Lowell Township residents upset with proposed Kissing Rock housing development

by Tim McAllister
lead reporter

Over a hundred people attended a two hour long Lowell Township planning commission meet-ing on Monday, Jan. 9. The citizens were there for a public hearing about new homes that a developer plans to construct in the Kissing Rock Estates area of Lowell Township.

“There is a property of over 60 acres where some guys want to put in a housing development,” said Lowell Township supervisor Jerry Hale. “It’s got quite a bit of road frontage, so they have taken five statutory splits across the front of it, all four acres, 200 feet of frontage or more. State law allows them to do that. For the balance of the property they want to develop and put in a private road and have 11 more home sites, all of four acres or more. Like everybody else in that area, they’re all on four acre sites with 200 feet of frontage on either a private road or a public road. It’s nothing new for that area. It’s called a ‘site condo,’ it’s a way of developing vacant land, and that was a lot of the problem. When people heard ‘site condo,’ they thought of condominium units, big parking lots and a lot of lights and all that, which wouldn’t be allowed there anyway.”

Some members of the public are upset about the development. There is a “Save Kissing Rock From Development” Facebook page with 118 members and petition called “Stop the Development of Kissing Rock Estates” on change.org with 77 signatures as of printing time.

“The people on Kissing Rock are against it,” Hale said. “They don’t want to see this property developed even though about half of them live on private roads that are exactly like the one these guys want to do. Another part of the problem is that some of the people in that area have used this property to play on and ride horses and stuff for many years. Now it’s going away and they don’t want to see that. They’re upset because they don’t like to see change. They just don’t want to see it happen. I can see their point, I don’t blame them. It’ll blow over eventually.”

Despite all the public outcry, there does not seem to be much anybody can do to stop the new development.

“It meets our zoning ordinance and as long as they come up with a plan that meets our ordinance we can’t turn them down,”

Hale said. “If the planning commission turned it down the developer could come back and sue us and we would lose for sure. Then we would end up paying his court costs, damages and everything. The key is it’s got to meet our zoning ordinance, and it looks like it does. It is America, that is this guy’s property and we can’t tell him he can’t do something with it if it meets all the rules.”

The next meeting of the Lowell Township planning commission will be on Feb. 13 at 7 pm at Lowell Township hall, 2910 Alden Nash SE.

Funds still short for rebuilding Whites Bridge

by Tim McAllister
lead reporter

There has been some movement toward rebuilding historic Whites Bridge, which was destroyed by an arsonist in 2013. However, the group behind the project needs a lot more money to finish.

“We’ve raised approximately $465,500 from the Meijer Foundation, our Michigan Department of Transportation grant and various other foundations and private donations,” said Nancy Stroosnyder, treasurer of the Whites Bridge Historical Society. “The revised estimate for the bridge is $815,000. Future expenses include engineering, inspections, abutment restoration, electrical service, lighting and security, totaling $80,000. This leaves a shortfall of $429,500. We are working diligently seeking numerous grants from several foundations who show interest in historical preservation and (rural) community development. We will also be able to apply for additional MDOT funding in June of this year.”

The WBHS is also eager to receive donations from companies, groups and private individuals.

Youth theater to present Anne of Green Gables this Friday

by Tim McAllister
lead reporter

This weekend LowellArts Youth Theater will present “Anne of Green Gables,” L.M. Montgomery’s 1908 novel about young orphan Anne Shirley’s adventures on Prince Edward Island with her friends, her acquaintances and her adopted family.

“The LowellArts Players chose Anne of Green Gables for its annual youth theater production because it is such a classic, well-loved novel and it was an enticing challenge to be able to recreate the book on stage,” said Janet Teunis, LowellArts project director. “This particular dramatization by Joseph Robinette presents the memorable events and characters very faithfully. If you are a previous fan of the Anne of Green Gables stories or if you will be meeting Anne for the first time at the play, what a treat to see the spirited characters come alive on stage.”

Although it’s a production of the youth theater, the cast is comprised of actors of varying ages. It will be directed by Brent Alles.

“There are 14 youth, ages seven to 18 and ten adults in the cast,” Teunis said. “LowellArts annually puts on a production that appeals to kids and families and that incorporates both youth and adult actors. Sierra Hieshetter is playing the role of Anne Shirley. She is 14 years old and is in the eighth grade at Lowell Middle School. This is her third LowellArts production. She was in ‘The Surprising Story of the Three Little Pigs’ and ‘The Bremen Town Musicians.’”

Public performances will take place at the Lowell Performing Arts Center inside of Lowell High School, 11700 Vergennes, at 7 pm on Friday, Jan. 20 and at 2:30 pm on Saturday, Jan. 21. Hundreds of Lowell youngsters will also see the play for free during the school day.

“Donors can contribute via PayPal through our website [whitesbridgehistoricalsociety.org] or they can send a check directly to PO Box 55, Lowell, MI 49331,” Stroosnyder said.

In July 2016 the Ledger reported that the Michigan Department of Transportation would begin advertising for bids to rebuild the bridge on August 5, 2016. This fell through, however, when it was found that the plans would have constructed the bridge out of a different type of wood than originally called for.

“We had written our specifications around Douglas fir and western larch,” Stroosnyder said.

“The suppliers wanted to supply southern yellow pine so the timbers needed to be checked to see if the southern yellow pine would meet our load requirements. The two species have different strength properties. As it turned out southern yellow pine met the load requirements but we couldn’t verify that in the week before the bidding.”

Whites Bridge was built across the Flat River in 1869. It was a popular local landmark for 144 years until an arsonist burned it down on July 7, 2013. The perpetrator of this crime has never been caught. If you have any information about the fire, call the Lowell Police Department.

LHS announces January Students of the Month

Nichole Mitchell, 11th grade; and Kendra Wroten, 12th grade; are the Lowell High School January Students of the Month. In order to be eligible for this honor a student must be nominated by a department. All the nomination forms for the month are then reviewed and voted on at the monthly department chair meeting. Students are selected based on academic achievement, character and work ethic. There are 1,200 students eligible for nomination, so this is quite an accomplishment for Mitchell and Wroten. The students receive a $20 movie gift card and a certificate.

Mitchell was nominated by Sara Ellis and she writes, "Nichole is in my Spanish 4 class. She is a model student, receives high marks on everything, pays close attention, works well with others and goes above and beyond what's required of her. Spanish 4 is a challenging class; they only hear Spanish and are required to speak only in Spanish. Nichole takes this challenge to another level. She not only does everything required of her, but she has been watching a Spanish TV series every night to improve her Spanish on her own."

Heather DeJonge and Tammy Coleman nominated Wroten. DeJonge writes, "Kendra is an amazing young lady that demonstrates self-direction and integrity in research class daily. She has shown great perseverance in culturing and maintaining her research model organism Daphnia. She always completes assignments on time and with detail and accuracy. She is well deserving of this honor." Coleman writes, "Kendra is a mature, kind, quiet leader. She has no need to be in the limelight but rather works hard, does the right things and is extremely helpful to others. Great attitude always!"

Nichole Mitchell

Growing herds offset by strong demand

Consumers should see ample supplies of their favorite meats in 2017. Brisk demand will keep prices from falling too much further though producers of cattle and hogs have seen supply driven prices.

Those were major points made by Dr. Karl Skold, head of agricultural economics at JBS, at a workshop at the American Farm Bureau Federation's 2017 Annual Meeting, which wrapped up this week in Phoenix, Ariz. Skold said a historically unusual situation of expanding herds, growing supply and significant demand is driving an overall positive outlook for producers of beef and pork.

"Start with lower feed costs," Skold said, "And the economy continues to improve. We are nearing full employment and wages are picking up." Skold said these trends are showing up in how consumers are making meat choices.

"We are seeing a big jump in eating meat but we are also seeing a shift to steaks," Skold said. "We haven't seen this big a jump in demand in a long time."

This is encouraging news for cattle producers who have seen steep declines in cattle prices from record-highs only a year ago.

The situation with pork is similar, Skold said, and pork has been profitable until a fourth quarter drop last year. Per capita pork consumption has been stuck in the neighborhood of 50 pounds per person for some time. Pork is more dependent on the export market.

Skold also said that per capita consumption over all meats, including chicken, is going up, tracking lower prices, but beef is gaining favor again with the ample supplies. The economist said that surveying retailers revealed that they had not priced steak as low in the last quarter of 2016 in six years.

"You go to the meat case and you see $5.99 steaks, you're going to buy them," he said. "You see $9.99, we're going to feed the Johnson's coming over chicken." But Skold said, the prices are spurring significant increases in demand.

Skold said exports would be a huge factor in continuing health for the livestock sector. There are what he called "headwinds," starting with a strong U.S. dollar against most other currencies.

Other nations cannot buy as much U.S. meat with their own currencies. He said that many of the gains in U.S per capita consumption have already been realized. The industry may have to seek additional gains in the export market. "You have the population increasing at six-tenths or eight-tenths per year and you get supply increasing four, five or six percent you're going to have to export it."

Skold says consumers should see many opportunities to stock up on beef and pork as huge supplies will encourage demand. "Consumers have really returned and are eating more meat," he said.

When do you need a financial advisor?

Are you a "do-it-yourselfer"? If you can take care of home repairs, lawn work and other types of maintenance by yourself, you'll save money and probably gain satisfaction. But you will almost certainly need some help in other areas of your life – one of which may be investing.

In fact, you could benefit from the services of a professional financial advisor at several points in your life:

- When you're starting out in your career – When you land your first "career-type" job, you will have some financial decisions to make: Should I participate in my employer's 401(k) or other retirement plan? (Hint: Yes!) If so, how much should I contribute? How can I juggle saving for retirement with paying off student loans? These are the types of questions you can answer with the help of a financial advisor.

- When you're saving for important goals – Whether you're saving for a down payment on your first home, or for your children's college education, or for your own comfortable retirement, you'll face many choices. A financial advisor – someone with experience in helping people work toward these goals – can assist you in making the choices most appropriate for your individual situation.

- When you're experiencing a personal "milestone" – Like everyone, you'll go through many major life events. Some will be joyful, such as marriage and the arrival of children, while others may be unpleasant or sad, such as divorce or the death of a loved one. But virtually all these events carry with them some type of financial component – establishing new investment accounts, purchasing sufficient insurance, naming and changing of beneficiaries, and so on. A financial advisor who truly understands you and your needs can help you make appropriate moves for all your milestones.

- When you're close to retirement – As you near retirement, you'll have several issues to consider: About how much income will you need each year? When should you start taking Social Security? How much can you afford to withdraw annually from your IRA and 401(k)? A financial advisor has the tools, training and experience to explore alternatives and suggest suitable moves for you.

- When you're retired – Even after you retire, you've got plenty to think about, in terms of financial moves. For one thing, you need to ensure that your investment portfolio provides you with both sufficient income for your desired lifestyle and adequate growth potential to help you stay ahead of inflation. What's the correct balance of investments for your needs? Are there investments that can provide you with rising income without exposing you to undue risk? Once you're retired, you just won't get a lot of "do-overs," so getting the right help is important.

If you're a do-it-yourselfer, you may not get it right each and every time. But you won't pay much of a price (except, perhaps in embarrassment) if that chair you built collapses under a stack of newspapers. However, you also know when it's time to call in a professional – and that's whom you need when it comes to building your financial future. So, get the assistance you need, when you need it, from a financial advisor.

EARTH TALK™

Questions & Answers About Our Environment

Dear EarthTalk: I've heard that one of the big hurdles to growth in renewables is energy storage. What's new in the world of battery technologies? And will better forms of storage really accelerate the development of solar, wind and other alternative forms of energy?
—Maxwell Jay, Erie, PA

It's true that energy storage has been an Achilles heel in the emerging renewable energy sector, given the large environmental footprint required to produce and distribute our current crop of lithium ion and other types of batteries—and the fact that they do not hold nearly the capacity needed to make intermittent renewable sources (like solar and wind) viable as secure year-round sources of power. Whether or not renewables can replace fossil fuels in the future may well depend on our ability to drastically improve the way we store electricity.

But given the importance of solving this problem, a lot of great minds are working on it. Electric carmaker Tesla is close to finishing construction on a "Gigafactory" in the desert outside of Sparks, Nevada to produce lithium ion batteries for its signature electric cars and its new line of utility-grade and household energy storage appliances. By 2018, the new renewable energy-powered facility will reach full capacity with an annual battery production capacity of 35 gigawatt-hours—and will produce more lithium ion batteries annually than were produced worldwide in 2013. Tesla expects its Gigafactory to shave upwards of 30 percent off battery production costs, and serve as a model for how to mass produce green technology with a triple (social, environmental and financial) bottom line in mind.

But critics point out that merely lowering the production costs for existing technologies by a third won't provide the quantum leap in storage capacity needed to make intermittent renewables as reliable as traditional "baseload" (e.g., consistent generation) sources such as coal, natural gas or hydropower.

For now, Tesla is poised to dominate the world's battery market with its Gigafactory coming online later this year. But analysts think we'll have some new alternatives to the lithium ion battery standard within a decade or so, especially if venture capitalists and other investors begin to grasp how important better energy storage options may be to our future.

"Many researchers believe energy storage will have to take an entirely new chemistry and new physical form, beyond the lithium-ion batteries that over the last decade have shoved aside competing technologies in consumer electronics, electric vehicles and grid-scale storage systems," reports Richard Martin, senior editor for energy at MIT Technology Review.

Some of the most promising designs employ cheap and abundant natural materials (such as air, water, carbon, sodium, quinine, and even sand) as catalytic substrates. But Martin points out that there are so many competing technologies "from foam batteries to flow batteries to exotic chemistries, that no one clear winner is attracting most of the funding and research activity."

He adds that these small start-ups lack the capitalization to get their products ready for the mass market. Setting up a small manufacturing line and testing various combinations of materials to optimize a new battery technology's potential storage capacity and charge/discharge rates could cost as much as $500 million, but most start-ups in the space can expect investments averaging only about $5 million a year. "That huge investment gap is hard to overcome," concludes Martin.

A January winter, 30 degrees below zero, 33 rabbit hunters from the Lowell area blazed their way through the snowdrifts, brush piles and briar patches to seek out those cute little cottontails known as the elusive "Briar Rabbit." The contest was a freezing, four hour one. The hunters were in teams of three. With a deadline of high noon to register the most bunnies, the team of Dave Potter, Jon Vezino and John Krebill came sliding in with 11 cottontails to hop away with first place honors from Saturday's hunt. A total of 54 rabbits were taken in all by 33 hunters. So a good hunt it was, but a cold one. Don't miss the next "Big Guns Bunny Blast" scheduled for February 22. diverticulosis and diverticulitis Diverticulosis is common in older adults, occurring in about half of people between 60 and 80 years of age. Scientists do not know what causes diverticulosis. It is a condition in which small pouches (called diverticula) form at weak spots in the wall of the colon. A low fiber diet may play a role in developing the disease.

Most people who have diverticulosis have no symptoms. It is called diverticular disease. Diverticular disease also includes diverticulitis.

Diverticulitis occurs when diverticulosis becomes inflamed and infected. Symptoms include abdominal pain (usually on the left side), fever, nausea and cramps. Diverticulitis is usually diagnosed with a CT scan of the abdomen. Most cases of diverticulitis are treated at home with antibiotics and a few days of liquid diet. If your symptoms are severe or you have a complication, you may need to be treated in the hospital with bowel rest and IV antibiotics. Surgery is rarely required.

By the way, eating certain foods such as nuts, popcorn and seeds does not contribute to the development of diverticulitis. A study in 2008 concluded that.

Gymnasts salute military at third annual event

by Kathryn Atwood
contributing reporter

Lowell's varsity gymnasts competed twice last week meeting the Kenowa Hills/Grandville/West Catholic co-op team on Monday and welcoming area teams to their third annual military salute at Lowell High School on Saturday.

The opposition put up a strong fight on Monday where the Arrows came out on top by a slim margin 136.875-132 win. Junior Maura Fitzpatrick led the Lowell charge winning top honors on the vault, beam and floor exercise earning her all-around status at the event. Senior captain Corah Kaufman also scored well for the team on the bars. The win positions the team at 1-0 in conference dual meets this season.

Saturday the team donned patriotic leotards for their third annual Military Salute. Head coach Michele DeHaan said the special event was conceived to accomplish two purposes. Honoring the deserving men and women of the United States military and giving her athletes something more than just their top gymnastics skills. "I want to have a positive influence on my athletes and have them graduate from my program getting more out of it than just gymnastics," said DeHaan, "Amazing memories are more important than places and medals. Our nation's military needs to be respected and honored; I want my girls to love their country and respect and honor those that serve."

Sixteen veteran and current soldiers were honored at the event with a ceremony before competition. The honorees were spread across nearly every branch of the military with some sharing the gymnasts' Lowell High School roots, including a trio of 2015 Lowell graduates currently serving in the Army National Guard. Current Red Arrow Tori Miller honored Private First Class Ryan Tarchala, Marissa Grover honored Private Tyler Ritchie and Hadyn Nash honored Private Cody Curtis.

The ceremony included future Lowell graduate Private First Class Marcus Schussler who was honored by Amber Brown. Schussler recently finished basic training and will graduate this spring with the class of 2017. Lisa Price honored 2001 Lowell graduate Captain Michael Wierenga who was represented by brother James as he is currently serving active duty in the Air Force stationed in Utah. Maura Fitzpatrick honored current Lowell Area Schools' bus driver Quartermaster First Class Bill Wierenga who served 20 years in the Navy.

Others recognized in the ceremony included Marine Sergeant Cody Kasper honored by senior Allison Fuller, Army Specialist Donald Ensing honored by his great-granddaughter Taeghan Ronchetti, Army E4 Specialist Ron Zimmerman honored by Olyvia Johnson, Marine Corporal Thomas Luehrs honored by Emily Lothian, Army National Guard E4 Specialist Rich Mutschler honored by Corah Miller and Army Private First Class Michael Shalander honored by senior team captain Corah Kaufman.

Kaufman was joined by fellow captain and senior Paige DeHaan in escorting special honoree Staff Sergeant Joseph Benak. A World War II veteran who served in the 77th Infantry Division from 1943-1947, Benak is known as G.I. Joe and was part of the liberating forces of Guam. The 91-year-old veteran was recently honored by outgoing president Barack Obama with the scarcely awarded Congressional Gold Medal for his service with the Civil Air Patrol.

Following the ceremony the gymnasts hit the mat with ferocity logging a third-place 138.2 finish behind Livonia (139.525) and meet winner Rockford/Sparta (144.975). DeHaan said she was very pleased with the competition results. "This was a great meet for us! So many personal best scores and some girls doing events for the first time."

Fitzpatrick was the Red Arrows' top performer earning second place on the vault with a 9.2, ninth on the bars with a 8.325, fourth on the beam with a 9.025 and second in the floor exercise with a 9.375. Her performance earned her a second place all-around title with a combined score of 35.925.

Karmen Anderson also earned all-around honors finishing third with a 35.725 after placing fifth on the vault, third on the bars, fifth on the beam and seventh on the floor. Forward rounded out all-around placers in the tenth position with a 33.2 total score and a fourth-place finish on the vault and a fifth place on the bars. Lisa Price earned the day's only first place on the floor exercise earning a 9.4. Also placing were Kaufman who placed second on the bars and Amber Brown who finished tenth on both the vault and the bars.

Girls continue their stellar season

by Kathryn Atwood
contributing reporter

A stellar 5-1 season got even better last week when the Red Arrow varsity girls basketball team hit the court twice improving their record to 7-1 with wins over Ottawa Hills and Jenison.

Sophomore and two-year varsity player Regan Coxon led the Red Arrows on Tuesday night when they traveled to Ottawa Hills for their second OK White game of the season. Coxon produced 17 points for the Arrows in the 58-30 win that moves the team to 2-0 so far this season. Her performance was followed by that of senior captain Bridget Garter who netted nine. Dual sport athletes Kenzie North, Carly Hoekstra and Cassie Dean also added to the scoreboard.

The team added a non-conference win on Friday night when they welcomed former OK White foe Jenison. The Arrows produced another win over the Wildcats 26-15 at the half and 61-33 by games end with Garter taking the lead with 18 points and Coxon putting up 15.

This week the team will strive to maintain their winning season with wins over Northview who they faced on Tuesday night and Forest Hills Northern who they will battle on the road Friday.

Bridget Garter netted 27 points for the Red Arrows in competition this week.

Boys on the upswing with a pair of wins

by Kathryn Atwood
contributing reporter

After a seemingly dismal start to the season that included injuries and a losing 1-4 record; the Red Arrows boys varsity basketball team seems to be on the upswing picking up a pair of wins last week when they traveled to Ottawa Hills and welcomed Jenison.

Tuesday the team competed against new OK White rival Ottawa Hills in their second conference match up of the season picking up a 61-53 win. Seniors Austin Branagan and Matt Beachler were the night's scoring leaders racking up 23 and 16 respectively. Fellow seniors Zach Petroelje chipped in six points and Andrew Poulton two as the elder Arrows began to show their leadership on the floor and opened up opportunities for sophomore standout Robby Schneider to score five and junior Travis Cornell to add three. This is the second win the team has picked up in conference; they also trumped new rival Cedar Springs last week, making the Arrows 2-0 in the young OK White season.

Friday senior power prevailed once again with three scoring in the double digits. Beachler led the scoreboard with 20, Branagan netted 19 and Petroelje produced 11 in a 63-50 win over non-conference competitor Jenison.

Lowell took the lead early moving into the second ahead 13-6 and tied their opponent's point total at 18 before the half to maintain a 31-24 lead. Improving their margin in the third by seven and losing just a little ground in the fourth, the Arrows came out on top aided by a slew of 11 team three-pointers.

The team finished off the night by joining young Red Arrow fans in the auxiliary gym to sign autographs and take pictures as part of the program's youth night.

Matt Beachler takes a photo with a fan during the team's autograph session.

This week the Arrows, now an even 4-4 on the season, took on Northview on Tuesday and will face Forest Hills Northern on Friday looking to maintain their undefeated conference status.

Wrestlers win a trio of competitions last week

by Kathryn Atwood
contributing reporter

Lowell varsity wrestling won a trio of competitions last week in a fantastic week on the mat.

Wednesday, on the road, the team picked up their third OK White win taking on new competitor Northview. Lowell shut down the Wildcats 70-3 in the dual with wins going to George Gonzales who claimed victory by technical fall in the 189 weight class, Grant Pratt at 160 who won by fall and Jeff Leach who picked up his victory at 125 pounds. The team is now an undefeated 3-0 in conference.

Saturday the Arrows split in two with one hosting the Lowell Duals at Cherry Creek Elementary and one traveling to Fruitport for their high school's annual wrestling invitational. Team A went a perfect 3-0 against powerhouse teams to win the Lowell Duals and Team B wrestled their way to first place at the Fruitport event.

The Red Arrows faced serious competition in their opponents Temperance Bedford and state-ranked Division III

competitors Richmond and Whitehall but were dominant in their efforts. They topped Temperance 47-20, Richmond 48-16 and finished the day with a win over Whitehall. Ten Arrow wrestlers left the event with unbeaten records. On the road the B team was victorious at the Fruitport Invitational further demonstrating the Arrow's tremendous depth as they cross the half-way point of their season with the chance of a fourth consecutive state title just weeks away.

On the mat this week the team competes in an OK White dual with Forest Hills Northern on Wednesday night and will welcome area schools to the Gary Rivers Memorial Tournament on Saturday beginning at 9 am.

AUD

Max Aud left his earthly body on the morning of January 13, 2017, enveloped in the love of his family. He is survived by his wife, Barbara Brundage; his children, Heather Bollmeier Cutrell, Shane Bollmeier, Jacob Aud, Evan Aud, and Lauren Aud; his mother, Wanda Aud (nee McCray); his siblings, Kenneth Aud, Becky Aud-Jennison, and Randol Aud; as well as grandchildren, nieces, nephews, cousins, in-laws, outlaws, and dear friends. He was preceded in death by his father, Clarence Robert Aud. Max was born in Randolph County, Illinois in 1954. He lived most of his life in Southern Illinois and spent several years of his childhood in Oklahoma, where his mother was born and raised. He moved to Michigan in September 2015 to take over as the federal mediator for the Grand Rapids region. After only four months in that position, he became ill and was eventually diagnosed with brain cancer (primary CNS lymphoma), which he battled for the past year. Before coming to Michigan, Max was a federal mediator for the St. Louis, Missouri region for 16 years. He was the president and business agent for Teamsters Local 347 in West Frankfort, Illinois, for 14 years before joining the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service in St. Louis. His working life began at age 14 selling eggs door-to-door in East St. Louis, Illinois. He stood up for what was right, which got him suspended from high school in the 70s for challenging the suspension of another student who wore his hair "too long" (meaning touching the shirt collar). Max took the school to court and won. He was a community and labor organizer, rabble-rouser, seeker of justice, teacher, writer, mentor, and loving friend. His journeys through this work included sharing a podium with Buckminster Fuller, visiting with Rosa Parks at the Highlander Center in Tennessee, running a state senate campaign for a populist Southern Illinois farmer, and helping organize a penny auction during the farm crisis in the 1980s. Max brought out the best in those whose lives he touched. He was a friend to all who knew him. He was the loving heart of his family and being a father to his children was the joy of his life. He will be sadly missed, but lovingly remembered, by his family and friends. The world, and we, are so much richer for having him in our lives. Funeral services were held 11:00 am on Monday, January 16, 2017, at the Vergennes United Methodist Church, 10411 Bailey Dr. NE, Lowell. A celebration of Max's life will be held in Marissa, Illinois, in March, with details to be arranged.

MOSELER

Daniel C. Moseler, age 57, passed away unexpectedly on Wednesday, January 4, 2017. He was born in Muskegon on January 3, 1960. As a boy, Dan had a quick wit and a talent for selling things. His silver tongue steered him through each aspect of life and his unwavering confidence and loving nature touched all those who witnessed it. A true charismatic charmer, Dan had an extraordinary knack for shifting the mood of any room he walked into with his persistent sense of humor and infectious silliness. He lived in Colorado and Michigan, raising his daughters with his wife, Shannon (deceased), for a majority of that time in Lowell. Dan was a salesman at heart and had been currently employed with Sleep Doctor. Despite the challenges he faced, his life was governed with honesty, wisdom and taste. Above all, the way he felt about his daughters was abundantly clear. They were the loves of his life. Survivors include his daughters, Kaelyn and Rayne Moseler; mother, Lucille (Ned) Durgan; brothers, Douglas and David Moseler; and sister, Deborah Loyselle. WITTENBACH

Annabelle Crystal Wittenbach, of Lowell, passed away peacefully Tuesday, January 10, 2017 at Green Acres of Lowell at the age of 100 years. She was born in Grand Rapids on September 9, 1916, the daughter of Francis Clark of Whitneyville. She attended grade school at the little school in Whitneyville and at the Campau Lake School, then moved to Saranac for high school, where she graduated with the class of 1934. Upon graduation she caught a ride to Lowell and went from business to business looking for work which she found with the Theron Richmond family, living with them while looking after their children and working at their restaurant on Main Street. Next she worked as a nanny for the Attwood Brass family in East Grand Rapids. While at the restaurant she became acquainted with the Wittenbach family, farmers from Vergennes Township. She fell in love with Wilbur (Bill) Wittenbach and they were married in 1938. Then they moved to the Detroit area where Bill worked as a machinist during WWII. Two of their children were born there and their third was born later in Grand Rapids. After the war was over, Bill and Annabelle moved back home to the family farm in Vergennes where they farmed; and Bill and two of his brothers started a farm machinery, truck, and auto business in Lowell known as Wittenbach Sales and Service. Bill died in an accident in 1959 and so Annabelle went to work as a teller in the Lowell State Savings Bank to support her family. She worked at the bank for over thirty years, retiring when she was 75 years old. She never remarried and always missed her Bill. Annabelle was a devout Christian and an active member of the Lowell Methodist Church for sixty years, where she taught Sunday school and participated in several ladies groups over the years. Many in the Lowell area will remember her graciousness and her sincere concern for everyone she met, asking after their families, their health, and their general wellbeing. She had close friendship with many of her Vergennes neighbors and her large extended family of relatives. She was a wonderful mother who sacrificed for her children, working hard all of her life without complaint. Annabelle is survived by her children Larry (Pat) of Iron Mountain, Ron (Ann) of Murray Lake, Martha of San Diego; grandchildren Christine (Dan Soulier) Wittenbach, Bill Wittenbach, Kevin (Cher) Goggins, Christopher (Shannon) Goggins, Tom Mattson, John (Skyler) Mattson; great-grandchildren Margo Wittenbach, Caden, Lillie, and Jager Goggins, Ryan and Halle Goggins, Cashel, Beckett, and Ryder Mattson. Annabelle's family wishes to thank all the wonderful care givers at Green Acres who have made the last 4 years of Annabelle's life so wonderful. A funeral service will be held Friday, January 20, 11 a.m. at First United Methodist Church of Lowell, 621 E. Main St., Lowell. Rev. Brad Brillhart officiating. The family will meet friends and relatives one hour prior to service at the church. In lieu of flowers, contributions may be made to the First United Methodist Church, 621 E. Main St., Lowell, MI 49331 or the Lowell Historical Museum, 325 W. Main St., Lowell, MI 49331.

Local author Bob Tarte publishes fourth novel

by Tim McAllister
lead reporter

Best-selling, award-winning local author Bob Tarte recently had his fourth novel published, "Feather Brained: My Bumbling Quest to Become a Birder and Find a Rare Bird On My Own." Tarte's books are mostly about the hilarious, awkward interactions that take place between himself and various animals, especially birds.

"The subtitle of 'Feather Brained' tells the story: 'My Bumbling Quest to Become a Birder and Find a Rare Bird on My Own,'" Tarte said. "Like all of my books, it's mainly supposed to be funny. But I also wrote it so that people who read about how I learned to find and identify birds can say, 'Oh, so that's how you do it!' It's full of birding tips. And almost every chapter features a guest appearance by a top Michigan birder and in two cases a New York Times best selling author of a book about birds. There are also a couple of chapters about my wife, Linda, helping to raise and release orphan birds for Wildlife Rehab Center in Grand Rapids, such as Baltimore orioles and northern flicker woodpeckers."

Tarte lives directly on M-21 in Lowell with property along the Grand River. Tarte said that the Lowell area is an excellent place to look for rare, interesting birds.

"[Much] of the birding in 'Feather Brained' takes place in the woods along the Grand River behind our house," Tarte said. "There are also birding adventures in the cemetery on Washington St., on the river trail behind the dam in downtown Lowell and at Wittenbach Wege Center across the street from Lowell High School. A surprising number of birds lose their way during migration and end up in Michigan thousands of miles away from where they should be. A few years ago a woman in Lowell hosted a rare rufous hummingbird in her yard for several days and we had an unusual warbler at our feeder one winter. My favorite places to bird in the area are Wittenbach Wege Center, Ionia State Recreation Area, Roselle Park in Ada and Coldwater River Preserve near Freepport. Most of these places have been visited recently by rare birds, especially Roselle Park."

His house used to be screaming with dozens of pets. Now Tarte and his wife are down to 14 animals.

"We are way, way down from a high number of 53 some years ago," Tarte said. "We're a little less crazy now. We currently have Local author Bob Tarte looking for birds at Tawas Point State Park last summer. Tarte's latest book, "Feather Brained: My Bumbling Quest to Become a Birder and Find a Rare Bird On My Own," was recently published by the University of Michigan Press.

two parrots, two doves, a parakeet, and two cats inside the house, plus two geese and five ducks outdoors."

Tarte has written three previous books; "Fowl Weather," "Kitty Cornered" and "Enslaved By Ducks," which was nearly made into a movie.

"Actress Patricia Heaton took out an option on my first book, 'Enslaved by Ducks,' and wanted to make [a film of] it via her production company, Four Boys Films," Tarte said. "But after the big financial mess of 2008, she couldn't get financing. And Tony Shaloub, who was supposed to play me in the movie, got involved in another project. So it fell through."

Although "Feather Brained" just came out, it has already won one major publishing award.

"I won a Michigan Notable Books Award for 2017," Tarte said. "The award goes to 20 authors of books published in 2016 that are written by a Michigan author or have Michigan as a subject."

He is working on yet another book and he also co-hosts a podcast on the website PetLifeRadio.com.

"I'm just finishing my first nonfiction book, a novel called 'The Happy Mid-Morning Music Show Meets Alfie, the Psychic Coyote,'" Tarte said. "It takes place in northern Michigan in 1961 and is about a radio DJ named Skip who has a strange encounter with a coyote that changes his life. It's lots of fun. I need to post three or four birding podcasts that I recorded last year with Bill Holm, who 'co-stars' with me in 'Feather Brained' as a guy who loves birds but doesn't care much for birders. Bill is a real character and he's been in all of my books. You'll find my podcasts at PetLifeRadio.com. The show title is 'What Were You Thinking?'"

Tarte's books are available for purchase at most major retailers and online.

"Schuler Books and Barnes & Noble should have 'Feather Brained' and my other three books, plus scads of places online," Tarte said. "Visit my website BobTarte.com, and also look me up on Facebook."

Tarte's latest book cover "Feather Brained."
