fire destroyed Manszewski's storage barn on Oberley Drive in Lowell Township Monday morning.

Manszewski's son was taken to Spectrum Health Blodgett Campus in Grand Rapids for treatment of burns. He burned both his hands while trying to recover items from the burning building, Lowell fire chief Frank Martin said. Manszewski was in Florida and had been out of town for three weeks, Martin said.

The cause of the fire is under investigation.

"It started on the east side of the building," Martin said. "It's been three weeks since anybody's been in there so who knows what happened."

The building was not wired for electricity, Martin said.

DEAR JONATHAN: I am a widow. After my husband died, I re-titled all my assets in mine and my daughter's names as joint tenants with full rights of survivorship. By doing this, I feel I have avoided the need to have an estate plan because we will own outright all of the assets at my death and no probate will be required because of the joint ownership. Further, since she is a joint owner of my checking account, she has access to that account to pay bills on my behalf which obviates the need to have a financial durable power of attorney. Am I correct in my thinking?

JONATHAN SAYS: No. It is true that having your daughter on the title to your assets will avoid those assets having to be probated upon your first death and that your daughter can help you pay bills by the fact that she is a joint owner of the the name of the trust, then it won't make any difference which one of you dies first, or whether you die in a common accident, to act for yourself. the trust will be the owner of the assets and probate will be avoided.

planning. Although your daughter has the right to access your checking account for bill paying, she does not have the right to act on your behalf in other instances such as filing income tax checking account. However, this does not avoid the need for returns, buying or selling property, or any other matters an estate plan, and in fact it is not the recommended course. regarding your property or assets. For example, if you want to First of all, your goal of avoiding probate only works in sell your house, you still need to sign off on the deed and the this case if you in fact die first. In this scenario, your daughter closing papers. If you were to become disabled and not able to would become the outright owner of all the assets as a result of act on your own behalf, then your daughter would not be able her being a co-owner prior to your death. However, if the two to sign for you just because she is co-owner of the house. If instead you set up a trust and re-title your assets in express authority in that document to act for you regarding your financial and property matters in the event you are unable Further, putting your name on the title of your assets can be a detriment in another way - it gives your daughter control Further, if your daughter survives you but then dies soon over those assets. Her idea of how those assets should be utilized could be different than yours. For example, if you would not have wanted to receive them. For example, under decide you want to sell your house, you will not be able to do this scenario, the assets would pass to whoever your daughter so without her approval. Also, if she wants to take money out has willed them to, or if she fails to leave a will, then pursuant of your bank accounts, she would have the right to do that because she is co-owner.

Again, it would make much more sense to have the trust you by a certain period of time in order for her to receive the be the owner of the house and bank accounts, as well as your other assets. By having the trust be the owner, you still control the assets during your lifetime, upon death those assets avoid As for using joint ownership as a means of avoiding the probate and will be distributed pursuant to your instructions in need for a financial durable power of attorney, this is poor the trust. The election is history. It is time for everyone to put aside differences, scrape those bumper stickers off the car and get on with life. I'm all for moving on, if for no other reason than to finally escape all those political ads and pundits. I still can't believe our TV didn't end up in the deep water off the end of my dock.

Yes, I'm all for moving on ... except for one little item. My wife and I were on a trip out West recently. We were out of touch, off the grid, under the radar and incommunicado. This period spanned the election and a couple issues of the Ledger. It wasn't until late last week that I became aware of the swipe at me in "Sound-Off." I was branded a "stupid Republican" and advised to "WAKE UP!" Sorry, but I have to respond to that ... even if the election is ancient history.

First off, I resent being called a stupid Republican. If I slip with the "S" word (in this case "stupid"), my five-yearold grandson scolds me with, "Stupid is a bad word Grandpa Ted." The "Grandpa Ted" thing is a long story, but the point is, even a five-year-old knows better than to use that kind of language. Like Forest's mama said, "Stupid is, as stupid does."

Sure, accidentally putting the drops for our dog's skin ailment in my eye was an incredibly stupid thing to do. All of the pratfalls and slapstick stuff I manage to do and write about in this space is pretty stupid. Does that make me stupid? Yeah, probably, at least by most accepted definitions. Now that we've established that the "Sound-Off" caller and I agree on my stupidity, let's move on to the real issue.

What I resent most is being called a Republican. I've Bonus!!! never registered as a Republican and have never voted a straight ticket. In the case of this recent election, I had to support George W. (Warts and all) Bush because he was the lesser of two evils. Which, come to think of it, seems to be

In these acts of thanks giving may each one of us blessings and re-evaluating what is most important to become a more sensitive, responsive, caring member of our ourselves and others. In other words, the act of thanks families, workplace and community. giving.

I pride myself in being an independent thinker (despite my stupidity) when it comes to politics. In each election I try to make an informed choice on the candidates or issues and vote accordingly, not along party lines. I've been called a closet liberal and now a stupid Republican. I'm not sure which is more insulting.

Where do I come down politically? The answer is "all over the map," If I'm in the car between noon and three, I tune in Rush and chuckle at his rants about the liberal left. After the evening news I watch "The Daily Show" and chuckle at Jon Stewart's rants about the radical right. Humor is humor. I've been telling people for years that my dream ticket for the Presidency is Ben Stein and Jessie Ventura. So, please, don't call me a Republican.

The "Sound-Off" caller also noted that he or she "didn't appreciate" my comments about John Kerry. Well, if the caller doesn't "appreciate" a few wisecracks about his or her candidate from a lowly small town newspaper columnist, he or she ought to take a look around.

I wonder if the "Sound-Off" caller "appreciated" their "attitude" when he or she "woke up" that same morning? I'd like to close with one word, but my grandson would say, "Loser is a bad word, Grandpa Ted."

In our own community there may be families for which this is the first holiday with an empty seat at the table. It will also be a difficult holiday for the families in Lowell with members whose military duties put them in peril far from home. For others, family relationships may be strained. There may be a sad recognition for some that things aren't going to stay the way they have been.

Perhaps this is the time of year to set aside anger or disappointment we feel toward another or others for failing to live up to our expectations. Perhaps we would be well It's almost Thanksgiving time and most certainly time served to spend a moment thinking about how important

Friday, at the big football game I saw Santa on a cell phone asking someone, "Where are you?" Santa seemed much too familiar with today's technology. Maybe the elves taught him a thing or two. Normally I'm annoyed when I hear someone talking really loud on their cell phone, especially when they give the play by play. "No, I'm in the produce aisle. Where are you?" But this time I was looking for a friend and was thinking how nice it would be to have a cell phone to locate them in the huge crowd.

After the win, we had friends over for tea and dessert. When my wife got the teapot down off the top of the fridge, she found two black socks stuffed inside. You may think this strange. However, she calmly replied, "Oh, I wondered where those were." You see, after moving all our belongings half way around the world to China and back, we had become proficient at hiding things in every available space.

I thought I could get all our stuff in four boxes but I finally admitted we needed five. The fifth box was almost full when my ever practical wife asked how much they weighed. I borrowed a bathroom scale: 110, 104, 98, 96, and 80 something, and counting pounds respectively. So, back to the drawing board. I then filled both our carry-ons with books. They now totaled 90 lbs. I sifted out a few less wanted items, filled my laptop bag and wife's purse with other heavy items, and taped the boxes shut. Every available space was stuffed full.

Thanksgiving will soon be here. Our bellies and schedules will be stuffed full. We will give thanks to God for his gifts. The greatest gift is that he came looking for us. Gen. 3:9 recorded the first question in the Bible. God is looking for his children who are hiding. God asks, "Where are you?" Jesus, like his father, came to seek and save those who are lost.

This Thanksgiving, don't pack your life so full there's no room for Jesus. In fact, surprise him and make some space. Luke tells us that if we look for Jesus we will find him. In the process, you will be surprised at the unusual places he turns up.

Honoring our veterans

A flag raising ceremony was held on Veterans Day, Nov. 11, at Cherry Creek Elementary. Cub Scout Pack 3188 was joined by the Color Guard from VFW Post 8303 in Lowell. Participating in the ceremony were several home schooled scouts as well as scouts from all three elementary schools. With hundreds of students looking on, the scouts raised the American and state of Michigan flags.

"We do wreaths, centerpieces, woodworking, iron working, we do a little bit of everything," Mattingly said.

The two are pictured standing by a tree decorated with dried milkweed pods. These have become their signature craft item in the eight years they've been part of the annual craft tour. They are stop number eight on this year's tour, located back in the woods on Ware Road, about five miles east of Lowell.

Their business, "Our Secret Garden," is known in the summer for installing planters in Ada and other gardening work. In the winter, they install holiday arrangements in urns and doorways at local businesses.

YMCA hires new teen director

By Dan Schneider

The Lowell YMCA has had a new teen center coordinator since Nov. 1. He's the first employee at the Lowell branch focused exclusively on the center.

Ryan Rose, 22, worked at the teen center at the Grand Rapids Southeast branch YMCA before taking this new job in Lowell. He'll work every weekday afternoon and early evening while he completes his studies at Cornerstone University in Grand bachelor's degree in youth ministry and bible. Previous to his position at the Southeast branch YMCA, he worked three years with a junior high youth group.

Rose lives in Grand Rapids, but grew up in a small town near Cadillac. He joked that there were more cows there than people. He said he'll get along fine in Lowell.

"This small town appeals to me," Rose said. "It's just a little more where I came from. I can see myself getting involved, not just in the teen center but with other things in the community."

He talked about the school system and the number of kids in the area.

"There is a pretty strong school system from what little bit I've seen," Rose said. "There are a lot of kids in the community and I think it's great that the YMCA has been able to build something like this and work with the kids."

He intends to be flexible with the programming offered at the teen center. Rose said he'll spend the next week or so "finding out what kinds of things the community enjoys and where the community's values lie and creating programs that reflect those val-

Lowell wins toughest fight yet Red Arrows beat Pioneers, this time for the regional championship some points on the board, "to defend" was what the game was all about. The Red Arrow defense forced East to punt repeatedlyincluding on three straight drives in the second half.

East started the game by showing the record Lowell's Ryan Esbaugh crowd why they are twotime defending state champions. They put Lowell in a spot that was completely unfamiliar this season-down by seven points-with a touchdown on their opening drive.

Rather than sulk about That's Latin for "to de- it, the Red Arrows decided it would be a better idea to put the ball in East's end zone. This was accomplished quickly. On the second play of their first drive, Lowell quarterback Keith Nichol went to the air. Mike Koster outran his defender to get wide open on the right side of the field. He caught the pass and ran it for a 55yard touchdown. Ramsey Charrouf missed the extra point, so East was still up.

side and the Red Arrow marching band wore Santa hats to the game, a reference to a comment Kevin Grady made in a TV interview following East's district final win. It was evident in East's offense that if Grady wanted an early Christmas present, he was going to have to pull the sleigh himself. He carried the ball 36 times in the game for 152 yards and a touchdown.

"They ran their horse and we slowed him down just enough to get a victory," Mulder said.

Grady's touchdown happened in the second quarter, demonstrating that East wasn't going to make it easy for the Red Arrows. The Lowell offense scored on the opening drive of the second half. It was a three-yard touchdown run by Esbaugh.

East put together one final big drive in the fourth quarter. It took a lot of Grady runs, and a lot of time, to get East from their own 29 into striking distance of the end zone. It was third and six for East on the Lowell 28. With less than five minutes left on the clock, it was a touchdown now or never for East. Then Mulder's third in-regional title in a hard-fought game against rivals.

"That's what you play for all year," Mulder said after the game.

It was a tough rematch. "We're very fortunate ... when we roll, we roll," Lowell coach Noel Dean said. "They were a lot better and they played a lot better."

It was the first time this season Lowell's first team stayed in the whole game. They showed few signs of fatigue.

"They weren't getting tired because they're sick of running that hill out back (in practice)," Dean said.

Nichol ran for 137 yards and threw for 112 yards and a touchdown. Koster caught three passes for 87 yards and a touchdown. Leading the Lowell defense with 16 tackles was Scott Perdaris.

Lowell advances to the state semifinal game a year after the double-overtime regional heartbreak against Hudsonville.

"Moving on, that's all you can ask for," Dean said. Lowell will take on undefeated Charlotte, who beat Sturgis 40-21-Friday, in the state semifinals. The game is Saturday at 1 p.m. at East Kentwood. The stadium is located at 60th and

"Defense wins."

That's written on a giant poster on the wall of the Red Arrows' home court. They took that philosophy on the road last Thursday against Wyoming Park.

Lowell beat the Sailors 61-50 and coach Dee Crowley credits their defense. Lowell was able to shut-down two of the OK Gold champion's most potent scoring threats.

"They had two 1,000point scorers, who average about 20 points per game, and we held one of them to just five points," Crowley

The game was the final game of the regular season. the crossover championship. It was Crowley's 100th win.

Lowell ended the regular season with a 20-0 record.

Lowell played Cedar Springs last Tuesday. When the two teams met on the basketball court earlier this season, the Redhawks took advantage of a struggling Lowell offense in the second half to come back and force overtime.

The Arrow offense had no such troubles in their meeting last Tuesday. The Red Arrows hit shots from all over the court, resulting in a 53-32 Lowell victory.

A big night of threepointers from Kendra Gallert forced Cedar Springs to spread out to defend.

"They hit their threes tonight," Cedar Springs coach Jeff Walker said. "Defensively, that kind of stretches us out."

The outside shooting success forced the Redhawk defense out of the key. And Lowell's quick, effective passing got the ball inside to be a threat there, too. Add to that a bullish defense and it created a very different second half this time for the Red Arrows.

"We adjusted our press at halftime, just a little bit ... just enough to cause them some frustration and to cause some turnovers that led to some easy baskets," Crowley

Lowell was stealing the ball and generally causing frustration for the Redhawks.

"We didn't let any of their players get into double figures," Crowley said. "We tried to put a lot of pressure on the ball ... and keep them away from the basket."

It was close at the end of the first quarter (10-8, Lowell) but the Arrows quickly built on that lead and didn't look back.

"This kind of team, you can't let them get too far ahead because they don't let you score too much," Walker said.

Walker was happy with his team's play.

"They executed the way I wanted them to, they just couldn't handle physicalness," he said.

Lowell is hosting this year's district girls basketball action. Monday was the opening game for Lowell. The Red Arrows defeated Grand Rapids Creston 60-18, advancing them to the next round. Lowell plays in the district semifinal Wednesday at 6 p.m. at the Lowell High School main gym.
