Agreements for park use approved by city

by Emma Palova

The Lowell City Council has approved park use agreements with YMCA and Youth Football.

Both organizations will continue to pay a user fee of $5 per participant. However, for next year the fee will increase to $7.50 per participant.

The organizations have to carry a $2 million liability insurance according to the agreement.

In other business, the city council reviewed the ordinance that allows bow hunting in the city limits.

Harpfest a serenade for the soul this week

by Emma Palova

This year's Harpfest will take place at the Franciscan Life Process Center on Friday and Saturday.

The theme "A Serenade for the Soul" explores the spiritual nature of the harp with Rhett Barnwell and soprano Lindsey Perrault.

"We would like to expose the people to the harp," said Sister Mary Margaret Delaski.

The Harpfest started as a wish of a donor to promote the harp program at the center. The Harpfest workshop is in its fourth year.

"It's getting bigger," said Delaski. "We have participation of great artists from different parts of the country."

The concert for the public is at 7:30 p.m. on Friday with the music of Bach, Jean Sibelius, Marcel Grandjany and many more. The tickets are $15 in advance and $20 at the door.

Barnwell will perform among other tunes, Bouree, from Cello Suite No.3 by Bach; as well as a Welsh hymn tune and an Appalachian Folk Hymn.

Barnwell has concentrated on music for healing, sacred and meditative purposes. He has played for numerous events in churches, hospices, nursing homes and hospitals.

Barnwell has given concerts throughout the U.S., Canada, Australia and Europe.

The 2012 fair days are gone, but they have created unforgettable memories for exhibitors and visitors.

Some walked away from the fair with ribbons, others without money, spent on food, rides and auctions.

All in all it was a great fair, according to the organizers.

"The fair is all about having fun making lifelong memories," said fair secretary Bruce Doll.

For many participants, the fair week is the best week of the year.

More than 1,200 youth showed their still exhibit projects, including photography, sewing and duct tape creations. The teams got really creative with this year's fair theme, "The Bounty of Kent County," as shown in the post office and sheriff's still exhibits.

"These kids spent most of the year working on their projects," said Doll.

During the fair, there are more than 75 different events where the kids show their projects.

The fun was for everyone, no matter the taste. From "My Adventure Theater" with Shelly Smith and her pirates and monkeys to chain saw carving, bluegrass and tractor pulls.

The weather was perfect for the Reading for Rides program on Tuesday.

Lowell to celebrate as Showboat turns 80

It will be a party like no other, celebrating the 80th birthday of the Showboat on Aug. 23 at 7 pm.

On the last night of the Sizzlin' Summer concert, there will be endmen and an interlocutor, Ron Wood, acting also as the master of ceremonies.

Alive & Well will perform that night with Roger MacNaughton. There will be crowd sing-a-longs with some of the old Showboat tunes, as well as door prizes of Showboat memorabilia.

And the lighting of the birthday cake will take place on top of the Showboat. Also, video monitors on the Showboat will have slideshows from the past.

Alive & Well were one of the acts on the Showboat in the early 1980s.

"We grew up with the Showboat," said MacNaughton. "We're going to have the biggest, most fun evening of all times."

That night will be an opportunity to relive some of the history of Lowell tied with the Showboat.

"It will be a great night, sort of a double whammy," said MacNaughton, a member of Alive & Well.

The city council has also improved a contract with the Michigan Department of Transportation for milling and resurfacing of a portion of Bowes Road.

The project totals $344,000 in Federal Surface Transportation Funds and a local match of $85,700 budgeted from the Major Streets Fund.

The project is slated for completion in 2014.

MichWave Technologies

will be using the space on the city-owned tower on Shepard Drive. MichWave purchased the equipment from Red Frog Technologies. The term of the contract is for one year at a rate of $200 per month.

The city may renegotiate the contract in one year after looking at costs.

Grants have dispersed from the Look Memorial Fund for a total amount of $54,268. Among the various recipients were WLHS for TV upgrades, the historical museum, the Lowell Arts and the Lowell Area Chamber of Commerce for tents and tables, as well as the Lowell Area Recreation Authority.

The city council gave a special event permit to Pink Arrow Quiver 5K Walk/ Run on the city streets and Riverwalk on Sept. 4.

Lowell Fire Department receives "heatseekers"

Global Vision Eyewear, a Byron Center business specializing in motorcycle and safety glasses, presented the Lowell Fire Department with a device known as the Heatseeker last Saturday.

The "Heatseeker" is a device that attaches to the truck's pump and sprays out a mist that will cool the core body temperature down 15 degrees by simply walking through it.

It was invented by Tennessee firefighter Mike Robinson who, after realizing that most firefighter related injuries were due to overheating, wanted to help out his fellow fighters.

Robinson discovered a way to cool down firefighters after leaving a burning building. After his invention, he was recognized by Popular Science Magazine as one of the most innovative inventors of 2012. Later, he came out with a K-9 unit mister, to help cool off patrol dogs; as well as sporting misters, to cool off athletes in the heat.

Now, over a dozen departments in seven states use this technology, helping their firefighters beat the heat. For more information visit www.firegroundrehab.

Patio parties raise over $1000 for FROM

Friday wasn't the typical patio party due to rain, but Mike Larkin made the decision to bring the band inside and continue the tradition of the Friday night patio parties as they have had for the past five Fridays.

manager Deb Apol who (FROM). The prizes mostly for the night, Whiskey Three come from Mike Larkin's stash of antique mirrors he's collected over the years and from some of their distributors.

This past Friday was the most they've made since starting them. That's due, in River Outreach Ministries part, by the entertainment + E.B. The band donated the money they earned for playing right back to FROM because they have always been big supporters of the program. They also made a donation jar and asked people to give more throughout the Owner Mike Larkin is happy to do this. "I think it's important as a business owner, we give back to the community. FROM reaches so many people that I'm glad we can make these donations to them," said Larkin.

There are three more Friday night patio parties scheduled, with the last one being the Friday of Labor Day and they will continue to raise money for FROM at those as well.

Greater transparency on student achievement highlights statewide report cards available online

Over 280 schools in Michigan have been designated as Reward Schools for either high student achievement or making tremendous progress student in achievement, the Michigan Department of Education (MDE) announced today.

Reward Schools is one of three new school designations that came as the result of Michigan receiving flexibility to the federal No Child Left Behind (NCLB) Act from the U.S. Department of Education.

"We applaud the hard work and achievement of the educators and students in our Reward Schools because they are zeroed in on improving learning," said state Superintendent of Public Instruction Mike Flanagan. "We need to instill that goal in so many more schools, in order to help all kids be careerand college-ready successful in life."

Reward Schools include the top five percent of schools on the annual Top-to-Bottom ranking of all Michigan schools, and the top five percent of schools making the greatest academic progress over the previous four years. The 286 Reward Schools are located in 178 different school districts across the state. Schools that will be identified later this fall as Beating the Odds schools also will be deemed Reward Schools.

The schools that need to improve their attention on student learning include the 146 Priority Schools (previously known as Persistently Lowest Achieving schools), and the 358 Focus Schools that have wide achievement gaps between the various student populations.

"We believe teachers in the classrooms every day have important responsibilities and they work tirelessly to help students learn," Flanagan said. "We will help the schools and teachers that need support to meet the unique needs of every student who depends on them."

Priority Schools are those in the bottom five percent of the annual Top-to-Bottom ranking, and any high school with a graduation rate of less than 60 percent for three consecutive years. As required under state law, Flanagan has placed Priority Schools under the authority of the State School Reform Office and the schools will be required to implement an intervention model to improve student achievement.

If any Priority School does not implement its intervention model and make substantial growth in student learning, it faces the opportunity of being placed in the statewide Education Achievement Authority (EAA) school system.

The 146 Priority Schools are located in 49 different for districts that have Focus school districts.

Under the recentlyapproved NCLB flexibility request, an achievement gap is calculated for all Michigan schools identifying the unique gap between the highest and lowest 30 percent of each school's student achievement.

Focus Schools are the 10 percent of schools with the widest gaps. That list includes some otherwise high-achieving schools that normally would not be expected to have low achieving students. However, this new designation places a brighter focus on the struggling students in those schools.

"We are committed to closing the achievement gaps in all of our schools for all of our students," Flanagan said. "With this measure of transparency, schools will be identified and held accountable for the achievement of all of their students."

The 358 Focus Schools are located in 176 different school districts across Michigan.

The Michigan Department of Education will develop and provide a District Toolkit

Schools. MDE will provide technical assistance to these districts on the use of the toolkits in the form of MDEtrained and paid-for District Improvement Facilitators.

With the assistance of these facilitators, districts will have one year to selfdiagnose and self-prescribe customized changes in their supports to the Focus Schools and their students. There are escalating supports and consequences for Focus Schools that do not close their achievement gaps.

Additional transparency with school districts also is apparent in the district-wide Adequate Yearly Progress (AYP) results. This year, the AYP calculated the district as an entire unit, instead of differentiating it by elementary, middle, and high school levels. The U.S. Department of Education also required that graduation rates for all students and all student population groups be included in the district AYP calculations.

Don't fret over changing bond prices

When you own stocks, you know their prices will always fluctuate. To help ease the effects of this volatility on your portfolio, you could add other types of investments, such as bonds. Yet bond prices will also rise and fall. But there may be — in fact, there should be — a big difference in how you view the ups and downs of stocks versus those of bonds.

Any number of reasons can cause stock prices to go up or down. But in the case of bonds, prices go up and down largely, though not exclusively, for one reason: changes in interest rates. Suppose you purchase a bond that pays four percent interest and then, a year later, newly issued bonds pay three percent. You could now potentially sell your bond for more than its face value because it provides more income to investors than the new bonds. Conversely, if newly issued bonds pay five percent interest, the value of your existing bond would drop because it's unlikely that someone would pay full price for a bond that provides less income than newer bonds.

When you own stocks, or stock-based investments, you want their price to rise because you probably plan on selling those stocks someday - and you'd like to sell them for more than you paid for them. But it's not so cut-and-dried with bonds. While some people may indeed purchase bonds in hope of selling them for a profit before they mature, many other investors own bonds for other reasons.

First, as mentioned above, owning bonds can be a good way to help diversify your portfolio. Second, and probably more importantly, people invest in bonds for the income they provide in the form of interest payments. And here's the good thing about those interest payments: They'll always continue at the same level as long as you own your bond, except in the rare case of a default. (Although defaults are not common, they can occur, so you do need to take a bond's "credit risk" into account before investing.) Thus, if you plan to hold your bonds until they mature, you don't have to worry about a possible drop in their value. But if you need to sell your bonds before they mature, the price you receive will depend on current interest rates.

You can't control or predict interest rates, but you can help soften their impact on bond prices by building a "ladder" of bonds with varying maturities. Then, if market interest rates rise, you can sell your maturing short-term bonds and purchase new ones at the higher rates. And if market rates fall, you'll still have your longer-term bonds working for you at higher rates. (Usually, but not always, longer-term bonds pay higher rates to compensate investors for incurring inflation risk over time.) Keep in mind, though, that the investments within your bond ladder should be consistent with your investment objectives, financial circumstances and risk tolerance.

Whether you own your bonds until maturity or build a bond ladder, you can do something to protect yourself from price movements. And that type of control can prove valuable to you as you chart your course through the investment world.

to the editor

and so it goes

Dear Editor,

A response to the August 8, 2012 letter from the Lowell city manager and Light & Power (L&P) general manager warrants a response. We, the undersigned L&P and city workers, would not have gone public regarding the labor negotiations but for the questions that we were asked by the public. The city manager and general manager have presented a rendition of the "facts" which are distorted. We would respond as follows to the city and L&P assertions.

Unfair labor practice. Unfair labor practices were filed against the city and L&P because we believed that their unilateral action in changing working conditions without notice were in violation of Michigan law. At the same time, we agreed to hold the unfair labor practice in abeyance to see if we could accomplish anything at the bargaining table. We have not.

Information requests. We have requested information from the city and L&P which we are entitled to by law from both parties. L&P has been much more diligent in supplying some of the information requested than the city. For example, we have asked the city what non-union city workers receive in their compensation package. The request for this information was made due to a city proposal. The city proposed that we would receive whatever other non-union city employees received for wages and benefits. We have a right to know exactly what the city is proposing and all the information requested is in the public domain.

Yellow signs. We distributed yellow signs because the public has told us that they support us and they have voluntarily put the signs up. We appreciate the public support. Shouldn't the city and L&P be pleased, rather than critical, that their employees have the public support?

Union office. The union office is located in the Grand Rapids area in Edmore, Michigan, not "far away" as claimed by the city manager and general manager.

Handbook. The city and L&P's handbook permits the city and L&P to do as they please, including terminating any employee as they see fit. The handbooks are not Scouting is an activity usually reserved for the hunting fraternity. Hunting success requires being in the right place at the right time regardless of what game is sought. To accomplish this it is necessary to seek out viable habitat, and then by identification of sign and actual sightings of birds and animals, determine the most probable place and time to encounter the quarry.

Although less obvious, fishermen face the same challenge. The difficulty of finding fish is that we can't see them underwater, and they do not leave tracks. And even if one does find them, fish have the choice to bite or not. That's why it is called fishing and not catching.

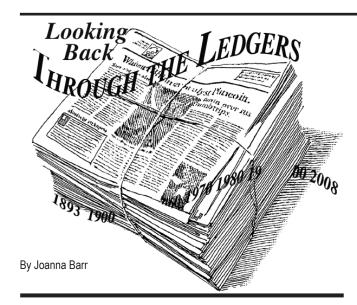

Assuming the angler has located a body of water known for the intended species, the search for the fish begins. A paper map of the lake or a digital download on a G.P.S. unit can be studied to identify likely places to find fish such as drop-offs, weed lines, or rock and wood cover. In larger bodies of water the temperature at a given depth, called the thermocline, can be a draw for roaming schools of fish.

A sonar unit will speed up the process of locating fish. These units will produce images of the bottom structure as well as any fish in the area. Without the electronics, a trial and error search will take more time but is still effective. Shallows can be explored by fly fishing or casting artificial bait along the shoreline for cruising and feeding fish.

After the fish are located and an effective method, including a winning bait, has been selected, one can only hope the bite continues long enough to catch enough fish for the frying pan or provide enough action for catch and release fishermen to be glad they spent the day on the

Another fight with the Indians and another bad whipping for our side. How long is the programme to be continued? If the object is to kill off what few soldiers we have left, then this marching of a handful of them at a time into the jaws of death is a sure plan and a safe one to the enemy. If we are fighting the Indians to whip them, why not increase our forces to a number sufficient to whip them at once and not be peddling out human lives in this inhuman manner?

"The Watch Came Back" - Lowell Man Receives Boyhood Trinket Again After Many Years. Will F. Howk was given a pleasing surprise last Thursday by a call from his oldtime playmate, John Hatchew, now of Columbus, Oh., and the recovery of a valued boyhood possession, a small silver watch with Elgin movement. The watch was given Will on his twelfth birthday anniversary by his grandmother. Boylike, he was anxious for a trade and within a day or two "stumped" his next-door neighbor and playmate, John Hatchew, for a swap. John was ready for him and the result was that Will obtained a one-dollar brass watch and a few knicknacks for the fifteen-dollar silver-cased Elgin. Mr. Hatchew carried the watch only about five years and then laid it away and after forty-one years, brought it back to the original owner in perfect condition. Will is pleased as a boy over the repossession of the boyhood souvenir and the thoughtfulness of his old friend.

Fun ways to give kids a leg up for the school year

Children will soon be headed back to school and it's important to prepare them for the year ahead. As the educational landscape grows increasingly competitive, even the smartest students need an edge.

With today's hectic lifestyles, however, it can be difficult for parents and kids to find the time for enrichment.

"Turning your regular activities into a learning experience can go a long way towards getting kids ready to go back to school," says Kim Tredick, a 5th grade teacher in Santa Clarita, CA, and the 2006 Milken Award Winner. "Just be careful to make the learning fun and road trip, use learning tools not too much like schoolwork."

Here are some cool ways to clear those cobwebs in preparation for a new school year:

> Making the Most of Downtime

Be sure time away from school includes a good dose of intellectual enrichment. Museums, nature centers and historical sites should be a staple of your leisure time and weekends.

Take advantage of time in the car or downtime in general. Whether you're waiting for dinner to be ready, or you're on a lengthy like Brain Quest, a question and answer game to make the time both fun and educational. Because the materials are curriculum-based, the decks and workbooks will give kids a direct leg up on next year's curriculum.

"Kids don't necessarily want to think about being in the classroom when they are away from school, but educational games such as Brain Quest, can actually make prepping for the school year fun," says Tredick. "Let the kids quiz you while cooking or driving as they'll learn as much from asking the questions and it doesn't feel like homework."

More information and free downloadable activities can be found at www.Brain-Quest.com.

Reading and Writing

Give your children a variety of materials to read, like cookbooks, chapter books, nutritional panels, newspapers, magazines and movie schedules. Then test their understanding by summarizing what they read. Let them read aloud to you, siblings, neighbors and grandparents every day.

Children can practice writing and help you at the same time by composing grocery lists, to-do lists and car directions. Encourage them to keep journals and correspond with relatives -- both with handwritten letters and emails. Help improve their writing by editing together, paying attention to capitalization, punctuation and spelling.

Everyday Math

Math is everywhere, so use it to your advantage. Cooking together from a recipe is a fun and practical way to learn about measurements, timing, and following directions.

When you're out shopping, ask your kids to mentally add the total at the grocery store. This will be a lesson both in how money works and basic arithmetic. Work a percentages lesson into your day by having them calculate the sales tax at the register, or calculate the tip at restaurants.

School may not be in full swing yet, but savvy parents can help jumpstart their kids' minds well before their first assignments.

Emma Duvernay, of Lowell, has been named to the dean's list for the 2012 winter term at North Central College. To be eligible for the dean's list, undergraduate students must maintain a grade-point average of 3.6 (4.0=A) for the term and be enrolled as fulltime students. Part-time students are recognized at the end of each academic year if they meet the same criterion and have completed at least eight credit hours, the equivalent of one term as a full-time student.

Kids perform better in school when parents get involved

Children spend five times as much time outside the classroom as they do in school. With all this time away from teachers, it's important for parents to support their children's learn-

In fact, children whose parents are involved with them in family literacy activities score 10 points higher on standardized reading tests, according to the National Center for Family Literacy (NCFL).

"Learning can happen anywhere and at any time," advises Emily Kirkpatrick, Vice President of NCFL. "Go beyond homework help and find learning moments in everyday life that fit in with your schedule."

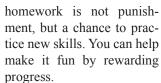

Here are some tips for how you can take a more active role in your child's education:

With some preparation on your part, you can be a better resource for your child. Make sure that you, and those who spend time with your child, are wellequipped to support learn-

- · Turn a household shopping trip into a fun chance to do math. Take a walk outside to discuss nature or the community. Make a lesson plan out of the world around you.
- Develop a partnership with your child's teachers. Talk with them about homework and be sure you understand what is expected.
- •Some children need and want time to play when they get home, while others may want to get homework out of the way first thing. Set a schedule for your child

• It all starts with you. that works for him or her, and make it a routine. Just be sure that your expectations are clear.

• Reinforce the idea that

 Ask your children thought-provoking tions, like what they wonder about. For inspiration you can turn to free online resources that emphasize fun in learning, such as such as www.Wonderopolis.org.

- Help set a timeline so that school assignments are not left until the last minute. Older children with assignments that will take several days or weeks to complete may need your help learning to manage their time.
- · Checking to be sure assignments are complete is great, but don't forget it is your child's assignment, not vours. Do not do homework for your child.
- · Read to your children or with them every night. Not only is this an enjoyable way to spend time together, it will benefit the child and help instill a love of learn-

By getting more involved, you can help your children make this school vear their most successful one yet.

Rainy day livestock auction still draws a crowd

It was cold and rainy on Thursday at the Kent County Youth Fair, but that didn't stop hundreds of people coming out for the annual auction of rabbits, poultry, hogs, sheep, and steer. With most of the kids wearing plaid in honor of Ron Wenger, the longtime fair manager who passed away from Lou Gehrig's disease (ALS) last fall, they got up on the stage and did their best to get the highest price for their livestock.

Sponsored by Attwood, the sale started with 34 rabbits and then moved on to the poultry section of the sale, including a total of 56 fryer and boiler class chickens, geese and turkeys sold. After that, they auctioned off seven goats, 227 hogs, 95 sheep and then saving the biggest sales for last, auctioned off 19 feeder calves and 62 steer. All together, they raised $476,097.91, which is more than $100,000 over last year's total. "This was a record for us. We raised more money with fewer animals being sold," said Jessica Marks, fair manager.

The sellers included kids from Lowell, Alto, Saranac, Belding, Rockford, Belmont, Sparta, Cedar Springs, Ada, Clarksville, Lake Odessa, Caledonia, Wayland, and Byron Center.

With many companies being represented as bidders, competition was fierce with some of the auctions. Some buyers would win their particular auction and then donate the livestock back to be re-bid on and then sometimes it would be donated back to be re-bid on again. That happened mostly when one of the actual 4-H clubs were selling, as it helped raise money for that particular club. "Our buyers were great this year. I couldn't single one out because all together, we have great buyers," added Marks.

Two sellers: Nikki Nugent from Belding and Kristen Burkhardt from Fowlerville, who also happen to be cousins, were both selling their steer. They got into this about three years ago when their aunt, who owned a farm (Nugent Farm in Lowell), encouraged them to start showing and selling their steer.

Cassie Dean, of Lowell, just started showing her sheep for the first time this year. She won first place for showmanship in the category of first-time sellers. "I want to be a vet, so I thought this would be a good place to start." When asked what she was going to do with the money she raised from the sale of her two sheep, she said she was putting it away for college. She got $3.00 per pound for one and $2.75 per pound for the other, for a total of $688.

The auction is mostly a fundraiser for the kids to raise money for college and/ or to buy more livestock to sell again the next year. Rabbits averaged $119.32 for each, poultry averaged $144.60 each and goats sold for an average of $276 each. Swine sold for an average of $3.10/lb, lamb for $3.78/ lb. feeders for $1.85/lb. and steer for $2.36/lb. With each of the steer weighing at least 1,000 lbs., some of the kids walked away with a nice start for a college fund.

More than 1,300 kids were rewarded for reading with a couple hours of free rides at the carnival.

"The Kari Lynch Koncert for Kids was a blast in the afternoon," said Doll.

The sky lantern launch in memory of late fair manager Ron Wenger was joyful, as well as tear filled. Two hundred and fifty lanterns were launched toward the sky. The proceeds of the launch will be donated to the Amyotrophic Lateral Sclerosis (ALS) Association of West Michigan.

Gyros by Zach Nagel of Stus Concessions and Elliott Amusements

amount benefiting the kids and the fair.

That evening bluegrass music could be heard throughout the fairgrounds.

Even the rain, both on Thursday and Friday, could not stop fair goers from enjoying the indoor activities, such as the Save a Life Tour and animals in the barns.

Karaoke and family dance were packed full.

On Sat-urday, Rockford Ambulance was on the grounds giving away bike helmets to kids for free.

"It was a very safe day on the grounds as almost every kid had a bike helmet on," said Doll.

The Scott Thompson band played in the evening. The Xtreme Cowboy Race was a little more Xtreme than normal with mud in the arena from the rains on Friday. Both the junior and senior divisions of the race were filled up as were the stands with spectators.

"This year's fair was a success thanks to all of the volunteers and staff that make it happen and to the best sponsors in the world," said Doll. We look back on the 2012 fair

Social Security Questions and Answers

Question: How do I change my citizenship status on Social Security's records?

Answer: To change your citizenship status shown in Social Security records:

Complete an application for a Social Security card (Form SS-5), which you can find online at www. socialsecurity.gov/online/ ss-5.html; and

Locate documents proving your:

New or revised citizenship status (Only certain documents can be accepted as proof of citizenship. These include your U.S. passport, a Certificate of Naturalization, or a Certificate of Citizenship. If you are not a U.S. citizen, Social Security will ask to see your current immigration documents); Age; and Identity.

Then, take (or mail) your completed application and documents to your local Social Security office or card center.

All documents must be either originals or copies certified by the issuing agency. We cannot accept photocopies or notarized copies of documents. For more information, visit www.socialsecurity.gov.

Question: My husband and I are both entitled to our own Social Security benefits. Will our combined benefits be reduced because we are married?

Answer: No. When each member of a married couple works in employment covered under Social Security and both meet all other eligibility requirements to receive retirement benefits, lifetime earnings are calculated independently to determine the benefit amounts. Therefore, each spouse receives a monthly benefit amount based on his or her own earnings. If one member of the couple earned low wages or did not earn enough Social Security credits (40) to be insured for retirement benefits, he or she may be eligible to receive benefits as a spouse. To learn more about retirement, visit www.socialsecurity.gov/retirement.

Question: I just got back from an overseas military deployment and I want to plan ahead for my retirement. How will my military retirement affect my Social Security benefits?

Answer: Your military retirement won't affect your Social Security benefits at all. You can get both. Generally, there is no offset of Social Security benefits because of your military retirement. You will get full Social Security benefits based on your earnings. However, your Social Security benefit might be reduced is if you also receive a government pension based on a job in which you did not pay Social Security taxes. You can find more information in the publication Military Service and Social Security at www.socialsecurity.gov/ pubs/10017.html. Or call us at 1-800-772-1213 (TTY 1-800-325-0778).

Question: Can I receive Social Security benefits and Supplemental Security Income (SSI) benefits at the same time?

Answer: You may be able to receive SSI in addition to monthly Social Security benefits if your Social Security benefit is low enough for you to qualify for SSI. Whether you can get SSI depends on your income and resources (the things you own). If you have low income and few resources, you may be able to supplement your Social Security benefit with an SSI payment. You can find out more about SSI by going to www.socialsecurity.gov and selecting the "SSI" banner at the top of the page.

Question: What are the limits on what I can own to be eligible for Supplemental Security Income (SSI)? Can I have money in the bank, a car, and a furnished house?

Answer: We count real estate, bank accounts, cash, stocks, and bonds toward the resource limits on what you can own. You may be able to get SSI if your resources are worth no more than $2,000. A couple may be able to get SSI if they have resources worth no more than $3,000. Keep in mind that we usually don't count the house you live in, personal items such as furniture and clothing, or the car you drive towards that resource amount. You can find out more about SSI by going to www.socialsecurity.gov and selecting the "SSI" banner at the top of the page.

Question: How do I apply for Social Security disability benefits?

Answer: There are two ways that you can apply for disability benefits. You can:

1. Apply Online at www.socialsecurity.gov; or

2. Call the toll-free number, 1-800-772-1213 (TTY 1-800-325-0778), to make an appointment to file a disability claim at your local Social Security office or to set up an appointment for someone to take your claim over the telephone.

If you are applying online, a Disability Starter Kit is available at www. socialsecurity.gov/disability. The kit will help you get ready for your disability claim interview. If you schedule an appointment, a Disability Starter Kit will be mailed to you.

Question: My doctor said he thinks I'm disabled. Who decides if I meet the requirements for Social Security disability benefits?

Answer: We first will review your application to make sure you meet some basic requirements for Social Security disability benefits, such as whether you worked enough years to qualify. Then we will send your application to the disability determination services office in your state, often called the "DDS" or "state agency" to determine whether you meet the legal definition of disabled. Your state agency completes the disability decision for us. Doctors and disability specialists in the state agency ask your doctors for information about your condition. They consider all the facts in your case. They use the medical evidence from your doctors and hospitals, clinics, or institutions where you have been treated and all other information.

The state agency staff may need more medical information before they can decide if you are disabled. If more information is not available from your current medical sources, the state agency may ask you to go for a special examination. The preference is to ask your own doctor, but sometimes the exam may have to be done by someone else. Social Security will pay for the exam and for some of the related travel costs. Learn more about disability benefits at www.socialsecurity.gov/disability.

Question: Who can get Extra Help with Medicare prescription drug coverage?

Answer: Anyone who has Medicare can get Medicare Part D prescription drug coverage. Joining a Medicare prescription drug plan is voluntary, and you pay an additional monthly premium for the coverage. People with higher incomes might pay a higher premium.

If you have limited income and resources, you may be eligible for Extra Help to pay for the costs monthly premiums, annual deductibles, and prescription co-payments — related to a Medicare prescription drug plan. To qualify for Extra Help, you must reside in one of the 50 states or the District of Columbia. Your resources must be limited to $13,070 for an individual or $26,120 for a married couple living together. (Resources include such things as bank accounts, stocks, and bonds. We do not count your house and car as resources.) Your annual income must be limited to $16,755 for an individual or $22,695 for a married couple living together.

Even if your annual income is higher, you still may be able to get some help. Learn more at www. socialsecurity.gov/prescriptionhelp.

EARTH TALK®

Questions & Answers About Our Environment

Dear EarthTalk: Which are the most fuel-efficient hybrid and/or all-electric cars available to consumers today (just the affordable ones, please!)? -- Jack Madison, Chicago, IL

Given increased environmental awareness, high gas prices and a continually slumping economy, it's no wonder that more fuel efficient cars are all the rage these days. The best deal going may be Honda's hybrid, the 42 milesper-gallon (MPG) Insight ($18,350). Meanwhile, the newest version of Toyota's flagship hybrid, the Prius ($23,015), garners an impressive 50 MPG. Other solid choices include Toyota's 41-MPG Camry hybrid ($25,900), Ford's 39-MPG Fusion hybrid ($28,700), Lexus' 42-MPG CT 200h ($29,120) and Lincoln's 39-MPG MKZ Hybrid ($34,755).

For even greater efficiency and lower sticker prices, consider going electric, whereby you can charge your vehicle at ordinary electric outlets at home or work. Mitsubishi's new MiEV ($29,125) electric is the most fuel efficient car available to U.S. consumers in the 2012 model year, achieving 112 "MPG-equivalent" (the U.S. Environment Protection Agency's rating for electric vehicles that swaps in electricity for gas in its calculations) and a 62 mile range per full charge — not bad considering four adults can fit fairly comfortably inside. Another option is Smart's FourTwo Electric ($28,752), a two-seater with an 87 MPG-equivalent. And Nissan's all-electric Leaf ($35,200) achieves 99 MPG efficiency for a range up to 100 miles.

So-called "plug-in" hybrids also allow drivers to charge their vehicles' electric batteries via common power outlets, but also can use gasoline as needed for a longer range. Though pricey at $39,145, the Chevy Volt may save you money in the long run because it gets a whopping 94 MPG-equivalent in its preferred all-electric mode. An onboard gas generator produces more electricity as the vehicle is driven, extending the car's range with a full tank of gas to some 375 miles. Toyota released a plug-in version of its Prius ($32,760) this year, as well. It gets 87 MPG in electric mode (but this will only get you 15 miles without gas assistance) and a respectable 49 MPG in regular hybrid mode.

Another factor to consider when deciding which of these new uber-efficient vehicles may be right for you is the availability of additional incentives. Buyers of a new Volt, MiEV, FourTwo Electric or Leaf, for example, can cash in on a federal tax credit of $7,500 — and some states may offer additional incentives — bringing the overall cost of these cars down to within the range of similarly sized traditional car models. The U.S. Department of Energy (DOE) posts all of the relevant federal tax incentives online at its Fuel Efficient Vehicle Tax Information Center website. For state-by-state incentives, check out the Database of State Incentives for Renewable Energy (DSIRE), a free online resources maintained by the North Carolina Solar Center and the Interstate Renewable Energy Council (IREC).

Of course, consumers don't have to go hybrid or electric to enjoy improved fuel efficiency these days. Scion's iQ ($15,265) and Honda's CR-Z ($19,545) each get 37 MPG out of sporty little gas-powered internal combustion engines. Kia, Toyota, Chevrolet, Hyundia and Nissan also make smaller traditional cars that get a respectable 33-34 MPG for sticker prices under $15,000.

binding and were prepared by the city and L&P without any input from employees. The handbook does not provide any safeguard for any employee rights. Both the city and L&P have refused to include handbook policies into an agreement as we have proposed.

Subcontracting. We agree that the city and L&P's proposal would permit them to subcontract all of our jobs without any notice. The city and L&P's handbook permits the subcontracting of our jobs without notice.

Temporary employees. We agree that the city and L&P have proposed that employees can be laid off or let go and replaced with temporaries. The city and L&P's handbook allows temporary employees to replace regular employees who are laid off or let go.

Secondary jobs. We agree that the city and L&P have refused to agree that employees can hold a second job, even if it does not cause a conflict with the city or L&P. The police contract with the city permits second jobs.

Grievance procedure. The grievance procedure proposed by the city and L&P insures that the city and L&P will have the final say if a grievance is filed. The city handbook does not provide for a grievance procedure. The L&P handbook gives L&P the sole authority to decide any employee complaint. The police agreement with the city permits a neutral to decide on any grievance. We are asking for no more than what the city has agreed to with the police union in the city police contract.

The city and L&P do not disagree that thousands of dollars have been spent on a downstate attorney with no settlement in sight. One of the citizens at the council meeting called the city's conduct at negotiations as being "all one-sided and heavy-handed." We would agree. Compromise and mutual respect will go a long way to bringing us all back together. Many of us have been raised in the city and live in the city and are proud of the work we do for its citizens. We are ever hopeful that the city and L&P's management will finally come to recognize that we should be working together in the best interests of the citizens. We intend to continue to do so.

reader still has questions

Dear Editor,

I recently attended the Aug. 6 city council meeting. I went to voice my opinion along with many others on a subject that has many in the city upset in the way it's being handled by the city council and the city manager.

The subject is the quest for a contract through negotiations by the employees of the Lowell Light and Power (LL&P) and the Department of Public Works with the city of Lowell and the Lowell Light and Power

One after another of highly motivated constituents came to the podium to speak their dissatisfaction with the city council, the city manager and the LL&P. I have to say that the group was very vocal and determined to get their point across. The question is, did all their effort go to deaf

The city council and the Lowell Light and Power saw fit not to comment at that time. The first attempt by the city council and the LL&P to respond came in an Aug. 8 'viewpoint' article. But that article failed to bring forth the proposals of the contract. The city manager, in his first city update in the Lowell

Ledger, said my role is to bring you the facts and the reasons for those decisions.

Well all I can say about that statement is that we're still waiting. This is all about what the city council, the city manager and the LL&P want and the community has been left out.

I believe the city council should curtail all negotiations over a contract until the constituents of Lowell are properly informed of all proposals and then a public hearing held so the constituents can debate the subject. It's time to do it the right way, the fair way and the only way.

Sincerely, Jim Howard Lowell

Monday evening. The damage to the car was slight, but Supt. F. J. McMahon estimates damage to the lamp post will run over a hundred dollars. It is reported that Miss Decker lays the cause of the accident to a tire going flat.

The Hastings Banner says that a large amount of Hastings' people saw the Lowell Showboat and adds that those who did not see it, now wish they had.

Now that the Lowell Showboat has become an established institution and its sight on Lafayette-st. a permanent one, the Ledger respectfully suggests that the name Lafayette-st. be officially changed to "Showboat Street."

Five Fires Keep Lowell Dept. Busy Last Week - Local firemen were kept busy over the weekend as five fires struck in the area on Thursday, Friday and Saturday. First call to the local fire department came Thursday noon after burning paper blew into the excelsior at the N. E. Borgerson home, 219 North Washington Street. The Borgerson house was singed and filled with smoke before the flames were extinguished. At 6:15 in the evening Thursday, firemen were summoned to the Timpson Orchard on M-91 south of the city where a grass fire was raging. Another grass fire call came in

Friday and firemen rushed to the scene near Murray Lake. Following this, a second outbreak of fire at Timpson Orchard occurred in the afternoon between 4 and 5 p.m. Saturday noon a grass fire at the rear of St. Mary's school kept the firemen busy for a short time.

Headline: Boat goes over dam - Lowell police and fire personnel were alerted Monday morning when a small fishing boat washed over the King Milling Co. dam on the Flat River. The boat contained a life cushion, oars and some fishing tackle, so the possibility of a drowning was likely. Lowell Chief of Police Barry Emmons began a rundown of the boat's registration numbers, only to find that it had last been registered to a now deceased Ada resident. The mystery was finally solved when a reserve police officer arrived at the scene and remembered impounding the same boat at an earlier date. The owner, Brian DeBold, was located at work in Holland, but fears arose again when DeBold said that his younger brother may have been using the boat. Police tracked the younger DeBold down at football practice. Emmons said the bow line on the boat had been cut and the boat was probably set adrift as a

160 new citizens have the opportunity to register to vote

Michigan Secretary of State representatives will offer new citizens the opportunity to register to vote after two naturalization ceremonies in Grand Rapids today.

 $W\ e\ d\ n\ e\ s\ d\ a\ y\ '\ s$ ceremonies will be held at the Gerald R. Ford Museum. About 80 participants are expected at each ceremony.

"This is a tremendous opportunity for our newest citizens," said Johnson. "By registering to vote, they will be able to exercise a treasured, fundamental right for citizens of this country – to have their voice heard and their vote count on Election Day."

As Michigan's chief elections officer, Johnson will have a voter registration table on site for the convenience of the newly sworn citizens. People also may register to vote at their local clerk's office, at their local Secretary of State office or by mail.

The U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services Bureau, part of Department of Homeland Security, is conducting the ceremonies, during which residents who want to become citizens take the oath of citizenship and receive their certificate of naturalization.

This follows a detailed application process including interviews. fingerprinting and English and civics test.

Celebrate Hispanic Heritage Month

Hispanic Heritage Month begins on September 15, and whether you prefer communicating in English or Spanish, there are some important online services we'd like you to know about. You can find them at www.socialsecurity.gov and at our Spanish site, www.segurosocial.gov.

If you are ready to apply for Social Security retirement benefits now, you can do it quickly and easily on your home or office computer. The online application takes as little as 15 minutes. Once you complete the online application and "sign" it with the click of a mouse, your application is complete. In most cases, there are no documents to submit or additional paperwork to fill out. Online is the easiest way to apply, and you can do it in English or Spanish. However, you can do more than apply for benefits. You can find a lot of information and a number of online services that allow you to complete your Social Security business online, in English or Spanish. One of the most popular is our Retirement Estimator, which provides an instant, personalized estimate of your future Social Security benefits. Using the actual wages posted in your Social Security record, the Estimator will give you a good picture of what to expect in benefits. It protects your personal information by providing only retirement benefit estimates — it does not show the earnings information used to calculate the benefit estimate, nor does it reveal other identifying information. You can plug in different retirement scenarios and future wage amounts to get estimates for different situations.

Whether you prefer to do business online in Spanish or English, our website is the place for you. Viswww.segurosocial.gov or www.socialsecurity.gov during Hispanic Heritage Month, or anytime. It's so exploring our national parks Kurt Hieshetter

Brought to you by -KOOL TOYOTA • www.kooltoyota.com 3780 Plainfield Ave • 866-421-3030

fall on the summer of 2012, I thought it would help to let everyone know the progress of our national park quest before I start sharing the adventures with you again. Since I last visited with you, our family has driven over 5,000 miles on our way to visit three more national parks and one very large national recreation area. Due to an unforseen injury, I was able to see first-hand what a mess our health care system is in. I must also tell you that this summer was not the best time to be camping in a tent. You will have to check these pages later to read about the details.

Let me tell you where we stand to date. We have now visited 31 out of 56 true U.S. national parks. We have driven over 30,000 miles with most of that been able to see the first pulling a travel trailer. I will let you do the math on the amount of gas that we used

As the curtain begins to to accomplish this. We have slept in Walmart parking lots, under the stars on the beach at Lake Powell and in primitive shelters on Isle Royale. We have crossed Michigan, Superior, Lake Champlain and the Straits of Florida by ferry boat.

> Along the way, our children have been able to participate in a reenactment of the Lewis and Clark expedition at Pompey's Pillar National Monument, crawl around in cliff dwellings last inhabited over a thousand years ago at Mesa Verde National Park and earn over fifty Junior Ranger badges along the way. Sierra has even acquired an e-mail pal, Skylar, that she met on the boat ride to the Dry Tortuga National Park in Florida.

> We, as a family, have sunrise on this great country in Acadia National Park and the last sunset at Mallory

The Hieshetter's at the southernmost point in the U.S.

Square in Key West, Florida. We have traveled to the north woods of Minnesota at Voyagers National Park and to the southern tip of Florida in the everglades. We have been very fortunate to see some of the greatest sights this country has to offer... most without too many major mishaps!

Now the real challenge begins. Up until this point, we have been able to visit at least one park in a two week travel window, sometimes driving all night to reach our destination to give us more time to explore once we arrive. This becomes more difficult with the remaining parks since most are over 2,000 miles away. While we know that it would be possible to fly into a gateway city, rent a car and stay in hotels, we much prefer the camping route. Some of the things you discover on the road to your destination are just as cool to see as where you are headed and we'd hate to miss these sights. However, we were able to visit three parks in west Texas by flying into El Paso, so it is an option. Our goal is to start knocking out these far-away parks next year and with eight national parks located in California, I'll have my work cut out for me to figure out the logistics to get from Lowell, MI to wherever we decide to go. But, I have most of the winter to figure this out, since you can't start making reservations for Yosemite until February.

Please check back in a few weeks to check out my next story on our adventures at Everglades National Park.

Dillon and Sierra get a chance to sit in the cockpit before the flight home from Texas.

AUGUST 8 - AUGUST 14

- Legendary Cosmospolitan editor-in-chief, Helen Gurley Brown, dies at the age of 90.
- Mitt Romney picks Tea Party favorite Paul Ryan of Wisconsin as his running mate.
- The final medal count for the 2012 Olympics (the top five countries) has the USA with a total of 104 medals; China with 88; Great Britain with 65; Russia with 82; and Korea with a total of 28 medals.
- An alligator trainer, at an Ohio county fair, failed to get his arm out of the way during a demonstration and the alligator's jaws snapped down. His partner had to pry the gator's jaws apart and surprisingly there was no nerve or muscle damage.
- Just before President Obama visited Iowa, his Agriculture Secretary, Tom Vilsack, announced the USDA will purchase "up to" $170 million of chicken, catfish, lamb and pork, within the fiscal year to help livestock producers impacted by the drought. The meat will be used in federal nutrition programs and food banks.
- Three people are killed in another shooting near the Texas A&M campus in College Station. Four others were wounded. The gunman was shot, taken into custody and later died. The man began shooting when an officer tried to serve an eviction notice to the suspect.
- Johnny Pesky, former Boston Red Sox player, died at the age of 92.
- 25-year-old Dustin Heathman bragged about the fish he caught on an Austin, TX fishing forum saying, "put around 40 fish in the boat with 22 keepers". Turns out he broke the law. One person on a boat is allowed to take home five fish. Others on the website attempted to warn him and some reported him to the parks and wildlife department. The fisherman feels he deserves to keep that many fish because he usually throws them back. He said he had family in town to feed who wanted a fish fry. He may have to pay a fine of up to $500 per extra fish.

Bats come to Wittenbach/Wege Agriscience Nature Center

Myths about bats will be dispersed at the Wittenbach/ Wege Agriscience Nature Center during the upcoming presentation "Bats of the World" on Aug. 21 at 7 p.m.

The program about bats comes appropriately during the International Year of the Bat 2012.

The nocturnal creature has been the subject of numerous misinterpretations of the importance of its existence partly due to horror movies, books, Halloween and diseases.

"There are a lot of myths because of rabies," said education specialist Michelle Maust. "Actually, only half a percent of bats have rabies, but they don't survive."

There is a natural fear of bats since they come out at night.

"They're scary spooky because of being nocturnal," she said.

And the vampire bats, that are native to Africa, are really small, about the size of the palm of the hand.

"They prefer animal blood," Maust said.

The program will explain why the bats are important to the ecosystem.

Maust will bring along four live bats, including local and African bats.

"It's a chance to have people exposed to bats," said Maust, "and to get close and personal."

Bats are tremendous helpers to all farmers and gardeners because they eat thousands of insects.

Michigan has a good population of bats due to open fields, rich water sources and dead and dying

"By having bat houses, you can control insects and you will have a lot less mosquitoes without using pest control," she said.

The bat species that live in Michigan eat nothing else but insects. The big brown bat has a 10 to 12 inches wing span.

At one time people kept bats as pets, like the

High school football gearing up for the season

by Karen Jack

Are you ready for some football? With this year's summer being so hot, it doesn't seem like it should already be football season, but it's here. Just ask the players out practicing from 7:00 am to 10:30 am each day.

Last Monday kicked off the first practice and they were clearly at it, already running plays. Of course, there was no tackling involved as the players cannot wear pads for the first four days of practice, according to MHSAA rules. Those days are preserved for conditioning each year.

With the first game being held August 23rd this year, each day of practice is important so that they get as much done as they can. The Red Arrows have a tough schedule this year, starting with four out-of-conference games against Rockford, Christian.

The Arrows will have almost a whole new offensive

Lansing Eastern, Grand Haven and Muskegon. With the realignment of the OK conference, the Red Arrows will face Jenison in their first OK White conference game. The other conference games include Forest Hills Central, East Grand Rapids, Caledonia and Grand Rapids line, complete with a new quarterback. Head coach Noel Dean said he wasn't sure if the quarterback will Sherlow. He said there's always anxiety when you're replacing your quarterback. "It reminds me of when be Titan Anderson or Kyler Gabe Dean started for us.

We'll have to work out the kinks as we go, but either one of these kids will do a great job," said Dean.

They will also have to fill in some vacancies on > the defense left by graduating seniors. "We'll be relying on our defense early on and I know they'll help us out," added Dean.

When asked who the kids to watch this year would be, Dean named Pierce Watson, Reed Stormzand Zach Hoover Dyer. "They'll be exciting to watch," he said.

"The whole team is filled with typical Lowell kids hardworking, dedicated and intelligent. I'm excited for this year and come Rockford game, we'll be ready," Dean said.
