funds. Or is there?

Tom Tilma, from, the county community development office, says funds up to $60,000 may be available for the city's taking.

Lowell will find out if it's eligible for any additional funds by Feb. 2.

Originally. Lowell city manager Dave Pasquale proposed that $40,000 of the funds be allocated toward the Flat River water main project with the remaining $2,992.80 being allocated to the North Kent Transit program for senior citizen and handicapped riders.

The community block grant funds will not be available to spend until July.

The city, however, would like to expedite the Flat River water main project.

With the promise of additional funds, Pasquale has added the South Hudson water main project to the grant

The city has already budgeted $70,000 for the South Hudson project. Instead, it would use this money to expedite the Flat River project and then use the block grant money for the South Hudson water main project later in the year.

"The present main is experiencing cracking and must be replaced and not in use," Pasquale explained. The current cost estimate for the main is $200,000. The remaining allocations will come from the Water Fund and possibly a loan from the General Fund.

The city will also allocate $2,992.80 toward the North Kent Transit assistance for senior citizen and handicapped riders.

The block grant is federal funds provided through the U.S. Housing and Urban Development for community projects, Pasquale explained. Because Kent County is so large, the county allocates the monies to the smaller communities to determine how the money will be used.

Rezoning Request Ratified

Planning Commission unanimously approves Meijer's request to rezone 22 acres on M-21 and Alden Nash from R-1 and R-3 to general commercial.

By Thaddeus J. Kraus Lowell Ledger Editor

Stating that the master plan identifies it as the best location for commercial development, the Lowell Charter Township Planning Commission approved rezoning 22 acres of township property from R-1 and R-3 to general commercial.

The rezoning came at the request of Meijer who proposes to begin building a 157,000 square foot store this spring/summer.

In stating his support for the rezoning, planning commissioner David Simmonds said the master plan calls for this type of development in the area (on M-21 from Alden Nash west to Cumberland).

Commissioner Carol Wells said her personal preference would be "no" to the rezoning and proposed Meijer development. She conceded, though, that the rezoning fits with what's laid out in the master plan.

"The township spent years putting a lot of thought and effort into the master plan," Wells explained. "We can't stop growth, but we can see to it that it's done in as good a fashion as possible."

The master plan gives the township a road map for smart growth - "one which will connect growth to the town and community." Lowell Charter Township Planning Commission chairman Richard Bryan explained.

Karrie Scudder, a city of Lowell resident, told the planning commission she hated to see any development and questioned whether the community of Lowell really needed a Meijer.

"What will Meijer bring to this community that isn't available to us 15 minutes in any direction?" Scudder asked.

Bryan explained that if everyone in Lowell went to the Cascade Meijer, each resident would travel 23 miles and use a gallon of gas helping to further pollute the air. "By having a Meijer in town, those automobiles stay in town and there is less pollution." Bryan explained.

Scudder disagreed. "Meijer just brings the pollution Rezoning, cont'd. pg. 8

School district staring down a sizeable 1999-00 deficit budget

By J.N. Boorsma

The pending $388,651 shortfall the district could expect this year may be good news or bad depending on how you look at it.

It is approximately more than double what school officials predicted in July when the budget was put together, but it is $200,000 less of what officials thought it would be after hiring several teachers to reduce class sizes and create or expand programs.

Originally, in July, assistant superintendent of finance and personnel, Connie Gillette said school officials guesstimated the district's revenue to be about $23,315,351 with expenditures at approximately $23,484,917. This would have left a deficit of about $169,566. At its Monday night meeting, the board approved amendments for the district's general fund and food service fund to reflect changes from the beginning of the year.

"It is always a delicate balancing act where you want to make sure you have a healthy fund balance against the quality of education for the kids in the system," said Lowell Schools superintendent, Bert Bleke.

After listening to the board in August, the district added several teachers to its staff to help reduce class sizes, expand the WINGS program for gifted and talented students, and create the middle school Spanish program. This also added

"This year's juniors have been exposed to more of the new curriculum and through the MEAP social studies test, the district does hope to gain an insight into how that curriculum is helping its students.

The MEAP test, which covers science, math, reading and standings, with Forest Hills and East Grand Rapids leading social studies, is designed as a tool for districts to evaluate programs and to assure that districts are meeting state requirements. At first I was ambivalent about it. I think the traffic problems it will create are going to be a nightmare. Meijer will create competition; however, we already have empty strip malls.

Bryan added Meijer would bring revenue into the Lowell community which would aid a growing school district. There was some disagreement as to how much power the township has in stopping development.

"I would have liked to shut the doors to Lowell 20 years ago, but I couldn't then and we can't now," Wells said. "We have a plan ... if the developer obeys the laws we can't say 'no. Even if we did, Meijer could take us to court. It has far more money than we, the township.'

G.M. Ross accused the township of being much to humble about its power over land use. He also questioned its helplessness persona.

The lighting issue continued to be a main concern of residents ... not only of Meijer but of any future development. Bryan noted that Meijer uses concave lighting to tone it down. Convex lenses are used so the light cannot spread out.

Wells added that Meijer has already worked well with an existing observatory in another community. To insure that the same type of success would be achieved, the planning commission asked members of the observatory to work with it on lighting for any site plan.

The motion, passed by the planning commission Monday night, was only to approve rezoning of the property.

Year-long activities to help celebrate YMCA's 40 years in Lowell community

By Thaddeus J. Kraus Lowell Ledger Editor

support everywhere I go."

The Lowell YMCA is throwing a year-long party.

"Y".... to celebrate its 40 years in the Lowell community.
"The YMCA wants to use this as an opportunity to thank the community for its support over the years." explained
Lowell YMCA executive director Will Welsh who came to the Lowell branch in mid-August. "I've seen evidence of that

Welsh and his staff have organized monthly activities throughout the year; the first is a sledding party slated for Jan. 29 at Lowell High School.

The YMCA staff will be serving hot chocolate and cookies while children and their families sled from 10 a.m. until noon.

A Valentine's dance has also been tentatively scheduled for Feb. 12.

"The Y invites everyone to come out and participate in these activities," said Welsh.

Over the years the Y has been busy serving the Lowell community.

For the past 15 years, the Y has organized a successful Invest In Youth campaign in an effort to raise funds for program scholarships.

"We have seen tremendous growth in this program, especially over the last five years under the leadership of Rick Seese," Welsh explained.

Since 1994, the Y has opened three child care centers (Congregational Church, Cherry Creek Elementary and Bushnell Elementary).

The Y has also been the leader in providing recreational activities for the youth of the community.

Welsh wants the branch to continue that, but also become more involved in community events such as the Lowell EXPO, parades and Kent County Youth Fair.

"It's all about showing support and becoming more involved." Welsh concluded.

City's hard surface discussion hardly a smooth one

By Thaddeus J. Kraus Lowell Ledger Editor

For now, at least, the Lowell City Council has given a statement of support rather than an amendment to the zoning ordinance involving the requirement of hard surfaced driveways in residential districts.

That doesn't mean discussion won't linger. In fact, discussion does linger as to whether the language in the zoning book and the city code book are in complete alignment as to hard surfaced driveway requirements.

Department of Public Works director Dan DesJarden believes clarification is still needed. "One says up to the driveway approach and the other says all park facilities, driveways shall have a hard surface."

Planning commission chairman Dan Brubaker says he believes the two books do work together, in that where one leaves off, the other picks up.

In Sec. 19-26 of the code book under new construction, it states the owner of any property within the city upon which a new residential, commercial or industrial building is to be constructed shall be in conjunction with such construction, construct sidewalks and any necessary retaining wall and driveway approaches in the public right of way adjacent or abutting such property.

In Section 19.03 B of the zoning book under parking area application and design, it states all parking facilities, access driveways, and commercial storage areas shall be hard surfaced with a pavement having an asphalt or concrete binder, shall be graded and drained so as to dispose of surface water which might accumulate within or upon such area, and shall be completely constructed prior to a certificate of occupancy being issued.

"The existing ordinance is clear in that it requires access driveways to have hard surfaces up to the approach of the right of way," Brubaker said. "The code book is clear in that the driveway approach must also be a hard surface."

Any amendment to the code (from Section 19-26) would mean all driveways and driveway aprons prior to that date would not be required to comply.

There are currently five properties on the city books which are required to put in hard surfaced drives.

The existing ordinance, supported by the council, requires the driveway be paved up to the city right of way.

The ordinance pertains to all buildings erected, altered or extended after Jan. 26, 1996.

The issue of hard surfaced access to off-street parking facilities initially arose when Mark Osburn, 742 Grindle, requested a variance because of the driveway's location.

The issue will be taken back to the planning commission for further review.
